ALCOCK AND BROWN FLY ACROSS ATLANTIC; MAKE 1,980 MILES IN 16 HOURS, 12 MINUTES; SOMETIMES UPSIDE DOWN IN DENSE, ICY FOG

OUR TROOPS CROSS BORDER TO STOP JUAREZ FIGHTING

Infantry, Cavalry, and Artillery Enter Mexico and Are Rounding Up Villistas.

General Erwin States That He Purposes Only to Protect City and Plans No Intervention.

SHOTS HIT AMERICANS

One Killed, Several Wounded, When Villa Renewed Attack on Juarez.

EL PASO, Texas, Monday, June 16.—The 24th Infantry, Fourth Battalion, crossed the international border at Juarez at 11 o'clock last night.

The 5th and 7th Cavalry Regiments crossed at three fords east of El Paso.

A battalion of the 82d Artillery crossed east of the stock yard.

There were approximately 3,600 American troops on Mexican soil ten minutes after they were ordered to make the crossing.

Colonel Selah R. H. Tompkins of the 7th Cavalry was in command of the [illegible] brigade which crossed at the ford and Colonel Hadsell was in command of the infantry. Two armored motor cars crossed the international bridge at 10:55.

The first shrapnel shot from United States Army guns was fired over Juarez at 12:30 in the morning in the direction of the Juarez race track to dislodge Villistas. A second shot followed in five minutes, which struck near the race track, followed at two-minute intervals from two guns placed near the international bridge on the Mexican side.

Following a signal rocket, the American cavalry near San Lorenzo started an enveloping movement to the east and southeast of Juarez to surround the rebels, then in the vicinity of the race track. It was not known whether Villa was with his men or not.

A second green signal rocket indicated that the cavalry were advancing at a charge.

Heavy firing by the American artillery is going on.

Following the killing of one artilleryman of the 82d Artillery and the serious wounding of another by Mexican snipers General Erwin ordered twenty-five expert riflemen to that point to return the snipers' fire. The shots which killed the artilleryman were fired before American artillery began the bombardment of the race track.

The reason given at military headquarters for ordering the troops to cross was "to prevent firing from the Mexican side on El Paso."

Brig.-Gen. James G. Erwin told the Associated Press immediately after issuing the order for the crossing that it was not to be an invasion of Mexico, that the situation was fully understood by General Francisco Gonzales and the Carranza officials and that no resistance was anticipated from the Carranza forces which have been fighting in Juarez. No strong resistance was expected from the Villa forces, General Erwin added.

A statement issued by General Erwin reads:

"Upon the affidavits of three reputable citizens of El Paso that the Villistas fired into El Paso and upon the investigation of the wounding of the Mexican girl (in El Paso) showing she was wounded by a shot fired by Villistas and upon investigation by the district inspector of these headquarters and two officers of the police force of El Paso, I was shown that shots, undoubtedly coming from the direction of the Villista forces, had been fired into El Paso.

"Further, because of the wounding of several innocent and law abiding persons residing in El Paso and the wounding of two United States soldiers, who, in the discharge of their duty, all of these on June 14 and 15 therefore, under the authority given me in telegrams from the headquarters of the Southern Department, June 12, 1918, I ordered troops of my command to cross the border and disperse the Villistas. But, upon no account, were they to undertake an invasion into Mexico.

"As soon as I have accomplished this and have assured the safety of the citizens of El Paso, then the troops of my command will be withdrawn to the American side of the border."

Earlier in the day General Erwin had ordered the port closed and the international bridges taken over by the military, after Corporal Edward Reilly, Motor Transport Company, and

President Wilson to Sail for Home About June 24

PARIS, June 15.—President Wilson probably will remain in Paris only three or four days after his return from Belgium next Friday. He will then embark at a French port for the United States.

President Wilson expects to visit Belgium Wednesday or Thursday, accompanied by Mrs. Wilson and Rear Admiral Grayson. They will leave Paris Tuesday night by special train, returning to Paris Friday morning.

Elaborate plans for the entertainment of President Wilson and his party in Brussels have been made by King Albert and Queen Elizabeth.

GERMANS OBJECTED STRONGLY TO TERMS

Reply to Allies Showed They Thought Themselves Equal Negotiators.

PROTESTS AVAILED LITTLE

Final Answer from Council Gives Relief on Only a Few Points.

PARIS, June 15.—The memorandum of the German peace plenipotentiaries, which is now made public, shows that the Germans attempted to pose as negotiators with equal rights in the Peace Conference, instead of as defeated foes, come to learn the character of the punishment they should undergo.

Read in light of the knowledge of the modifications in the treaty made by the Council of the great Powers, its complaint and argument regarding many of the severest features of the treaty failed to move the allied statesmen. Yet the German representations were successful in some important particulars.

The German plenipotentiaries laid great stress on President Wilson's Fourteen Points, but sought to persuade the allied peacemakers that these were intended in every instance to apply to the treatment of Germany in making peace instead of being intended to have application mainly to the smaller nations which Germany had conquered or sought to conquer.

In this connection the German delegates advanced the contention that the treaty was inconsistent with the President's declaration that the Allies were making war on the German people, entirely overlooking that in imposing punishment on the German Government its subjects were obliged to bear their share of the burden in expiation of the wrongs they had approved.

Naive contentions of this sort appear throughout the voluminous document. Sequestration of German territory, such as the Sarre Basin, and the cession of German territory to France and the smaller nationalities cause the German plenipotentiaries to indulge in disquisitions on how wrong it is for the Allies not to live up to their assertion of the rights of peoples to self-determination.

In the response now being completed to the German complaints and counter-proposals the Council of the Great Powers adopts a moderated tone which is apparently intended to give a light coating of sweetness to the nasty dose they told Germany to swallow. Of the many German contentions, designed to prove the great wrong being committed, the allied peace answer will reject practically all except that concerning Upper Silesia, which is to have a plebiscite to determine whether it shall go to Poland, as the draft of the treaty stipulates, or remain under German control.

This part of the German memorandum makes interesting reading, if for no other reason than in showing the character of the argument advanced to prove that non-German peoples who are released from German citizenship through territorial transfers really would be happier if they remained German subjects.

The German contentions for more lenient terms with respect to payment of reparation are to be treated in the allied response in a manner somewhat conciliatory. The proposal in the enemy memorandum that the total reparation be fixed at a hundred billion marks without interest and to include the cost of material delivered during the armistice is rejected by the Allies who, however, agree to have the Allied Reparations Commission fix the amount of reparation within a few months instead of taking advantage of the period of two years for so doing as provided in the treaty.

The German memorandum also proposed that a German commission work in PARIS, June 15.—Speculative comment as to whether the German Government will accept the allied peace conditions appears to have little value in the face of the belief of President Wilson and others who have the advantage of obtaining reports from intelligence agents in Germany that the enemy plenipotentiaries will be instructed to sign the treaty.

The statements coming from various places in Germany that officials have begun to remove supplies and documents to points remote from the western frontier do not have with the President and others who are well informed the effect which the German authors evidently intended them to have.

It would not be surprising, if one may judge from information received by the allied chiefs, if the Scheidemann Cabinet resigned when called upon to say, as it will be this week, whether the German Government will accept the peace conditions. That a new ministry would be speedily formed, probably with Erzberger at its head, is the belief in the best informed circles in Paris.

No doubt is felt that the new Ministry would respond to the apparently widespread demand among the German people that peace—even the most severe sort of peace dictated by the victorious Allies—be brought about without delay.

The Allied Governments, however, are taking no chances. They have completed practically all their preparations for meeting possible eventualities. Purely military measures and plans for renewing the blockade have been made.

One matter under consideration is the best means of taking care of the Allied ships now in German ports, including the ships which carried food for the German population. Should Germany determine to resist, these ships could all be seized by the German authorities. Most of them are in strongly fortified ports.

The actual state of war will be revived automatically on the expiration of the armistice, which becomes inoperative at the end of the five-day period allowed the German Government to determine whether it will accept the peace conditions. If Germany accepts, as is generally believed, the armistice will be re-

Northcliffe, Congratulating Capt. Alcock, Says That Airplane is Faster Than Cables

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, June 15.—Lord Northcliffe has sent the following letter to Captain Alcock:

"My Dear Alcock—A very hearty welcome to the pioneer of direct Atlantic flight. Your journey with your brave companion, Whitton Brown, is a typical exhibition of British courage and organizing efficiency.

"Just as in 1913 when I offered the prize, I felt that it would soon be won, so do I surely believe your wonderful journey is the warning to the cable monopolists and others to realize that within the next few years we shall be less dependent upon them unless they increase their wires and speed up. Your voyage was made more quickly than the average press message of 1919.

"Moreover, I look forward with certainty to the time when London morning newspapers will be selling in New York in the evening, allowing for the difference between British and American time, and vice versa in regard to New York evening journals reaching London the next day.

"Then we shall no longer suffer from the danger of garbled quotations due to telegraphic compression. Then, too, the American and British peoples will understand each other better as they are brought into closer daily touch.

"Illness prevents me shaking you by the hand and personally presenting the prize, but I can assure you that your welcome will be equal to that of Hawker and his gallant American compeer, Read, whose great accomplishment has given us such valuable data for future Atlantic work.

"I rejoice at the good augury that you departed from and arrived at those two portions of the British Commonwealth, the happy and prosperous Dominion of Newfoundland and the future equally happy and prosperous Dominion of Ireland.

"Yours sincerely, "NORTHCLIFFE."

Labor Fails to Move Congress to Repeal of War-Time Dry Law

Lawmakers Are Unresponsive to Big "Wet" Demonstration and Inclined to Put Responsibility Up to President—Enforcement Act Unlikely Before July 1.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Republican leaders remain unimpressed by the protest of labor yesterday against the enforcement of wartime prohibition, and no action will be taken by Congress looking to the repeal of prohibition, which becomes operative July 1. This opinion was expressed tonight by a member of the House Steering Committee, who, while opposed to prohibition, said the responsibility for lifting the ban rests with the President and that no action to carry out the President's recommendation for lifting the ban on beer and light wines will be taken by the House.

Judged by informal canvasses made by Anti-Saloon League leaders, any move to break down wartime prohibition, even as to light wines and beer, would not succeed in Congress. War-time prohibition passed by a good majority, and national prohibition passed the House by the necessary two-thirds vote. Men who voted for both measures say they would place themselves in an inconsistent position before their constituents if they should support a resolution to repeal the wartime prohibition law, even though the act was passed solely as a food conservation measure.

The position of most members of Congress is that the nation must go on a dry basis early in January through the operation of the National Prohibition Amendment, and that there is no compelling reason why the conservation law should be repealed to permit the "wets" another six months of freedom. The only thing which is influencing some members to look upon repeal with favor is the cutting off of returns from internal revenue six months earlier than had been estimated by the fiscal agents. They admit it would be wise for the Government to have this money now when direct taxes are so heavy and the present returns from the revenue law are insufficient.

Politics is involved in the attitude of the Republican leaders. They do not want to put themselves in a position of bowing to the demands of labor in catering to the liberal sentiment. They say the Democratic Administration insisted upon wartime prohibition, and the South forced through the national amendment, and it would be dangerous for the Republican Party to go against an apparent sentiment for a dry nation.

Furthermore, Republican members of the House Judiciary Committee have received an opinion from a lawyer of national repute that the President has power to repeal the wartime prohibition proclamation and that no act of Congress is necessary.

It seems now that there will be no legislation to enforce wartime prohibition, as less than two weeks remain before July 1. Indications are that the House Judiciary Committee in the next week will report a bill to enforce wartime prohibition and the national amendment, but with both branches of Congress busy considering supply measures which must be passed by July 1, there is not much chance the enforcement bills will be passed. The Department of Justice can enforce the wartime prohibition law without additional legislation, but will be hampered by lack of funds and special agents.

ZURICH REDS RIOT; 2 DEAD, 17 HURT

Prefecture Stormed and Its Archives Burned by a Mob.

POLICEMAN MORTALLY HURT

Mob Returns Fire of the Guards —Rumor of Leader's Arrest Started the Rioting.

PARIS, June 14.—Serious anarchist and Bolshevist disorders broke out in Zurich, Switzerland, last night at 8 o'clock. Firing was still going on at 9 o'clock, according to a dispatch received from Geneva.

Reports received this morning state that the local workmen's union of Zurich, which has some extremist members, was holding a meeting in memory of Rosa Luxemburg, the German radical leader, who was killed following her arrest in Berlin early in the year, when the news was circulated that the Secretary of the union, Conrad Wyss, had been arrested on Wednesday.

A furious crowd marched upon the Prefecture, stoned the windows, broke down solid doors, and, after a half hour of battering, looted the Hall of Justice and burned the archives in the principal corridor of the building.

One of the guards fired on the crowd, his shots being answered. A number of casualties are reported, but details are lacking, as telephone and telegraph lines appear to have been tampered with.

There are large foreign colonies of anarchists, Bolshevikl, and revolutionaries in Zurich.

BERNE, June 14.—The casualties in the disturbance at Zurich are given officially as two persons killed and seventeen wounded. One policeman was mortally hurt.

Among the rioters were many German anarchists and communists.

LAND AT CLIFDEN, IRELAND, IN A BOG

Airmen Moving at an 120-Mile Speed Were Unable to See Sun, Moon, or Stars for Hours Owing to Fog.

THEY LOOPED THE LOOP UNINTENTIONALLY AT TIMES

Fliers, Temporarily Dazed and Deafened by Landing—Alcock Expects to Continue Journey to England—London Unprepared for Quick Flight.

Captain Alcock's Own Narrative Of His Flight From Newfoundland to Ireland

By Captain J. Alcock, D. S. C.
(By Courtesy of The London Daily Mail.)

LONDON, June 15, (By telegraph from Clifden, Ireland.)—We have had a terrible journey. The wonder is that we are here at all. We scarcely saw the sun or the moon or the stars. For hours we saw none of them.

The fog was very dense and at times we had to descend to within 300 feet of the sea. For four hours the machine was covered in a sheet of ice, caused by frozen sleet. At another time the fog was so dense that my speed indicator did not work, and for a few seconds it was very alarming.

We looped the loop, I do believe, and did a very steep spiral. We did some very comic stunts, for I had no sense of the horizon.

Winds were favorable all the way, northwest, and at times southwest. We said in Newfoundland we would do the trip in sixteen hours, but we never thought we should. An hour and a half before we saw land we had no certain idea where we were, but we believed we were at Galway or thereabouts.

Our delight in seeing Eastal Island and Turbot Island, five miles west of Clifden, was great. People did not know who we were when we landed and thought we were scouts on the lookout for the Vimy.

We encountered no unforeseen conditions. We did not suffer from cold or exhaustion, except when looking over the side. Then the sleet chewed bits out of our faces. We drank coffee and ale and ate sandwiches and chocolate.

The flight has shown that the Atlantic flight is practicable. It should be done not with an aeroplane or a seaplane but with a flying boat.

We had plenty of reserve fuel, using only two-thirds of our supply. The only thing that upset me was to see the machine at the end get damaged. From above, the bog looked like a lovely field, but the machine sank into it up to the axle and fell over on to her nose.

[Alcock's message to the Daily Mail, by whose courtesy the NEW YORK TIMES is enabled to print it, did not reach London until after 10 o'clock to-night, although filed in Ireland shortly after 5 o'clock in the afternoon.]

LONDON, June 15, (Associated Press.)—The final goal of all the ambitions which flying men have held since the Wright brothers first rose from the earth in a heavier than air machine was realized this morning when the young British officer, Captain John Alcock, and his American navigator, Lieutenant Arthur W. Brown, landed on the Irish coast after the first non-stop flight across the Atlantic Ocean.

Their voyage was without accident and without unforeseen incident, so far as can be learned. It was a straightaway, cleancut flight, achieved in 16 hours and 12 minutes, from Newfoundland to Clifden, Ireland, a distance of more than 1,900 miles.

The report of Alcock and Brown to the Aero Club was as follows:

Landed at Clifden at 8:40 A. M., Greenwich mean time, 15th of June, Vickers-Vimy Atlantic machine leaving Newfoundland coast at 4:28 P. M. Greenwich mean time, 14th of June. Total time, 16 hours 12 minutes.
ALCOCK AND BROWN.

But the brief and modest description which comes from the airmen at Clifden tells of an adventurous and amazingly hazardous enterprise. Fog and mists hung over the North Atlantic and the Vickers-Vimy biplane climbed and dived, struggling to extricate herself from the folds of the airplane's worst enemies. She rose to 11,000 feet and swooped down almost to the surface of the sea, and at times the two voyagers found themselves flying upside down, only ten feet above the water.

Mists robbed the night of the advantage of the full moon and the wireless apparatus was torn away by the wind soon after the start. So the two young pioneers of the Atlantic flight without a stop were thrown upon their own resources. The skilful navigation which brought the machine near to the centre of the Irish coast line was one of the finest features of the flight.

Before coming to earth near the Clifden wireless station Alcock circled the wireless aerials, seeking the best spot to reach the earth, but no suitable ground was found, so he chanced it in a bog.

The wireless staff rushed to the aid of the aviators. They found Brown dazed and Alcock temporarily deafened by the force of the impact. As soon as they were able to be escorted to the wireless station they telegraphed the news to their friends, then had breakfast.

"That is the best way to cross the Atlantic," said Lieutenant Brown after he had eaten.

Wireless Out of Action.

The Daily Mail's correspondent found Alcock and Brown at Clifden, packing their gear into a huge sack. Alcock's face lit up with a

King Sends Congratulations to Victors in First Non-Stop Ocean Flight

when he was congratulated by the correspondent. Brown, who was bending over his packing, said quietly:

"We didn't do so badly, did we?"

Alcock said with a laugh: "I am not at all tired." Brown, however, confessed, "I am a bit fagged out."

The correspondent says that Brown's eyes were slightly bloodshot, but otherwise the men looked as if they had not traveled across the ocean.

When the officers, operators, and soldiers from the wireless plant rushed toward the machine after it landed, Alcock said:

"This is the Vickers-Vimy machine. We have just come from Newfoundland."

The little crowd gasped and then cheered and cheered again. Alcock, in telling his story, said, among other things:

"We landed in the softest spot in Ireland, but I really wonder that we got there with our wireless out of action. Neither of us got much fun out of the flight. It was a job of work."

Brown said: "We are too near it to realize what it is we have done."

Brown was able to take only four readings of the airplane's position, one from the sun, one from the moon, one from the pole star, and one from the star Vega.

Captain Alcock explained the silence of his radio instrument during the trip by saying that the wireless propeller blew off soon after the airplane left Newfoundland.

"We were much jammed by strong wireless signals not intended for us," he added.

King George learned of the success of the flight of Alcock and Brown as he was leaving church at Westminster today. He immediately telegraphed his congratulations to the airmen. Many high officials also sent them messages and greetings. Major Gen. Sykes, Chief of the Air Staff, on behalf of King George, wired Alcock and Brown as follows:

"It is with pleasure that I have to convey to you the following message I have received from the King:

The King is delighted to receive the welcome announcement that Captain Alcock and Lieutenant Brown have landed safely in Ireland after a transatlantic flight.

His majesty wishes you to communicate at once with these officers and to convey to them the King's warmest congratulations on the success of their splendid achievement.

"The telegram to Major Gen. Sykes was signed by Baron Stamfordham, private secretary to King George."

General Seely, Under Secretary for the Air Department, sent the following dispatch to the fliers:

"Warmest congratulations on your wonderful achievement in accomplishing the first direct flight across the Atlantic. It is a splendid feat."

Word came from Clifden this afternoon that the pilot and the navigator of the biplane were leaving for Galway, whence Lieutenant Brown planned to travel by train to London, arriving there on Tuesday morning. Captain Alcock, however, hoped to be able to fly to London in the machine which made the record flight as soon as it could be repaired.

The Aero Club received a message from Clifden not long after the transatlantic fliers landed, signed by them, which merely stated that they had completed the flight in 16 hours and 12 minutes. They requested instructions from the club.

In reply the club telegraphed Captain Alcock:

"Keep machine intact until observer arrives."

The Air Ministry stated that certain marks were put on the airplane at Newfoundland which must be officially identified by a member of the Royal Air Force before the flight is declared to have been officially completed. It was said at the Ministry that it was probable one of its officials would leave Dublin in an airplane to relieve Alcock and Brown. It was hardly believed there that the machine could be repaired before several days had passed and it was thought both the aviators would proceed to England by train.

Quick Success Surprises London.

Plans for receiving Alcock and Brown are being hurriedly formulated by the Aero Club and the Air Ministry. It had not been believed that the aviators would be able to leave Newfoundland for another week. Their start was a complete surprise, and their quick success found the officials unprepared to welcome them.

Entries for the Aerial Derby were supposed to close today, but they will be held open in the hope of inducing Alcock to compete. The Derby comprises competition flights around London.

Manchester, Alcock's home town, desires to have the honor of first welcoming the aviator, but the Air Ministry officials said today that it was likely he would come to London before going to Manchester. It was added that at any rate two generous receptions awaited Alcock and Brown.

Although intensely interested in the flight, Londoners apparently were not as enthusiastic as during Hawker's attempt to span the ocean. The people also seemed to remember when the news of the success of the trip reached London the erroneous reports first given out that Hawker had been sighted near Ireland. The question, "Is it true?" was heard on many sides.

London has only one Sunday afternoon newspaper and most of the people first learned of the success of the flight of Alcock and Brown from it while walking in the parks or coming out of the churches. They received the intelligence with the customary British decorum. There was no cheering or gathering of crowds.

Naturally, there was great satisfaction over the fact that a British flier had accomplished what the Air Ministry and airmen generally believe will live in history as one of the greatest and most courageous feats of individuals of the air force.

Few workmen were on duty at the Vickers plant, where Alcock's plane was constructed, but those there cheered the news. The manager of the plant said the company always had had great confidence in Alcock.

"We always thought a lot of him here at the works," said the manager. "He was very popular, and the enthusiastic way he worked in preparing his machine inspired us all. We do not know Brown so well, but Alcock does know him, and he had every confidence in him."

Rousing Reception Awaits Airmen.

The people of London are proud of the adventure of Alcock and Brown and they think that if the dirigible R-34 succeeds in crossing the Atlantic from East to West Great Britain will be entitled to claim mastery of the air.

Alcock and Brown are assured a reception equaling that given Hawker and Grieve when they arrived in London. But it probably will be more formal and less exuberant.

"Jack" Alcock is well known at Brooklands, which is the flying centre outside London. He has been an instructor and passenger carrier there since 1912, which is a considerable career for an airman.

Alcock is described by his friends as of reticent personality. He is a thorough mechanic. His chief adventure in aviation previously was two years' captivity with the Turks. While serving as a naval air volunteer officer the failure of his engine while on a bombing expedition compelled him to descend inside the enemy's lines.

The first step taken by the Air Ministry and the Vickers Company after Alcock and Brown landed was to send a telegram to Clifden to safeguard the airplane from souvenir fiends.

Western Ireland on Sunday is almost dead. The train services are suspended and the telegraph offices closed. Hence, detailed news of the flight was meagre throughout the day in London.

Fiancee of Brown Never Doubted Success.

"Magnificent. I never doubted your success." This was the congratulatory message sent Lieutenant Arthur W. Brown by his fiancée, Miss Kennedy, at whose home there were great rejoicings when the news arrived that the flight of Captain Alcock and Lieutenant Brown had been successful, says The Daily Mail.

"The house was immediately decorated with flags, and throughout the day the telephone brought congratulations, the newspaper adds.

"The suspense of waiting for the news was terrible," Miss Kennedy is quoted as having said to an interviewer. "I will sleep sounder tonight. A message from The Daily Mail Saturday evening told us that the flight had begun.

"I did not expect to hear anything further before noon Sunday at the earliest, and when I learned of the safe arrival of the plane during the forenoon I was almost beside myself with joy."

The marriage of Lieutenant Brown and Miss Kennedy was originally fixed for April, but when Brown understood that he was to pilot Alcock's machine the wedding was postponed until after the attempt had been made.

The wedding will not be delayed. Brown and Miss Kennedy worked together in the Aircraft Department of the Ministry of Munitions during the war and became acquainted. They became engaged in October.

For men who had undergone the incredible strain of nearly sixteen hours at top speed without landmarks or wireless guidance and who were forced to make a landing on, to them, an uncharted coast, it was doubly a game of chance. The Marconi plant at Clifden furnished a recognizable goal. They groped about it, took their chances at alighting and came off with smaller damage than Bleriot when he descended outside of Dover Castle from his then memorable feat of crossing the English Channel.

How swiftly the history of the air has marched is illustrated by the fact that today's milestone excited scarcely more amazement in England than the Frenchman's adventure.

Yesterday the names of Alcock and Brown would have been practically unrecognized by the British public to whom Hawker and Grieve were almost better known than their Generals and Admirals. The Vimy's undertaking had been comparatively little advertised; nor had it the appealing features of suspense and human sympathy which the fate of Hawker and Grieve commanded. Most of the Sunday morning papers gave greater prominence to the divorce suits of society announced Saturday than to the start of the Vickers-Vimy machine from Newfoundland.

Captain Alcock's mother, who lives in London, when told of his start last night, said:

"I am so glad. I have every confidence in his ability to come through successfully."

Interview With Captain Alcock.

(By Courtesy of The London Daily Mail.)

CLIFDEN, June 15.—Captain Alcock, describing the flight to me, said:

"At Signal Hill, Newfoundland, Lieutenant Brown set our course for the ocean on 124 degrees of the compass. We kept that course until well on in the night. I had the engine throttled down nicely and I let her do her own climbing.

"At dark we were about 4,000 feet up. We found it very cloudy and misty. We were between layers of cloud and could see neither the sea nor the sky. After the first hour we had got into these clouds, one lot 2,000 feet up, and the other 6,000 feet. It was impossible to see the sea to get our bearings.

"Drift clouds above obscured the sun and when the night came we could see neither stars nor moon, so we flew on our original course until we struck a patch about 3 A. M. We saw a few stars."

"I got a cut on Polaris (the Pole Star) and Vega," said Lieutenant Brown, interrupting. "I got my position then, and found I was about 2 degrees south."

Continuing, Captain Alcock said:

"Brown gave me a new course of 110 degrees compass points, and we went on steadily until the weather started to get very thick again. About 4 A. M. or 5 A. M. we could see nothing. The bank of fog was extremely thick, and we began to have a very rough time.

"The air speed indicator jammed. It stood at 90, and I knew not exactly what I was doing. It jammed through the sleet freezing in it, and it smelt smoky.

"We did some comic stunts then. I believe we looped the loop and by accident we did a deep spiral. It was very alarming. We had no sense of the horizon. We came down quickly from 4,000 feet, until we saw water very clearly. That gave me my horizon again and I was all right. That period only lasted a few seconds, but it seemed ages.

Tried to Climb Over Fog Banks.

"It came to an end when we were within fifty feet of the water, with the machine practically on its back.

"The air speed indicator again began to work as a result of the swift dive.

"We climbed after that and got on fairly well until we got to 6,000 feet, and the fog was there again. I climbed twice on top of it, only to find banks of clouds. We went higher and saw the moon and one or two stars. We 'carried on' until dark.

"We never saw the sun rise. There was a bank of fog also on top of the lower cloud. We climbed up to 11,000 feet. It was hailing and snowing. The machine was covered with ice. That was about 6 o'clock in the morning, and it remained like that until the hour before we landed.

"My radiator shutter and water temperature indicator were covered with ice for four or five hours. Lieutenant Brown had continually climbed up to chip off the ice with a knife.

"The speed indicator was full of frozen particles and gave trouble again. They came out when we got lower an hour before we landed. We came down and flew over the sea at 800 feet. It was still cloudy, but we could see the sun as it tried to break through.

"It was a terrible trip. We never saw a boat, and we got no wireless messages at all. We flew along the water and we had doubts as to our position, although we believed we were 'there or thereabouts.' We looked out for land expecting to find it any time.

"We saw land about 9:15 A. M. when we suddenly discovered the coast. It was great to do that. We saw two little islands, which must have been East-Sal and Turbot islands. We came along and got to Ardbear Bay, an inlet of Clifden Bay, and when we saw the wireless mast we knew where we were exactly.

"When still over Clifden village I saw after a few minutes what I took to be a nice field—a lovely meadow. We came down and made a perfect landing, but it was a bog. The wheels sank axle deep in the field. The Vimy toppled over on her nose.

"The lower plane is badly damaged and broken and both propellers are deeply sunk in the bog, but I think they are not broken. The engines are all right.

Capt. Alcock said that it had been a very trying journey, with bad visibility, fog, and rain. He heard no wireless messages on the route owing to the constant jamming of signals not intended for him.

On landing Brown said to Alcock:

"What do you think of that for fancy navigating?"

"Very good," was the reply, and they shook hands.

Alcock Praises Americans.

GALWAY, Ireland, June 15, (Associated Press.)—The correspondent endeavored to get Alcock to describe the impressions he had during the flight while the aviator was at Clifton today.

"It is difficult to sum them up," said Alcock. "It is curious to be able to say that I had no sense of remoteness. I have done considerable night flying, and any sense of loneliness has worn off long ago. I do not think that either of us had any thought of what we were flying over, being merely intent on getting across.

"We wanted to get the job done, and I can tell you that we were jolly well pleased when we saw the coast."

The correspondent asked Alcock whether he regarded his flight as having beaten that of the American seaplane NC-4. To this Alcock replied:

"I could not say anything but what is good of the Americans. I have been treated very kindly by the Americans since I have been over there."

"I believe the great secret of long distance flying under such conditions as we experienced is to nurse your engine. I never opened the throttle once. The machine itself has a speed of ninety miles an hour, but, without opening the throttle and with a following wind, we averaged 120."

Emphasizing the bodily comfort of the passage, Captain Alcock said:

"I wore electrically heated clothes as an experiment, but the machine itself was so snug that it was unnecessary to switch on the current."

Both aviators arrived in Galway this evening and will stay all night. They will leave on a train departing from Galway at 2:25 tomorrow afternoon for London.

A gang of mechanics left Oranmore aerodrome this afternoon to repair the airplane. A large number of people have been to Clifden, but as it was impossible to pass the military sentries hundreds were disappointed. Some adventurous ones waded through the bog to get near the airplane and, notwithstanding the guards, claim to have obtained bits of the wings as souvenirs. These were displayed here tonight.

Estimated Speed, 120 Miles an Hour.

LONDON, June 15.—The news of the first single-flight crossing of the Atlantic by the Vickers-Vimy plane reached London at noon in an agency dispatch from Clifden, speedily confirmed by the Air Ministry.

The report circulated rapidly, despite the fact that the sunbaked Metropolitan streets were almost empty.

British gratification runs high and it is hoped that Alcock and Brown will be able to continue their flight to England and circle over London before descending at Brooklands, so as to give the citizens a chance of seeing the machine.

The exact details of the damage suffered by the machine in landing are not yet known here, but the report that she buried the nose of her fuselage in the ground is not regarded as indicating a serious mishap. Nevertheless it is not expected that the Atlantic fliers will be able to continue their flight today, and the Vickers Company this afternoon is sending to Ireland a staff of expert mechanics.

The actual time of the flight, 16 hours, 12 minutes, was something of a surprise and is taken to indicate that the Vimy machine was helped by a favoring wind.

At the headquarters of the Vickers aviation department it was learned that there was no reason to suppose that the Vimy was seriously damaged.

"What happened," said the superintendent, "was that they made a landing in what looked like a perfectly good field, but which turned out to be a bog, so the fuselage was buried in the mud. I have seen accidents like this before, and it is not likely that there's much harm done."

"Were they near the end of their petrol?" he was asked.

"No; they had quite enough to come on to England," he replied, "but they had done their job and had had a bit of a rough time, and so decided to come down. It was in no way a forced landing. Mechanics ought to be able to reach the machine in a few hours and are taking some spare parts with them. It ought not to take long to fix the machine up, and then Alcock and Brown will fly here, I hope over London, but we can't tell yet exactly how long repairs will take."

Asked about the speed of the crossing, the superintendent said the passage in 16 hours 12 minutes worked out at 120 miles an hour and that this was a record for such a long flight, itself another record. It was all a matter of wind, and Alcock and Brown had done so well because the wind was behind them.

This speed record was unlikely to be lowered for some considerable time to come, and only with equally favorable wind conditions. The fact that a speed of 120 miles an hour was maintained for sixteen hours indicated that both engines continued working throughout the trip.

Private advices from Clifden indicate that the aviators were pretty well done in when they landed. Brown, particularly, had been suffering from air sickness, which, nevertheless, had not prevented his hitting the bullseye, in other words, striking Galway, on the very middle of the west coast of Ireland, which was the target he set for himself.

A British expert writes that the outstanding point about the Vimy's feat is the amazing rapidity of her passage, her average speed working out as just under 120 miles an hour, though this makes no allowance for any deviations from a straight line course. The actual flying speed, he estimates, will therefore have been somewhat higher.

Evidently the wind was favorable all the way. But whatever the weather, he considers this great flight is a triumph of navigation as well as of the reliability and efficiency of the British airplane and the British aircraft engine.

It is easily a record in overseas flying, he asserts, so far as heavier than air machines are concerned, and it is safe to say that for distance and time it will stand as a record for a considerable time. Without in any way seeking to belittle the performances of the American NC-4, he says, one is bound to point out that that of the Vimy is simply in a different class and shows in a far more striking manner the possibilities of aviation and the extent to which design has been developed.

Altogether, he concludes, apart from the prize, is the flight a real milestone in aeronautical progress. At the same time, the trans-Atlantic flight is still a tour de force, as it will possibly be a very long time before we can hope to see an America-to-Ireland service established with a craft either heavier or lighter than air.

Wonderful Flight, Says Hawker.

LONDON, June 15.—Harry Hawker, in discussing with THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent the Vimy-Vickers success, said:

"It seems to me a very, very fine performance indeed, and I heartily congratulate Alcock and Brown. The time taken, 16 hours, was very quick indeed. That shows they evidently met better weather conditions than Grieve and I did, but under the best possible conditions such a flight was very wonderful.

"I note their wireless failed them as ours did. It seems to me there must be something to learn about that yet."

"It is a splendid feat, a straightforward and decisive triumph which in point of speed has made the Atlantic look very narrow," said Thomas Sopwith. "I am very much struck by the accuracy of the navigation."

LONDON, June 15, (Associated Press.)—Harry G. Hawker is credited by the Central News as saying with regard to Captain Alcock's achievement:

"It was a magnificent and very fine feat. I am very glad Captain Alcock was able to make the flight in real fashion without warships and all that sort of thing. It is very gratifying from that point indeed."

Congratulatory messages have been sent to Alcock and Brown by King George, General Seely, General Trenchard, and General Sykes. Major Kennedy, father of Miss Kennedy, whose marriage to Brown was postponed till after the flight, said his daughter was "very delighted, almost overwhelmed."

The Aero Club is preparing an official welcome for the aviators on their arrival in London, where Brown, who is coming by train, expects to arrive Tuesday morning.

Despite the expectation that Alcock will fly to London and Brooklands in the Vimy, a wireless message from Clifden says the Vimy machine is sinking in the bog in which she landed.

CAPITAL REJOICES AT VIMY TRIUMPH

"Isn't That Great!" Says Daniels When Informed of Alcock's Arrival in Ireland.

EXPECTS GREAT ADVANCES

Gen. Menoher Declares It a Big Achievement and Will Cable Army's Congratulations.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Official Washington today rejoiced over the news from London of the success achieved by Captain John Alcock and Lieutenant John Whitten Brown in making the transatlantic flight in one hop from Newfoundland to Ireland. Men identified with aviation in the army and navy feel that this a distinct advance and that the world is on the eve of tremendous developments in aviation.

They are confident that there is no limit to the possibilities of air flights, and that the successful flight of the naval seaplane NC-4 to Europe via the Azores route, followed so quickly by the successful flight of the Vickers-Vimy bomber, will be followed soon by other transatlantic flights and by the successful trip of the great British rigid dirigible, the R-34, from England to this country and return.

"Isn't that great!" said Secretary Daniels when informed by THE NEW YORK TIMES Bureau of the safe arrival of Captain Alcock and Lieutenant Brown in Ireland. "It not only appeals to man's enthusiasm and imagination, but is another demonstration of the great advance that has been made by aviation since the outbreak of the war and an augury for the still greater developments that are to be made in the very near future.

"It is an inspiration to the aviation officers of this country to go forward and they will go forward if they are only sustained by Congress with adequate appropriations.

"But we cannot go ahead if the navy is granted the small appropriation for the air service of the navy contemplated in the House Naval bill. The experts in the navy want to do real things in naval progress. They have very important plans to develop, and I sincerely trust that Congress will grant us the appropriations necessary to enable us to go ahead, and develop large rigids that will cross the Atlantic and Pacific."

Major Gen. Charles T. Menoher, Director of Military Aeronautics, in charge of all air activities in the army, who had not heard of the safe arrival of the Vickers-Vimy fliers on the other side until the news was delivered to him by THE NEW YORK TIMES, said:

"I am very glad that they have succeeded. There is only one thing that can be said when such news comes, and that is 'Hurrah!' It is certainly a great achievement, a great thing to be demonstrated, that the Atlantic can be crossed by a bomber inside of less than a day and a night. It proves that the crossing of the Atlantic in bombing planes is feasible, and means that it will be done again.

"The success of Captain Alcock and Lieutenant Brown is certainly a great thing, after the failure of Hawker, and goes to show that Hawker was right when he hopped off with the conviction that the jump could be made to Ireland without a stop. Hawker merely had bad luck, just as these two fliers had good luck. With Hawker and Grieve it was merely a question of a little mechanical difficulty, but for which I have no doubt that they, with a trifle more luck, would also have negotiated the transatlantic flight.

"The success of the Vickers-Vimy bomber, on top of the splendid flight made by the NC-4, shows that the whole thing was feasible from the beginning. As soon as I get to my office in the morning I shall send a cable dispatch to the British authorities tendering our congratulations on the success of this flight."

May Change Army's Flight Plans.

WASHINGTON, June 15, (Associated Press.)—Wholehearted congratulations for Alcock and Brown and prediction that the event will go far toward popularizing long-distance flights characterized the comment made by naval officials here on the completion of the first nonstop transatlantic air voyage.

Rear Admiral David W. Taylor, chief naval constructor, who is conceded to have been the father of the definite plan to cross the sea in an airship, said:

"I am heartily glad they made it. It means that long-distance flying will become immediately more popular and we can expect other record-making trips."

Some speculation was immediately heard as to the possible effect of the Vickers-Vimy plane's success upon plans of the army air service for the transatlantic flight. The announced schedule is for one "hop" from Minneola to North Platte, Neb., about 1,062 miles, or about 450 miles less than the record set by the British aviators. It would not therefore surprise followers of the army air service if these plans should be now redrawn. The suggestion already has been made that, with an increased fuel capacity and the elimination of some weight, the Martin bomber to be used in the New York-San Francisco flight should be able to cover not less than 2,000 miles.

Financial Nest-Eggs!

How a "one-basket" investment might impoverish your heirs

"DIVERSIFY your investments." This is an axiom with investment experts. Yet those untrained in financial matters continually court disaster by placing their all in single enterprises—sometimes essentially unsound, sometimes seemingly sound.

By way of illustration:

A New York piano salesman left his mother $15,000 in life insurance. She invested every cent of it in a stock which promised 12%. She now takes boarders for a living.

Mademoiselle G . . . . . , a gifted linguist living in New York, by dint of hard work and typical French thrift, accumulated a competency. Some years ago she invested all of it in Russian bonds. At 45 she must start life over again.

A Texas widow received $20,000—the proceeds of her husband's insurance policy. With it she purchased at $125 a share stock which was then selling in the open market at $80 a share. It later proved to be worthless.

Your money, if willed in bulk, may become the target of advice dictated solely by self-interest. Fortunately you can protect your heirs by establishing—for safeguarding the money you leave

The plan is this:

1. A Columbia Trust Fund is simply money set aside under the protection of the Columbia Trust Company and invested to provide periodical income for definite objects. All such investments are passed on by our Board of Directors' permanent committee on investments.
2. Life insurance or any other money may be used to form the Trust Fund. We are bound by a written agreement to carry out your wishes definitely and absolutely.
3. We will make investments of the Trust Fund for you in such securities as are lawful for Trustees, or, if you prefer, you can give us definite instructions to follow.
4. Income from the Trust Fund will be paid in installments to whom you wish and when you wish and in the amount you wish.

The following officers will welcome the opportunity to give you further details—without obligation, of course. At our downtown office, Mr. Warren, Vice-President, or Mr. Judd, Trust Officer. At our Fifth Ave. office, Mr. Dunn, Vice-President.

Other Fliers in Newfoundland Prepare to Cross the Atlantic

HANDLEY-PAGE PLANS IN DOUBT

But Rival Fliers in Newfoundland Send Congratulations to Winners.

NATIVES REJOICE IN FEAT

Recall the Confidence with Which Alcock and Brown Set Forth.

Special to The New York Times.

HARBOR GRACE, N. F., June 15.—The Vimy's transatlantic victory causes genuine rejoicing in Newfoundland. Expectation, whetted by nearly two and a half months of observation of the preparations by the various entrants in the $50,000 air race, is satisfied at last. Even the worst pessimist of yesterday is perfectly willing today to theorize over the possibilities of flying to the moon, or to Mars, or anywhere else, and those who pinned their faith on Captain John Alcock and Lieutenant Arthur W. Brown today have the satisfaction of unlimited "I told you so's."

It would not be human for the Handley-Page's crew here, for Raynham and his newly arrived navigator at St. John's, and for other fliers who had dreamed of winning the glory of this achievement not to be downcast. But only from their manner is the keenness of their disappointment to be gathered. For Alcock and Brown they have expressed the warmest phrases of congratulation and praise.

They, better than the others, know just what the voyage meant and better than the others realize the magnitude of the Vimy crew's contribution to airplane history. For Raynham, who, after the crash that seemed to put him hopelessly out of the race, battled so gallantly to get back into the game, there is felt the deepest sympathy by those who know his unmurmuring acceptance of double defeat—first when Hawker beat him off on the pioneer attempt which ended in failure, and again when Alcock flew away to dash his hopes for the second time.

Major H. G. Brackley, the principal pilot of the Handley-Page four-engined giant, has won the liking of all who have watched him so much that there have been many who hoped this twenty-four-year-old boy would nose out Alcock, the master who taught him what he knows of flying.

Alcock's Victory Popular One.

But, after all, there must be losers, and Alcock and Brown from the day they came to the Dominion were prime favorites. Alcock's cheery, boyish demeanor won him friends wherever he went, and Brown's quiet devotion to his job and his ready sympathy and willingness to help others, even if they were prospective contestants, did not go unnoticed. Less than any others who came to St. John's to prepare for the record-making flight did Alcock and Brown find time for the social attentions which were so eagerly offered to them out of Newfoundland's proverbially generous hospitality, and this very aloofness, which every one understood to spring from close attention to the work in hand, made them easily the most popular of all the contestants.

Nor in appraising their victory has it been forgotten that the Vickers started preparations for the contest months after the Handley-Page, the Martinsyde, and the Sopwiths had begun making ready. The Handley-Page expedition arrived here to find a $20,000 aerodrome all prepared for them. The Martinsyde and Sopwiths were similarly fortunate. Alcock found only a tangle of disappointments, and, though he is supposed to be a flier and not a negotiator, he ended with what he considered the best field of all, and it cost him less than $500. And he flew away just a month and a day after he landed at St. John's.

There is one strong factor in taking the edge off disappointment for the other aviators here, and that is the knowledge that for evermore the glory of being the first to fly clean across the Atlantic without stop is England's.

They cheerfully admit that to the extent of having furnished a navigator, who was such a vital part of the enterprise, America may share in the pride engendered by the creation of this newest and shortest bridge between the new world and the old. But from the moment word was flashed that the NC-4 had reached Lisbon and given to the United States Navy for all time the record of having been the first to send a flying craft of any sort across the ocean, there has been among the British fliers a restless determination that Britain should not tarnish, but rather outshine, that achievement by a non-stop flight.

The faintest mention of an American contestant for this honor interested them deeply, and it is a sidelight on their sportsmanship that what they really wanted was to beat America in a real race, not to win by default. To this day they never have understood why in all America there was not one single airplane and not one single flier to enter the contest.

One effect of the Vimy's crossing seems now to be a rather indefinite postponement of a similar voyage by the Handley-Page.

It had been hoped to undertake on Tuesday the trip, which was abandoned for yesterday because of radiator trouble when the news came that the faster Vimy already was in the air. But only two of the new radiators which reached St. John's from Liverpool last night were brought here on a special train, and the other two are not expected until late tomorrow.

This means probably some time Tuesday before they have been installed and there has been a satisfactory ground engine test. Then there probably will be a second trial flight, which, with luck, should come on Wednesday. Unless they make better time than now seems likely to them, the Handley-Page men, therefore, hardly can get away before Thursday.

Meantime they are uncomfortably conscious that the ideal flying weather between Newfoundland and Ireland, which has continued for more than a week, appears about to break up. Here today there is rain and fog, and the reports are that the weather further out is beginning to be unsettled.

May Fly Despite Weather.

Though this probably will mean delay if the forecasts are justified by the meteorological conditions toward the end of the week it may, on the other hand, furnish this big ocean air liner with an opportunity to make its own most valuable contribution to ocean flying. For, should a careful rechecking of its cruising radius justify such an attempt, it may be decided to send her across in other than ideal weather.

Yesterday every flier in Newfoundland and, so far as one has been able to gather here the best of them elsewhere regarded, the Atlantic crossing as a pure "stunt." Today there is a shining example and while the triumphant Vimy beckons, "come on in, the air is fine" there will be others to follow. Yesterday it was asked, "will it ever be done," Today's question is, "who will be next and how long before it becomes commonplace."

And there can be no more important vindication of the pioneer, no more reassuring demonstration that man really has reached the state of new mastery over the elements than just such repetitions, particularly if they can be accomplished under less ideal conditions than marked the sky trial of the pathfinder.

Huge, strong, and designed and elaborately equipped for this particular journey, while the Vickers-Vimy was but a stock machine, with extra fuel tanks replacing the bombing equipment, the Handley-Page well may prove the very machine to make this valuable, if less spectacular contribution. Should she prove able to fly under adverse conditions and should Major Tryggve Gran, her navigator, be able to add to Lieutenant Brown's achievement the reassurance that air navigation is really well on the way toward being mastered, there should come a tremendous impetus to long-distance flying, particularly over the water.

Another direction in which such a flight, if it succeeded, might prove of very real value, lies in the demonstration it might make of successful working with wireless direction finding apparatus.

Four Others May Still Try.

It is true that no one yet places great reliance upon this, though Great Britain found it valuable over a comparatively short distance during air warfare against the Huns. But Arthur Pritchard, the Marconi installation engineer, has toiled patiently for many weeks to make the Handley-Page installation the best that modern science and skill can produce, and there is a possibility that there yet may be a brilliant demonstration of its value.

Particularly if the plane started off in stormy weather and fog was encountered would a successful working of its directional apparatus go far toward removing the hazard and uncertainty from transatlantic flying, since it is the only navigational means yet devised which does not leave the voyagers blinded and helpless in a fog.

So, while there may be somewhat of a wait before the Handley-Page gets off, the determination of her crew not to abandon the journey is received with deep satisfaction by flying men generally, and her career in midatlantic will be watched with much attention.

Raynham, in his Martinsyde, too, is determined, according to word reaching here today, to have another try at this flight, even though a great prize is no longer held out to him. Whether the Alliance and the Boulton and Paul machines, which are not yet on the starting ground, will be sent over anyway is not so definitely known, but the indications are that they, too, will have a try.

Right now, however, there is little time or inclination among the little group of aviation devotees who have gone through so many weeks of preparation for one transatlantic venture and another to speculate much about the future. Their time is too much absorbed in exulting in the Vimy's achievement, in pondering its meaning from many angles, and in giving way to the exhilaration that the success brings to all remotely connected with it.

Here and at St. John's, where they hopped off, are men who saw them go and who awoke this morning to receive the news that Alcock and Brown were in Ireland.

Victors Send Messages.

Amazing and almost unbelievable as the feat seemed, even more astonishing was it to those who, while still sharing the first flush of exultation in their victory, received cable messages from the pilot and navigator dated at Clifden. Yesterday in Newfoundland, today sending messages from another hemisphere! It seemed almost incredible as one stared at those two names—Alcock and Brown—on a cable blank.

Nineteen hundred and thirty-six land miles in sixteen and one-half hours! That really was the distance they traveled as nearly as it is computible for their crow-line course, or 1,630 knots, and in their battle to get away in the bucketing half gale they traveled an extra ten knots before they had straightened out and flown away, across the Newfoundland coast line. They averaged a speed of 117½ miles an hour.

At first those who got word that the two voyagers had arrived were skeptical. They bethought themselves of the first cheery messages about Hawker and Grieve and the Sopwith, and wondered if again hope was the mother of joyful news. But official confirmation soon arrived and there was not only joy but very genuine relief. For no one who for weeks has followed the attempts to cross and the tedious, often almost baffling, obstacles and delays but had become ever more pessimistic of success and ever more conscious of the dangers which beset those who started off so gayly and unconcernedly.

It is literally true that among the best informed there was not heard a single prediction of success for them. This is not to say that no one believed they would get there, but that the chances of mechanical failure during those long hours were so well recognized that somehow every one seemed instinctively to arrive at the same conclusion that for once prophecies were better left unspoken.

Even Alcock and Brown themselves, though their confidence was ever unshaken, most carefully avoided anything that could be construed into a prediction of success. The nearest approach to it was one afternoon when Brown was explaining to the correspondents the course he hoped to follow, and very guardedly said that the plane should land at Clifden if—strongly emphasized—he succeeded in following the path he had mapped out, and Alcock laughingly interjected, "Yes, we shall hang our hats on the aerials of the Clifden wireless tower."

Brown Chose Own Course.

Sketches of the news thus far received here leads one to believe Brown did follow this course with remarkable exactitude. He who stops to reflect that though for a time Brown conducted a military school of aerial navigation, the art of navigation really has been a hobby rather than a profession with him, may form some impression of this achievement.

The course he chose was his own in the sense that he worked out a radically different navigation plan from that adopted by Lieut. Commander Grieve for the Sopwith or that Major Gran expects to employ in guiding the Handley-Page. Grieve tried to follow the North Atlantic steamer lane, and Gran hopes to tack with the wind, but Brown chose to depend upon his own ability to keep straight and to fly a crow-line journey above the Loxodrome course, better known to navigators as the "Rhumb line."

He had with him not a single special instrument other than those used for ships. His sextant was of the ordinary naval type, though he did take as an added precaution a little pocket bubble sextant, upon which he did not rely. He had a Royal Air Force box compass and a pocket compass to check with, and a drift indicator, or bearing plate, of the type generally used by British machines for long flights. That was all, if one excepts the charts, such as any ship carries, and the ordinary quick-reckoning tables.

And in that cramped cockpit, where there was just room for Alcock and himself, huddled together with instruments and necessary paraphernalia all about them, Brown had to take his observations, do his calculating, and attend to his wireless.

Brown's choice as navigator was a happy accident. He was with a Royal Air Force officer who went to Weybridge to see P. M. Muller about a matter concerning radiators. The chance conversation disclosed Brown's interest in and knowledge of aerial navigation and five minutes later Muller, then searching for a navigator for Alcock, had signed him on for the flight.

There is speculation here today as to whether his brilliant success really will be the climax to his career in the air, as he intended when he left. It was his purpose, after this flight, to marry an English girl and to return to America to resume his citizenship, about the status of which there is some question, though he did not renounce it when he fought with the British. He then intended to take up once more the interrupted practice of his engineering profession. But some of those most closely associated with him believe now that the honors which will be heaped upon him for his share in the Vimy's triumph may tempt him to continue in a more spectacular career. It is thought, too, that he may find a more congenial field in developmental work in aerial navigation even though he adheres to his determination not to fly again.

Alcock's Share of Prize.

At any rate, unless his plans are altered, America soon should have an opportunity of expressing personally to both him and Alcock her pride in their job. Brown means to come to the United States in the course of a trip to which he expects to devote his share of the prize money, and Alcock intends to pay a visit soon, perhaps traveling back through the air, for he is anxious to pilot the huge Vickers lighter-than-air machine, which is nearing completion.

This is to be sent across, possibly from London to New York. Another flight project, more in the future, in which Alcock is deeply interested is the prospective crossing of the great Vickers ocean passenger carrier, which now is being worked on, but will need another year for completion.

Whether Alcock soon attempts to fly the Atlantic again or not, he is an aviator for life, so far as he knows. He has never followed any other calling since he flew first, in 1909, when he was 17 years of age. He has designed machines and he has built them, but always his activities have centred about some phase of flying. There are fliers to whom their work is just work and who are just as bored when they take a plane into the air as is the most stodgy bookkeeper at his desk, but Alcock is one of those who really loves the game and who is radiantly happy from the moment he begins to put on his flying clothes until he lands and takes them off.

As soon as he was out of the military service he signed with Vickers for three years as experimental pilot. It is doubtful, however, if ever again he will fly for such high wages. If he gets two-thirds of the prize money, as he expects, his pay for his actual flight time will be $2,020.20 an hour, a total of $33,333.20, while Brown will get half that.

Never did he prove his love of the game better than yesterday in the harrowing hours before he got away. Though he appeared at the aerodrome soon after dawn, to find that some work on the machine had not been done properly and to encounter a wind in which a take-off seemed absolutely hopeless, he kept his temper perfectly. This was despite the fact that he had full knowledge that the Handley-Page had the firm intention of getting away that day.

Once he had seen to the rewinding of the shock absorber elastic cables he sat calmly on a box in a wind that nearly swept others off their feet and calmly predicted, between gusts, "Oh, well, I'll get off after breakfast." Without the faintest sign of the anxiety he must have been feeling, he returned to St. John's, took off his flying clothes, and chatted through breakfast. Then back he went to the aerodrome, where he joked and laughed and sprawled about on the grass, the most unconcerned person there.

Once, when the wind seemed at its worst, he tore off a handful of grass blades, tossed them into the air, and watched them scatter in all directions, remarking, "No flight today." That brought deep disappointment to those about him, but a moment later he added:

"That's what we used to do before the war. We would toss a handful of torn tissue paper into the air, and if there was the slightest puff of wind we didn't go up. It is different now; I'm going."

But before he could go he had to fight his fight with P. M. Muller, his business manager, who had absolutely forbidden a take-off in that wind. But Muller was game. Not only was he won to the position that it were better to start and crash than not start at all and risk being beaten by the Handley-Page, but he said, "Go ahead, Jack; I assume full responsibility."

Even now they still talk of that take-off. Never did man fight a more gallant battle in the air and never did a flier take a more desperate chance with everything against him. Hedges, trees, fences, bumpy ground, wind that shifted in howling gusts, and a machine loaded far beyond its usual cargo, all were leagued to beat him. Yet away he went after quickly remarking just before stepping into the machine, "Oh, well, if we crash we won't be going fast against that gale, anyway." And to that Brown gave smiling assent.

And with a full realization of the supreme fight he was to be in within just a few minutes, Alcock paused just as he was about to climb in when he spied a St. John's boy in the crowd proudly holding up a model of the Vimy which he had made himself and the propeller of which was whirling madly in the wind. Alcock called him over, took the little replica of his own machine, examined it and handed it back, grinning broadly all the time and absurdly pleased with this toy.

Those here who sent letters in the first transatlantic air mail ever flown clear across the ocean without stop now are exulting that they got their letters into the very limited pouch and are eagerly waiting to learn just how soon they are delivered in England. At any rate, it will, of course, be the record time for transmitting mail between these two countries.

ST. JOHN'S JUBILANT OVER OCEAN CROSSING

Citizens Fly Flags and Groups of Aviators Gather to Discuss Alcock's Success.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., June 15.—News of the safe arrival at Clifden, Galway, of Captain John Alcock and Lieutenant Arthur Brown in their Vickers-Vimy bomber was received here about 9:30 this morning. They had almost been given up for lost when the welcome tidings came in, as no word of any kind had been received from them and it was feared that the worst had happened.

It was known that their transmitting wireless was not all that could be desired, and that, while it had operated feebly on trial trips and had afterward been partially remedied by Navigator Brown, it was not very reliable. But it was thought that some message would be received during the night to tell of the whereabouts of the machine, and if all was well. When early morning came and with it no news, all sorts of speculations were indulged in as to their fate.

There was general rejoicing at the good news, and citizens testified to their joy at the conquest of the Atlantic by British airmen in displays of flags and bunting, while excited groups discussed the matter on the streets.

Groups of the aviators now here in connection with these and impending flights exchanged views on the subject as well, and while the achievement of Alcock and Brown has to a certain extent stolen some of their thunder, there was nothing but whole-hearted congratulations expressed on the performance of the Vickers machine.

Many reiterated opinions frequently expressed that the Vickers bomber was a machine eminently suitable to stand the grind of the transatlantic trip, and there was nothing but admiration among all for Pilot Alcock and Navigator Brown. All who had seen the masterly manner in which Alcock made his getaway yesterday realized that he was not alone a capable and experienced aviator, but that he also possessed qualities of resource and nerve which would stand him in good stead on his great adventure. He practically fought his machine into the air, to the intense astonishment of spectators, who believed that every moment a fatality would occur, and his skill in getting his plane off the ground under the most adverse circumstances, combined with the capabilities of the machine itself, convinced the onlookers that if it were humanly possible to conquer the Atlantic this was the machine and these were the men to achieve it.

The Handley-Page machine, according to Admiral Kerr, will be leaving within the next day or two, and he believes it will be possible to cut down on the time record of the Vickers machine. Raynham is also optimistic, more so because he believes his Martinsyde plane the fastest in the world. One of the same recently made a flight between Paris and London at the rate of 170 miles an hour.

Lieutenant Williams of the Alliance Aeroplane Company expressed similar views. His machine will, he thinks, be ready to fly early next month, and with the improved weather, he believes, has a good chance of hanging up a new speed record.

Major Fiske, who arrived here yesterday to represent the Boulton & Paul Company, which is entering two machines for the transatlantic flight, said his expedition would go ahead as if the Atlantic had not yet been spanned, except that now that the crossing had been effected there would not be such hurried preparations, and that the machines would be thoroughly ready before a start was attempted.

All are eagerly awaiting details of the Vickers trip, which they think was an amazingly quick one and probably devoid of any incident whatever.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., June 15, (Associated Press.)—Major Fiske, representing the Boulton & Paul Aeroplane Company of England, arrived here today to prepare an aerodrome for two of his company's machines which are expected to reach Newfoundland in a fortnight as contenders for transatlantic honors.

Major Fiske visited the Vickers aerodrome, but decided it was unsuitable for his airplanes. Later he proceeded to Harbor Grace to inspect the Handley-Page field.

RUTH LAW ASTONISHED.

Woman Flier Surprised at Speed Attained by Alcock.

Ruth Law, who flew from Chicago to New York, and who has been planning to attempt a transatlantic flight, said last night she was not surprised by the success of Alcock, but was rather startled by the speed with which it had been made.

"I think every one believed the trip was practicable," she said, "and that Alcock had the best equipment with which to make it. The time in which it was made was a 'knock down.' It will be difficult for any one to beat that record for some time to come, even under the most favorable conditions.

"I have been negotiating to attempt the flight in a Martin bomber. The fact that the Northcliffe prize has been won will make no difference in my plans."

It was learned that Miss Law was not likely to attempt a flight to Ireland, because she was anxious any flight she should attempt would be to establish a new record. It was said she might attempt a flight direct to England.

GIVES RECENT RECORDS BY ARMY AIR SERVICE

General Menoher Makes Public Official Reports on Engine and Flight Tests.

Some of the achievements that have been quietly carried through to success by army pilots recently at the American aviation fields throughout the country were disclosed yesterday in official statements issued through General Menoher, the director of the U. S. Air Service. At some fields recruits for the service are being brought to the receiving offices by airplanes, while at all of the stations flights and engine tests are being conducted systematically. Excerpts from the reports follow:

"Ross Field, Arcadia, Cal.—First all-night flight of an observation balloon in America is the record of the Ross Field observers in co-operation with the Forestry Service in Southern California. Lieutenants Donald C. Cathcart of Sheldon, Iowa, and Norman E. Galentine of El Paso, Texas, field balloon officer, were the pilots and observers and were in the balloon seventeen hours, maintaining an elevation of 1,500 feet. Tests were made on signaling, map reading, and lifting power of gas.

"Langley Field, Va.—Lieutenants Andrew J. Hutterly, pilot, and William N. Cunningham have just completed an interesting flight over the mountains in Virginia and Pennsylvania as far west as Beaver Falls. The complete circuit of flight covered 1,000 miles and was made in 620 minutes flying time. The altitude varied from 1,900 to 8,600 feet. A Curtiss JN 4-H was used."

"Hazelhurst Field, L. I., N. Y.—The flight of Lieut. Col. Leonard H. Drennan, Air Service, Northeastern Department, Boston, Mass., to Hazelhurst Field in a De Haviland 4 was made in record time of eighty-three minutes, distance 175 miles. A maximum altitude of 8,000 feet was maintained."

"Ellington Field, Houston, Texas.—Piloted by Lieutenant H. G. Preston, Sergeant Earl Burgess in a Curtiss D from 3,000 feet altitude made a parachute jump. The parachute, thirty-six feet in diameter, was strapped to the side of the ship. Burgess climbed out on the wing and attached the parachute. Peterson stalled the ship by shutting off the engine and Burgess jumped. Peterson then started up the engine, raising the tail of the ship as Burgess faced backward. The parachute opened at 100 feet drop and Burgess landed without a jar."

"Washington, D. C.—Colonel Gerald C. Brandt, Air Service Officer, Eastern Department, arrived in a De Haviland 4 from New York in 140 minutes."

"Selfridge Field, Mount Clemens, Mich.—Colonel Davenport Johnson, commanding officer of this field, with Lieutenant H. S. Ormsbee, pilot, in a De Haviland 4 made the flight from Chicago to this field, 250 miles, in 140 minutes, at an altitude of 5,000 feet. Between Michigan City and Chicago the aviators were over Lake Michigan a part of the way."

"Portland, Oregon.—The Mather Field Squadron under command of Colonel H. L. Watson after making what is considered a remarkable flight of 500 miles from Sacramento, Cal., to this city entertained the people of Oregon coming in from various sections of the State with aerial acrobatics. The squadron consists of six Curtiss planes and one De Haviland and the flight from Sacramento is considered remarkable from the fact that the aviators experienced a great variety of changeable currents while passing through valleys, close to high mountain peaks, including Mount Shasta, and crossing the Sierra Nevada range at an elevation of 15,000 feet. Forced landings would have been difficult to make on account of the rough country flown over and the heavy timber covering an extended area."

Secretary Asserts America Will Merely Mark Time if Navy Is Restricted to $15,000,000.

ASKS VOTE OF $45,000,000

But Could Get Along on $36,000,000—Wants to Build Rigid Dirigibles.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Urging that Congress appropriate $45,000,000 for naval aviation during the next fiscal year and declaring that $36,000,000 is the very lowest figure that should be appropriated, if the American Navy is not to fall behind, Secretary Daniels tonight sent to Senator Carroll S. Page, Chairman of the Naval Committee, a letter urging an increase in the $15,000,000 appropriation granted by the House.

Secretary Daniels informed Senator Page that if the appropriation should remain at $15,000,000 this country could only "mark time" in aviation, when it should be leading. There is a strong disposition in the House to cut army and navy appropriations right and left to a showing of economy.

Great Britain and France are going ahead with plans for aviation development on a large scale. Great Britain has made available for the current year an appropriation of $320,000,000 for army and navy aircraft development, and France $200,000,000. The American Government is behind in lighter-than-air development. It has no rigid dirigibles. The British Government is going in strongly for the development of large rigids. The rigid dirigible R-34, which is soon to leave England for a round trip transatlantic flight, is part of the British development. There is no hangar on this side of the Atlantic large enough to house the R-34, hence the stay of the R-34 on this side will be short.

One reason why the American naval dirigible C-5, which was of the non-rigid type, was lost in the gale at Trepassey Bay, Newfoundland, was the absence of a hangar there. Rear Admiral McKean, acting chief of naval operations, asserted tonight his belief that if there had been a hangar in Newfoundland large enough to care for it the C-5 by this time would have reached Ireland.

Text of the Secretary's Letter.

Secretary Daniels's letter to Senator Page reads in part:

"My Dear Senator: The Naval bill, as reported to the House, has cut the appropriation for navy aviation to $15,000,000. I deem it my duty to bring to your attention the fact that, with this amount, navy aviation will practically 'mark time' during the next year which should be a year of rapid development and will be a year of rapid development of this arm of the navy in countries other than the United States. This is sufficiently indicated by the fact that in Great Britain the appropriation for aviation made for the current year amounts in round figures to $320,000,000. This includes all aviation for military purposes and should, of course, be compared with the total contemplated for both the army and navy in the United States, amounting to something like $30,000,000.

"The General Board of the navy, after extended hearings covering the whole field of aviation, recommended a program for the next fiscal year which our experts estimated would require the $45,000,000 originally asked for by me in Congress. I feel very strongly that the figure of $36,000,000 reported by the Senate Naval Committee during the last session should at least be provided if we are to make any approach to the aviation activities and developments considered necessary by the General Board.

"It will be recalled that in 1909 the feat of Blériot in flying across the English channel in a plane propelled by a motor of about 25 horsepower was regarded as miraculous. In ten years the development of heavier-than-air craft has been so remarkable and progressive that recently we have seen our multiple-engined NC-4 successfully complete a voyage from New York to Plymouth by way of Newfoundland, the Azores and Portugal. We are now expecting a visit from the British rigid R-34, which is to make the attempt to fly directly from England to the United States. The performances of this British rigid to date indicate the practicability of the voyage, and, even should the present attempt fail by some mischance, there is every prospect that the voyage will soon be successfully accomplished.

"These long voyages have demonstrated beyond doubt the practicability of the large lighter-than-air ship. There can be no doubt in the mind of anyone that aviation is destined to assume a rôle of tremendous importance in the affairs of the world. At present the largest field for aircraft is the military one, and by the rapid development of such aircraft only is it practicable to reach a condition of commercial application.

"I feel sure you will agree with me that the United States, where was built and operated the first successful flying machine, which under the stress of war has made a supreme effort during the past two years and is now, broadly speaking, abreast the rest of the world in aeronautical development and ahead in some respects, as instanced by the successful voyage of the NC-4, should not falter and fall by the wayside in aviation.

Would Block "Rigid" Program.

"I regret to inform you that an appropriation of $15,000,000 will not suffice to permit the construction of large rigids in this country, and possibly it will not even allow the beginning of a 'rigid' program. There is not on this continent at this time a dirigible hangar large enough to house the English R-34, and the visit of that vessel to our shores must be curtailed because of the possibility of the ship being wrecked in the event of occurrence of bad weather.

"The rigid dirigibles were of splendid service during the war. Both Germany and Great Britain used them successfully. Admiral Jellicoe stated that a rigid dirigible was worth two light cruisers, and it is of interest to note the statement of the British Admiralty to the effect that at the battle of Jutland the German fleet, though inferior in numbers, was able to escape complete destruction because of the good use of her scouting airships. It may be of interest to you to know that inquiries are now being made on the part of the British Government as to the possibility of a hangar for rigids being allowed in this country for use by a foreign-owned Zeppelin employed commercially.

ONE OF THREE GREAT FEATS.

Vimy Compared with NC-4 Crossing and Hawker-Grieve Attempt.

The flight of the Vickers-Vimy biplane across the Atlantic was one of three recent notable and daring achievements by airmen. To Captain Alcock and Lieutenant Brown goes the high honor of having made the first nonstop air passage of the Atlantic, the achievement going to the credit of Great Britain.

The Atlantic had already been spanned in an air journey, however, the feat having been performed by American naval officers in the seaplane NC-4, with a stop at the Azores en route from Newfoundland to Lisbon, Portugal, the journey beginning on May 16 and ending on May 27.

Less successful but no less daring than the achievement of the Vickers-Vimy pilot and navigator was the recent flight by two other British airmen, Harry G. Hawker and Lieut.-Commander Mackenzie Grieve. On May 19 they covered more than half the distance across the Atlantic before being forced to alight in midocean. For nearly a week they were given up for lost, but finally turned up safe on board a small craft which brought them almost to Ireland before the news of their dramatic rescue was relayed ashore by a British destroyer.

The successful flight of the British airplane and the American seaplanes were made in pursuance of different phases of experiment in the problems of the air. Elaborate precautions were taken to guide the NC-4 and her companion fliers by destroyers placed at frequent intervals, the aim being not so much to make a record as to establish the practicability of cross-ocean traffic by air under conditions of comparative safety.

The attempt of Hawker and the successful flight of Captain Alcock and Lieutenant Brown were made for a prize of $50,000, offered by The London Daily Mail. The idea was to make a contribution of moment to the practical side of air navigation, but the appeal to the competitors was in no small measure to their sporting instinct, the fliers running strong chances of being irretrievably lost at sea if anything happened to their machine.

A comparison of the records shows that the NC-4 carried five men 2,150 nautical miles in 26 hours 37 minutes, while the Vickers-Vimy plane flew with two men 1,650 nautical miles in 16 hours 12 minutes. The achievement of the British fliers sets a new record for distance covered in a single flight, the longest single jump of the NC-4 having been approximately 1,200 nautical miles from Newfoundland to Horta, in the Azores.

FEAT OF THE AGE, SAYS WOODHOUSE

Aero Club Secretary Predicts Early Regular Commercial Flights Across Atlantic.

Henry Woodhouse, Secretary of the Aero Club of America, declared last night that the achievement of Captain Alcock and Lieutenant Brown was "the most stupendous feat of the age" and would advance the science of aviation to a degree not to be computed. One of the results that would be sure to follow within two years, he said, was that regular aerial express and passenger planes would be flying between the continents.

Mr. Woodhouse, who was described as "visionary" when he predicted a few months ago that the Atlantic certainly would be crossed by an airplane in continuous flight before two years had passed, did not seem astonished when he received the first news of the successful flight from a reporter of THE NEW YORK TIMES, who reached him by long distance telephone at Atlantic City, where he has been attending the convention of the Second Pan American Aeronautical Exposition.

"It is the most stupendous achievement of the age," said Mr. Woodhouse. "Few persons, even those in the aeronautical movement, as we call it believed that a frail thing of sticks of wood, canvas and wire could be capable of such a revolutionary achievement. Most persons, even some who had seen at close hand the remarkable progress of aerial science during the war, believed that the accomplishment of a non-stop flight across the ocean was at least five years off, and this opinion, which was held almost unanimously, adds even more credit to the gallant pilot and navigator of the Vickers-Vimy booming plane. It is my confident belief that the names of Alcock and Brown, with that of Read and his gallant crew, will go down in history with that of Columbus as leaders of a new race of supermen and the leaders in a new era of communication between the continents.

"It is a stupendous thing to think of men launching themselves into almost limitless space in an airplane, which, after all, depends upon its success in flight more upon the confidence and belief of its pilots than upon any other factor. The airplane remains aloft and continues its terrific speed only so long as the nerve and endurance of the pilots remain unswerving.

"This flight advances the science of aviation at least five years and, I believe, opens the way to permanent aerial mail, passenger and express service between this country and England and all the other countries in Europe. We may look for swift journeys over the ocean to be almost as numerous as flights over the English Channel are today. Alcock and Brown flew across the ocean in a shorter time than it takes the fastest train to run from New York to Chicago, and the actual time of transmission of material objects from this country to Europe is cut more than one-fifth."

Mr. Woodhouse is in Atlantic City arranging to push the opening of the first aerial port of call for transatlantic airplanes and balloons and to attend the meetings of the Aerial League of America, of which he is Secretary. He believes that the flight of the Vimy plane makes the need for an airport at Atlantic City even more urgent.

TO NAME PEAK ROOSEVELT.

South Dakota Pioneers to Hold Memorial Exercises July 4.

Lieut. Col. Theodore Roosevelt, together with William Joyce Thompson, President of the Roosevelt Memorial Association, and a party of friends and members of that organization are going to Blackwood, S. D., to attend a memorial ceremony for the late Colonel Roosevelt. The exercises will take Colonel Roosevelt's son is going 2,000 miles to attend will take place on July 4, when the Society of Black Hills Pioneers, of which Colonel Roosevelt was an honorary member, honors his memory by naming for him one of the highest peaks of the Black Hills.

Captain Seth Bullock and a group of the former President's old friends are in charge of the program for the occasion. A memorial cairn of boulders of native granite is now being constructed on the summit of the peak, and on Independence Day will be dedicated to the memory of "Theodore Roosevelt, American." The Governor of South Dakota will preside at the ceremony, and Major Gen. Leonard Wood will make an address. State officials of Wyoming, Montana, Nebraska and South Dakota will be present.

The mountain to be renamed Mount Theodore Roosevelt is now called Sheep Mountain or Round Top. It is about three miles from the city of Deadwood, overlooking territory intimately associated with Roosevelt's early days in the Northwest.

KOLCHAK PROMISES TO PROTECT JEWS

Ready to Guarantee to All Peoples Their Rights, Regardless of Religion.

PARIS, June 15, (Associated Press.)—Admiral Kolchak, head of the Omsk Government in Russia, has sent the following dispatch, dated at Omsk June 6, to the Russian Commission in Paris:

"I have been advised that reports are circulating concerning the uneasiness of Russia's Jewish population as to their future. For that reason I think it important to repeat publicly my attitude, already stated frequently.

"The purpose of this Government is to guarantee to all peoples in Russia, without distinction as to religion or nationality, entire equality before the law, which must guarantee individual immunity to all citizens. I have thus spoken many times to delegations from Jewish communities which have come to me to declare their loyalty and patriotism.

"Considering these facts, manifestations of national discord cannot be tolerated. They would disturb the peaceful portions of the populations."

BERNSTORFF USED DYES AS WAR CLUB

Advised Embargo by Germany in 1915 to Embroil America With Britain.

GARVAN REVEALS EVIDENCE

Will Be Used in Appeal for Government Aid to Makers of Coal-Tar Products.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Count Johann von Bernstorff, while serving as German Ambassador to the United States, after the war had started but before this country had become involved in it, tried to cripple American industry in 1915, through stopping German dye importations. He hoped thereby to arouse American sentiment against the British blockade, and thus aid Germany. Bernstorff was advised by one, Hossenfelder, that the stock of dyes in this country was so small that such an embargo would throw 4,000,000 American workmen out of employment.

This and other revelations of German activities, espionage and propaganda will be presented to the House Ways and Means Committee when it opens a hearing tomorrow on methods to protect the dye industry in this country. National defense and the development of curative medicines will have a prominent part in the hearing, which will be under the supervision of the Chemical Foundation, Incorporated, which will urge Congress to adopt a licensing plan to protect the industry.

Francis P. Garvan, the Alien Property Custodian, who is President of the Chemical Foundation, Incorporated, and Joseph H. Choate, Jr., general counsel for the Foundation, have presented to the Ways and Means Committee a brief in favor of a bill establishing the licensing plan to control dye imports. In it they embrace the text of the Bernstorff dispatch.

This document, obtained through the State Department, is an excerpt from one of Bernstorff's dispatches, now possessed by that department, not all of which have been made public by any means. It serves as another connecting link in the chain of evidence against German propaganda, espionage and plotting against a neutral nation. The dispatch is being submitted to the Committee to show how German control of dyes would control the fate of other industries, and how a hostile German dye industry has served as an ideal centre of espionage and propaganda.

Industry Part of War Machine.

Other revelations in the brief will show that the German dye industry was adapted for military espionage and direct hostile governmental action, as well as for commercial espionage in this country. The brief will state that the late Dr. Hugo Schweitzer, President of the American branch of the great German house of Bayer, came here, became a citizen under orders from his Government, and led espionage and propagandist methods until his death in 1917. He was a direct Secret Service employe of the German Government, the brief asserts. He originated the idea of buying The New York Evening Mail, and dispensed huge Secret Service and graft funds.

The brief discloses that it was Schweitzer who employed Scheele, who discovered mustard gas, and that he transmitted its formula to Germany through von Papen, the former naval attaché of the German Embassy after the war began.

Among those who will tell the committee that a well-developed dyestuff and chemical industry in this country is essential to national defense, and point out the serious handicaps this country suffered through lack of such an industry, are Major Gen. William L. Sibert, Chief of the Chemical Warfare Service of the Army; Brig. Gen. Amos Fries, who organized and was Chief of the Chemical Warfare Service of the American Army in France, and Lieut. Col. O. M. Hustvedt, representing the Bureau of Ordnance of the United States Navy.

Major T. W. Sill, U. S. A., who is attached to the commission which recently investigated the dyestuff factories in occupied territory, will testify regarding the condition of these factories at this time. Dr. Julius Steiglitz, Chairman of the Synthetic Medicinal Committee of the National Research Council, will testify as to the necessity for the discovery of curative medicines for fatal diseases. Dr. Steiglitz is head of the Chemistry Department of the University of Chicago, and former President of the American Chemical Society. The consumers of dyes in this country will be represented by Presidents of many of the large American textile mills.

Text of the Brief.

The brief, submitted by the Chemical Foundation and signed by Francis P. Garvan and Joseph H. Choate, Jr., said in part:

"The Chemical Foundation, Inc., a non commercial institution, controlled by trustees who have no financial interest in its activities, wishes to present the following consideration as matters which it deems of vital interest to the whole country.

"What the licensing plan is.—It is a temporary measure designed to cover the period necessary for the building up of a complete self-sustaining coal tar chemical industry in this country. It permits the importation of coal-tar products in any quantity of any quality, at any price, from any source when—and only when—the proposed import is licensed by a Licensing Commission appointed by the Executive, and consisting of, say, four members chosen from among the dye makers, an equal number from among the dye-using industries, and one member not connected with either industry and representing the Government itself.

"The duty of the commission, under the proposed bill, would be to admit by license all dyes and other coal tar chemicals found really necessary in our industries and neither obtainable within a reasonable time from domestic sources nor replaceable by any entirely satisfactory domestic substitute, and to exclude from importation all such products as now are or presently will be manufactured in the United States in satisfactory quantity and quality.

"What it is not.—The licensing plan is not an embargo. It is not a permanent measure. No one would advocate its enactment for a period more than, say, ten years. If, at the end of that time, our dye industry has not reached, or nearly reached, a self-sustaining status it will have been proved that the Germans were right in their repeated assertions that we are incapable of establishing such an industry.

"It is not a substitute for a tariff. Customs duties may be levied whether or not the plan is adopted; and there is no reason why licensed imports should not pay such duties.

"Why a native dye industry is necessary.—A complete, self-sustaining, domestic dye industry is indispensable to our national prosperity for five compelling reasons:

"(a) The dye industry controls the fate of three billion dollars' worth a year of American goods which cannot be made without its products.

"(b) It alone can provide and keep available in peace times an inexhaustible source of explosives and poison gases needed for national defense.

"(c) It furnished, in hostile hands, an ideal field for espionage and propaganda.

"(d) It alone can insure due progress in industrial chemistry.

"(e) It alone can provide both personnel and material needed for advancement of scientific and medical chemistry.

"Dyes control the fate of other manufactures.—The appendix shows the enormous magnitude of the industries which cannot be carried on without coal tar dyes and intermediates. These are indispensible for almost all of the innumerable varieties of textiles as well as for paints, varnishes, papers, inks and felts. With the exception of a small proportion of natural vegetable dyes, all of the dyes used in these industries are of coal-tar origin.

"In addition to these uses coal-tar products are equally indispensible to pharmaceutical manufacturers and are the foundation of the one great chemical industry of purely American origin—the manufacture of the so-called condensation products—like bakelite, condensite and redmanol.

"At the outbreak of the war the small American production of a few colors was itself dependent on German supplies, since it was no more than an assembling industry putting the finishing touches on intermediates made in Germany. Not a fraction of our needs could be filled from any other sources. The entire pre-war production of Switzerland, the only other considerable dye exporting country, had it all been available to us, would not have supplied half the quantity needed, to say nothing of the necessary variety. Many indispensable colors could be obtained from Germany alone, and only at such price as her makers chose to ask.

At Mercy of the Germans

"It is self-evident that in this situation our consuming industries were at the mercy of the Germans, who were, in most of the lines in question, formidable competitors. By withholding supplies, by raising prices, or by furnishing inferior colors, they could at any moment have dealt us a deadly blow.

"Suppose the German textile-makers had had ten years more of unimpeded Government-aided progress in export trade. Suppose that then they or their Government had intentionally and suddenly brought upon our textile makers a dye famine such as was brought about incidentally and gradually by the outbreak of the war. Where would our textile industry have been in a year's time?

"On March 13, 1915, Bernstorff, in a dispatch to his Government, stated the situation precisely. He said:

Serial Number 432, of March 13, 1915. It is reported to me by Hossenfelder, telegram No. 4, that the stock of dyes in this country is so small that by a German embargo about four million American workmen might be thrown out of employment. (Signed) BERNSTORFF.

"Only a dye industry can provide for national defense.

"It is common knowledge that nearly all modern military explosives are coal-tar products. Less well known is the fact that a complete dye works can be almost instantly converted into an explosives factory. Materials, processes, and men are all there ready to hand. Picric acid, for instance, is made by a process which, up to the final step, is the same as that which produces one of the most widely used dyes, sulphur black. TNT itself is made from a by-product unavoidably produced in excess in making several dyes. Dye chemists and dye workmen alike have the necessary technic, which can be found nowhere else.

Aid to Nation in War.

"A country which has a large dye industry can provide itself overnight with the means of making the colossal quantities of explosives needed in modern war.

"Still more important, however, with reference to the future, is the fact, all but unknown to the public, that dye factories can be adapted almost without change to the manufacture of poison gases.

"Chlorine and phosgene, two of the deadly gases most frequently used, are materials used in the ordinary manufacture of various dyes. The dye laboratories have all the facilities needed for research directed toward the discovery of new and more fatal poisons and toward defense against known gases. A country which has an established dye industry is, ipso facto, ready for modern chemical warfare which bids fair, hereafter, to overshadow altogether the importance of explosive warfare.

"If we allow Germany to regain her world monopoly of dyes, we offer her, as a free gift, capacity for world conquest. A hostile dye industry is an ideal center of espionage and propaganda.

"That this is true as regards commercial espionage is self-evident. Dyes are sold to an enormous number of customers in a host of different businesses. Large and highly trained sales forces must, accordingly, be employed. Whenever difficulties arise in the compounding processes of using the dyes the customer calls on the seller for expert advice. Between the salesmen and the expert adviser no important detail of the customer's business is likely to escape the seller's knowledge. In the days of Germany's monopoly this was amply demonstrated. The agents of her dye works were able to supply, and did supply, Berlin with the fullest imaginable information as to all our dye-consuming industries.

Industry Cover for Spies.

"But the dye industry is naturally adapted, not for commercial espionage alone, but also military espionage and direct hostile Governmental action. Head and front of Germany's activities in this line before the war was Dr. Hugo Schweitzer, President of the American branch of the great German house of Bayer of Leverkusen. He was a direct Secret Service employe, bearing the number 963192632, given him by the Imperial War Minister. He came here, became a citizen under orders from his Government, and led the espionage and propagandist movements till his death in November, 1917.

"He was the originator of the idea of buying The New York Evening Mail, of the German Publication Society formed to disseminate Kultur literature, and of the Printers' and Publishers' Association, another attempt to create a German newspaper in the English language. He dispensed huge Secret Service and graft funds—nearly $1,500,000 turned over to him by Dr. Albert alone.

"He was one of the partners in the Chemical Exchange Association enterprise, by which all the available phenol was turned aside from the manufacture of picric acid for the Allies, with a profit out of America's pocket to Germany of $1,650,000.

"He it was who employed, financed, and guided Dr. Sheele, who in 1913, in Bogota, N. J., discovered mustard gas, and he transmitted its formula to Germany, through von Papen, as soon as the war broke out. Sheele also acted for Schweitzer in the preparation of bombs for individual efforts at destruction. Sheele, with some thirty other lieutenants of Schweitzer's—all trained chemists—is now interned.

"It appears, therefore, that a dye industry in foreign hands offers perfect cover for the most dangerous hostile activities. In the next war, a handful of trained chemists, safely concealed in an enemy's chemical industries, may be able to do more damage than a field army or a fleet. To be safe, we must see to it that our most vital chemical industry is in loyal hands.

"Only a native dye industry can insure the progress of industrial chemistry. The making of colors is the most complex existing industry. Over 900 colors, each a different chemical substance, were habitually imported before the war. More than 11,000 distinct dyes were made in Germany by one single house, the Badische Anelin and Soda Fabrik. Each is produced by a separate process, usually of many operations. In addition to these uses coal-tar products are equally indispensible to pharmaceutical manufacturers and are the foundation of the one great chemical industry of purely American origin—the manufacture of the so-called condensation products—like bakelite, condensite and redmanol.

More than 11,000 distinct dyes were made in Germany by one single house, the Badische Anelin and Soda Fabrik. Each is produced by a separate process, usually of many operations.

"There is an incessant demand for new shades and for means of adapting old colors to new fabrics and different processes. The result is that a dye industry provides a livelihood for many times as many research chemists as any other business.

Need for American Industry.

"Only a domestic dye industry can insure American progress in scientific and medical chemistry. The research requirements are so vast that they far transcend industrial bounds. The workers in the laboratories range far and wide over the whole world of organic chemistry, and their annual contribution of scientific data is of incalculable value.

"This is particularly true in medical chemistry, that field of which the systematic exploration is barely begun. For centuries the medical profession has been pouring into the human system drugs of which next to nothing was really known. Now the beginnings—postponed perhaps by the immense results of medical work in the biological field, with its serums and anti-toxins—have been fairly made; and the greatest progress has been made not only with the aid of the dye laboratories but actually in them.

"In the laboratories of any great German dye works, before the war, it was a common sight to see dozens of university chemists, unconnected with any industry, at work side by side with the industrial scientists. Some of the results were startling. One of these was Salvarsan itself. Indeed, medical research is an almost inevitable outgrowth of the dye business.

"Our industry, if saved now, will suffice. At the outbreak of the war, patriotic American business men, realizing the consequences of a dye famine, threw themselves and many millions of capital into the breach and saved the situation. Tackling the task of developing, under the burden of war conditions, the most complicated known industry, they accomplished wonders. The manufacture of crudes was so vastly increased as to place the raw materials on a favorable basis. As a result, in 1918 the industry not only produced all the requirements of the domestic market, (in quantity, not variety,) but exported dyes to the amount of "Today nearly 200 of the 900-odd colors used in 1913 are made here, and many others are in course of production. Production of some of the most desirable dyes, notably the very fast dyes, were supplied by the German-owned patents, which had prevented their manufacture here.

Fear Crushing by Germany.

"Why the Industry Needs and Deserves Help.—It deserves help because the large investment now locked up in its plants represents a bold and patriotic effort by many valuable citizens to meet a national emergency.

"It needs help because the industry is up against the most formidable and unscrupulous opponent and competitor in the commercial world. The German industry, favored by nature with cheap material, labor, transportation, and technical service, and aided by the Government, has a start of forty years in the race—an incalculable advantage in knowledge and technical skill. It has always waged ruthless commercial warfare by destructive, underselling, direct bribery, and other corrupt practices.

"Its plants are organized on an enormous scale. In 1916, this huge industry, realizing its danger, consolidated into a single gigantic trust, organized to fight for the recovery of its foreign markets. The assets of this commercial monstrosity may be fairly valued at over $400,000,000. It will doubtless have all the aid the new Government can give it.

"France and England, determined to have their own dye industries, are closing their doors to German dyes. So is Japan. Is it not as certain as anything in human experience, that the German trust will stick at nothing to regain its great American market? If the American industry is left to shift for itself, it will be 'spuris versenkt.'

"Why no other remedy will serve.—Only three other remedies have been suggested, a high tariff, a strict corrupt practice act and the application of the anti-trust law.

"The tariff will not save our industry, because the German trust is too strong and too desperate. It can still undoubtedly produce far more cheaply than we. Its resources are enormous. It is in a position where it can practically give its goods away for a year or two, if thereby it can kill off competition. No matter what tariff is imposed, short of a duty equal to the price of domestic goods, the German price could be cut low enough to compel our makers to sell at a loss.

Plea for Licensing Plan.

"Nor will anti-dumping laws suffice, even if coupled with a tariff. All such laws hitherto devised put the burden on the injured party. Often such proof is unobtainable. If our industry is to have no better shields than such legislation, it may well be killed before ever the protection becomes available. The same may be said of the anti-trust law. To prove that particular goods are the product of the trust can be made infinitely difficult. Till such proof is produced the law will not operate.

"If we do not adopt the licensing plan we shall be left alone to fight, not only the German trust, but the industries of the Allies. England, Japan, and France are developing as fast as possible, mostly with the aid of direct Government subsidies, their own dye industries. Each now excludes our dyes, except as imperatively needed. Each will seek an export market, at the same time keeping up the bars against our products. Are we, then, to 'hold the bag'? From every point of view, the licensing plan is the one safe, certain remedy which will insure to the country the permanence of the industry on which economic and scientific progress and national security depends."

WARNS PRUSSIANS TO KEEP KAISER OUT

Majority Socialist Speaker Says Emperor Should Be in "Pathological Ward."

NOT WANTED IN GERMANY

Delegates at Weimar Cheer the Strong Utterances Made by Mueller.

BERLIN, June 14. (Associated Press.)—The Majority Socialist Party conference, at today's session, voted unanimously in favor of a united German Republic. Other action taken by the conference was:

It voted down the Government project to create a fund of 1,000,000,000 marks to be obtained by adding an extra hour to the working day, the pay for which will go to the Government.

It condemned the recent execution by the Bavarian Government of the Communist leader Levine Nissen.

It voted in favor of the withdrawal of the German troops from Esthonia and Lithuania.

It passed a resolution demanding the abolition of the death penalty.

The conference session will be continued tomorrow, when it is expected that additional members of the party will make their contributions to the flow of words which has marked the sessions so far held.

The former Emperor William "belongs in the pathological ward," and is not wanted in Germany, declared Herman Mueller, Majority Socialist leader and whip in the National Assembly, in a speech before the convention today.

Herr Mueller, who is one of the most conservative of the Socialists, referring to the rumor that an attempt was to be made to bring about the return of the ex-Emperor, warned the Prussians said to be interested in such a move that a majority of the German people would not permit his return. The speaker declared that the former ruler was dangerous to the country, and blamed his verbosity for Germany's misfortunes.

Herr Mueller's speech was received with cheers.

HOETZENDORFF CALLED AN INSTIGATOR OF WAR

Austrian Field Marshal in Book Says Emperor Was Unmoved by Outbreak.

VIENNA, June 13, (Associated Press.)—Herr Asterplitz, editor of The Arbeiter Zeitung, commenting on Field Marshal Hoetzendorff's book, entitled "The Road to Catastrophe," says the General should be classed with Count von Berchtold, former Foreign Minister, as an instigator of the war.

Hoetzendorff in his book says that he always advocated war with Italy when he was Chief of Staff, knowing that Italy would fail Austria in case of war, and knowing also that Austria could defeat Italy in a few weeks. But the Emperor, he adds, always refused to meet his wishes.

Concerning the ultimatum to Serbia by Austria, Hoetzendorff says that when Berchtold read it in the Council no one objected to its being sent. The Field Marshal says he saw the Emperor at the end of July and told him that war was necessary. The Emperor appeared unmoved and merely asked how the mobilization was proceeding.

The Field Marshal adds that Francis Joseph signed the declaration of war without quivering, remarking, "If it must be, it is well."

FIUME TO RAISE ARMY TO DEFEND HER CLAIMS

Votes $20,000,000 Bond Issue—Sem Benelli Named to Oganize the Troops.

ROME, June 14.—Reports from Fiume say that the National Council met on Friday, and, after reviewing the political situation with the Mayor of the city, concurred in the view that it was necessary to form an army in Fiume for the defense of the city's liberty and independence.

The council voted by acclamation a bill creating an army of Fiume, the necessary funds to be provided by an issue of treasury bonds amounting to 8'0,-000,000. The council decided to intrust the organization of the army to the poet Sem Benelli, a former Captain in the Italian Army, and also decreed that justice throughout the territory of Fiume be administered in the name of the King of Italy.

SAY HUNGARIAN REDS MASSACRED 3,000

Bloodthirsty Revenge on Apathetic Village People Reported by Anti-Bolshevist Bureau.

COULD NOT GET RECRUITS

Feeble Force of Farmers, with Their Families, Mowed Down with Cannon and Machine Guns.

Copyright, 1919, by Chicago Tribune Co.

VIENNA, June 7, (via Paris, June 15.)—According to the anti-Bolshevist Press Bureau, the Hungarian Government Bolsheviats have just massacred 3,000 people in the village of Kohlnhof, near Oedenburg, in Western Hungary, near the Austrian border.

The statement says that for more than a month the Bolsheviki have been carrying on a campaign for recruits in that neighborhood unsuccessfully. The meetings were thinly attended and no recruits were obtained. To punish the people for their lack of enthusiasm the Budapest Government sent a body of Lenin boys into the district, requisitioning food and men.

The Reds plundered stores and houses, mistreated women, and acted so thoroughly brutal that the young men of thirty-two villages banded together to put an end to it. They organized a little army of about 2,000, of whom 600 were armed with rifles, the rest with scythes, clubs and any kind of weapon they could obtain, determined to drive the reds out of Oedenburg.

The Reds got wind of the movement and sent 6,000 troops, among them being some of the most blood-thirsty of the Reds, against them. The Reds had three batteries, plenty of field pieces and machine guns. They surrounded the farmers at Kohlnhof.

Seeing their case was hopeless, the farmers sent a representative to treat with the Reds. The Reds killed him, then opened fire on the village. The women and children, taking flight, were shot down by the machine guns, and almost all the persons in the village were killed by gunfire. What few persons remained were hanged when the Reds entered the village. The village itself was burned.

The press bureau says it has the story from a person just returned from the scene.

WILL PLAN FINANCING OF FOREIGN TRADE

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Members of the Advisory Council of the Federal Reserve Board have been summoned to meet here next Friday for a conference as to the best means of financing essential foreign purchases in this country. This preliminary discussion, Governor Harding said today, would be followed by a larger conference about July 1 in which representatives of banks and business interests throughout the country would be asked to participate.

Plans now under consideration by financial interests to organize a group of trade corporations, similar to that in process of organization to finance cotton exports, probably will be reviewed thoroughly by the conferences.

WILSON TO BACK PALMER?

Story from Princeton to That Effect Reaches Baltimore.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, June 15.—A Princeton alumnus, in a telegram from Princeton to The American says:

"Woodrow Wilson will not be a candidate next year for the Democratic nomination for President. This statement is made on the authority of one of the President's classmates, who are holding their reunion here. This gentleman, who has long possessed the confidence of the President, is in position to know the President's plans.

"According to this same authority, the President will throw the weight of his influence to Attorney General Palmer of Pennsylvania for the nomination for President. A few Democratic leaders have been let into the secret and are feeling public sentiment to ascertain if a boom for the Attorney General can be carried through.

"That President Wilson is growing weary of the hard task which he is performing in Paris is indicated by the following cablegram, dated May 29, and read last night to the class of 1879:

"'I am afraid I cannot get to Princeton by the 14th, and that I shall miss what would be the greatest possible refreshment to me in meeting the boys then, and so I beg that you will give them the most affectionate messages from me and tell them how cheering it is to me always to think of the friendship and of the old days we spent together. It has been hard work over here, but has been lightened the way through by the thought of the glorious country I was working for, which I love more and more every day.'

"The cablegram was addressed to Robert Bridges of New York, Secretary of the class."

OUR TROOPS CROSS TO END JUAREZ FIGHT

the Federal troops was resumed in Juarez at 4:40 P. M. Sunday. By 6 P. M. the rifle fire was more general than at any time the previous night.

Federal troops charged the rebels as they advanced down Calle Comercio, the principal business street, repulsing them.

Colonel J. Gonzalez Escobar, the garrison commander, was wounded five times. He was hurried to El Paso for treatment.

The fight swung to the south and at a late hour was in progress around the abandoned Juarez Agricultural College, where Villa had his seventy wounded.

As the Federals apparently were not expecting an attack before dark, the outer line of trenches was thinly manned, and the Federals withdrew toward the town proper, carrying their machine guns and boxes of Mauser ammunition with them.

Reinforcements were hurried from the flats to the west of the town, where no military activity had yet occurred, and down the steep hill from Fort Hidalgo, and they engaged the advancing enemy.

After dawn Sunday the firing became Corporal Earl O. Smith, Twenty-fourth (Colored) Infantry, had been wounded by stray bullets. A military pass is necessary to cross to Juarez. Villa forces rode to the south end of the international bridge before retiring. Bullets struck hotels and buildings in downtown El Paso during the fighting. Troops patrolled the river front to prevent Villa raids.

An unidentified woman was shot and killed instantly tonight by a stray bullet, bringing the total hit by Mexican bullets on the American side of the border to six.

An additional battalion and two companies of the 19th Infantry, one battalion of which is now here, were ordered tonight to entrain at Douglas, Ariz., and proceed to El Paso. The reinforcements are expected to arrive tomorrow. They will be used for patrol duty along the riverfront.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, June 15.—Major Gen. De Rosey Cabell, commander of the Southern Department, U. S. A., is on his way to El Paso.

Battle Resumed Sunday Afternoon.

JUAREZ, Mexico, Monday, June 16.—Fighting between the Villa forces and desultory on both sides, with an occasional shot from Fort Hidalgo.

Villa's troops during the darkness looted a number of stores and houses.

The Federals claimed to have 150 Villa dead and 60 prisoners, of whom 10 were wounded.

Rumors persisted that many of the Villa prisoners had been executed. Only two executions were seen by The Associated Press correspondent.

Federal dead were estimated at thirty-five. John Anderson, an American, said to have been a prisoner in a Juarez jail, was killed in the door of the police station while the fighting was on.

After six hours of fighting since Saturday midnight, Villa forces began withdrawing from Juarez. Shortage of ammunition and a dashing cavalry charge down Comercio Street by Colonel Escobar were believed to be the cause of the withdrawal, which was toward the eastern suburbs.

The tide of battle flowed for Villa until after 3 A. M., Sunday, when the rebel firing died, and retirement began, with Federals in pursuit.

With the beginning of the battle the exodus of people from Juarez, which had continued all night, was resumed in force. American troops thrown about the ends of bridges and opposite Rio Grande River fords corralled the refugees. One hundred Chinese were the first to cross from Juarez after the attack began. They were detained by American immigration authorities.

Watching American Interests.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Reports of fighting between rebel and Government forces in Juarez, Mexico, directly across the Rio Grande from El Paso, were scanned closely today by State and War Department officials. The fact that bullets had fallen on the American side of the border, endangering American life and property, led to the belief that some action might be ordered by the United States Government, but so far as could be learned tonight at the State Department, no steps had been taken. At the War Department it was reiterated that Major Gen. de Rosey C. Cabell, commanding the border guard, had instructions to deal with the situation as he saw fit.

The War Department, in dispatches forwarded through the headquarters of the Southern Department at Fort Sam Houston, was informed that Villistas still controlled the important section of Juarez at 9 P. M. today. The telegram said a Japanese had been killed and a Mexican woman wounded in El Paso by bullets from the Mexican side.

General Aguilar, head of the special Mexican mission to the United States, tonight made public a dispatch from Juarez saying that in the battle early today it had been officially reported that the Villistas suffered losses of eighty-seven dead, three wounded, and forty-five prisoners. Among the dead, the dispatch added, was Jose Castro, said to be a General in the Villa army. Another officer, Jesus Brillo, who was severely wounded, according to the dispatch, was said to have had in his possession when taken prisoner valuable plans and dispatches belonging to Villa.

GERMANS OBJECTED TO ALL PEACE TERMS

operation with the allied commission. To this the allied reply will be assent.

Germany's call for the evacuation of occupied German territory within six months after the treaty is signed will not be granted, but she will be informed that the allied forces will be reduced to 100,000 men and thec harge for their support will be fixed at a moderate amount payable annually.

In their memorandum German delegates contended for the exercise of purely military control by the allied commanders with a population guaranteed free for exercise of personal and civil rights.

This request will be granted in the allied response. The draft of the treaty provides complete military control.

Further suggested concessions applies to the hope which the Allies in their reply will hold out that Germany will be admitted to the League of Nations. One concerns the length of period of occupation. The allied troops will doubtless be withdrawn when Germany enters the League.

PARIS, June 15.—The German reply and counterproposals to the conditions of peace laid down to them at Versailles on May 7 were made public here today.

The reply covers 119 pages and includes a covering letter by Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau of May 29, which has already been published, and a second section of comments following the main outline of the original draft of the treaty. Two separate documents on legal and financial questions are included as part of the general reply. Both English and French translations have been furnished in pamphlet form, the former totalling about 60,000 words.

The Germans maintain that the allied and associated powers have forsaken the peace of justice to which they solemnly pledged themselves in the armistice negotiations and concluded a peace of might in which all the principles quoted at length from speeches of the statesmen of the allied and associated powers have been violated.

They protest against the proposed terms individually and collectively, demand a return to the original agreements, press for oral negotiations and state that Germany expects justice on a basis of equality and reciprocity.

The reply begins with a detailed analysis of the legal basis of peace, alleges a flagrant series of contradictions to this basis, and points out that the result of acceptance of the allied terms would be the complete enslavement of the German people and the betrayal of all the world's cherished hopes of peace.

In the counterproposals Germany demands immediate admission to the League of Nations in part fulfilment of the spirit of the armistice agreement and as necessary for the acceptance of the proposed military, naval, and air terms. She then analyzes the territorial changes demanded, asserting that the right of self-determination has been wilfully violated throughout the treaty.

One bitterly assails the abolition of all German rights outside Europe as irreconcilable with the preliminary negotiations and as wholly impossible to a great people which not only has supreme need for markets and supplies, but has shown itself capable of sharing the world's task of colonization.

Germany professes to be wholly unable to accept the Reparations Commission set up by the Allies as involving an infringement of her sovereignty, but proposes a co-operative German commission to work alongside it. She accepts responsibility only for civilian losses in occupied Belgium and France and agrees to maximum payments of 100,000,000,000 marks, provided the other terms as to colonies, overseas trade, and territories are accepted as she proposes. As to deliveries of ships, raw materials, and machinery, she can meet the allied claims only in part, largely because of decreased production.

Germany demands that in the economic provisions she be treated on a basis of equality and reciprocity, and not in the one-sided way outlined. She agrees to freedom of traffic on German rivers and within Germany, but always on condition that there be no interference with German sovereignty. Similarly, with the renewal of treaties which have lapsed through the war, she expects reciprocal treatment rather than the assumption by the Allies of the right to say what engagements are or are not to become operative again.

The Germans refuse to accept the trial of the ex-Kaiser or to sanction his extradition from Holland on the ground that no German subject can be brought before a foreign court without established law of legal basis. Similarly, she cannot agree to extradite other subjects accused of violations of the laws and customs of war. Instead, she proposes an international court of neutrals to judge the fact of crime, the punishment to remain with the national courts.

The labor clauses are not satisfactory to Germany, and, as a result, she she again proposes an international conference to examine the allied and associated proposals, the German proposals, and the Berne resolutions. A bitter protest is entered against the occupation of the Rhine provinces, and the demand is made that all allied troops be withdrawn within six months of the date on which peace is concluded. The occupation as proposed, it is contended, would break up German economic life and allow the prejudicing of German interests in favor of France and Belgium.

The summary sent herewith makes no attempt to criticise any statements of facts or figures made in the reply. The German delegation alone is responsible for them; but it may be stated that many of them, especially as to the eastern frontiers, are disputable, if not absolutely incorrect, and that facts bearing in the opposite direction have been omitted.

The first part of the German comments contains general remarks.

CHAPTER I.
The Legal Basis of Peace.

The German delegates state that they entered upon their task with the conviction that the contents of the treaty of peace had in principle been outlined by the events preceding it.

They then recapitulate the interchange of communications with President Wilson between Oct. 15, 1918, and the armistice on Nov. 11. As a result of these they consider that Germany, as a basis of peace, has expressly accepted President Wilson's Fourteen Points and nothing else. The acceptance of the terms of the armistice was to be evidence for the honest acceptance of these conditions by Germany. This evidence has been furnished. The Allies also have accepted President Wilson's Fourteen Points, and a solemn agreement as to the basis of peace therefore exists between the two contracting parties. Germany has a right to this basis, and the Allies, by forsaking it, would break an international legal agreement. But the practical application of the principles must be negotiated upon and Germany has a right to discussion.

CHAPTER II.
Contradictions.

Chapter II. deals at length with the alleged contradiction between the draft of the treaty and this agreed basis, taken in connection with previous assurances of the statesmen of the Entente. The delegates point out that their enemies have repeatedly professed that they were not making war against the German people, but against an imperialistic and irresponsible Government. But the conditions of peace are an obvious contradiction to such assurances.

Speeches of Mr. Asquith, Lord Robert Cecil, Winston Churchill, and President Wilson are quoted as proving that the war was not intended to be against the German people. Today, however, the allied powers are facing not an irresponsible German Government, but the German people ruling its own future for itself. This has been utterly disregarded in the draft treaty, and it cannot be imagined that dearlier terms could have been imposed upon an imperialistic Government.

Again, it was affirmed that the peace to be concluded with Germany was to be a peace of right and not of might. To this effect speeches of M. Painlevé, M. Pichon, Winston Churchill, Mr. Balfour, Bonar Law, Mr. Lloyd George, and President Wilson are quoted.

But the Peace Treaty shows that none of these solemn assurances have been kept. The purely German territory of the Sarre is to be separated from the German Empire for at least fifteen years' period, the line of demarkation for a plebiscite in Schleswig has been traced through purely German districts and goes further than Denmark herself wished.

In the east, Upper Silesia is to be separated from Germany and conveyed to Poland, though it has had no political connection with Poland for 750 years. The Province of Posen and most of West Prussia are to be separated from Germany, though millions of Germans are living there. The Memel district is also to be separated, in order to cut off Germany economically from Russia. East Prussia is to be isolated from the Empire; the purely German city of Danzig is to become a free city. The settlement of the colonial question is equally unjust. Germany has a natural claim to colonies from her culture and undeniable colonial accomplishments.

Further provisions are equally contrary to a peace of right, such as those insisting that Germany should recognize beforehand treaties which may be entered into by her enemies, with the States formerly part of the Russian Empire. The economic provisions for the liquidation of German property within the territories of the Allies, the claim that German citizens must be handed over to courts of the hostile powers, the insistence on Germany acknowledging her responsibility for all damage incurred by the German Government hostile to her, are all contrary to the innate rights of nations.

Again, as to the League of Nations, Germany had repeatedly been promised that the League of Nations would unite the belligerents, conquerors as well as conquered, to secure the world against future disasters. To this effect speeches are quoted by Mr. Asquith, Lord Robert Cecil, Lord Grey, M. Ribot, and President Wilson.

All these utterances made it a matter of course that Germany would from the beginning take part in establishing the League of Nations, but the statute of the League has been established without German help, and Germany is not even invited to join the League. Germany's importance is indefinite in term of temporary military or political position. If she is not admitted it is impossible to speak of a League of Nations.

The enemies of Germany have repeatedly assured the whole world that they do not aim at the destruction of Germany. Speeches to this effect by Lloyd George, Lord Milner, M. Pichon and President Wilson are quoted.

But the proposed treaty of peace shows that Germany's position as a world power is to be destroyed in every possible manner. Economic provisions are cited to prove the intended destruction of German economic life, both at home and abroad, even to the detail of the confiscation of her cables.

During the war a new principle has been put forward, the right of self-determination of nations. Speeches proclaiming this principle by Mr. Asquith, Mr. Churchill, Lord Lansdowne, Mr. Lloyd George, Signor Orlando, M. Pichon, and President Wilson are quoted or alluded to.

But the treatment of the inhabitants of the Sarre region, and of the district of Eupen-Moresnet and Malmedy, do not comply with such a solemn recognition of this right. The same is true about Alsace-Lorraine, the cession of which without consulting the population would be a new wrong.

If 2,500,000 Germans are to be torn away from their native land against their own will, this cannot be considered compatible with self-determination. Statistics are given with regard to the number of districts in Central and Upper Silesia and Southeast Prussia to prove that the majority of the population is German.

The cession of Danzig and Memel is claimed to be equally contrary to the principles laid down, as is the refusal to allow the German Austrians to unite with Germany, and the compulsion exercised on millions of Germans to remain part of the newly created Czechoslovak State. Even in Germany itself the right of self-determination is denied by the nomination of an alien commission to carry out the conditions of the treaty, surrender of independence which may not be inflicted upon any State.

CHAPTER II.
Results.

A brief third chapter deals with the results of the draft period. The delegates claim it involves the utter destruction of German economic life, and leaves the German people to a financial slavery of a kind unknown in history. The delegates point out that this would first make itself felt in the sphere of economics, for Germany's creditors could not obtain the immense sums required from a pauperized country. The elimination of Germany from the world's trade might get rid of a troublesome competitor, but the world, already impoverished by the war, would become infinitely poorer.

The world now requires an international community of labor, to which Germany agrees. But the proposed treaty is merely a celebration of the last triumph of imperialist and capitalist tendencies. The delegates appeal to the innate right of men and nations; the proposed treaty is incompatible with respect for this innate right; but in the resolve to fulfil her obligations Germany makes the counterproposals which follow.

Part II.

CHAPTER I.
The League of Nations.

A lasting peace can only be obtained by way of a League of Nations which guarantees equal rights for the great and small powers. Germany has already submitted its own proposals for such a league, but the delegation is to negotiate on the basis of the Allied proposals if Germany is admitted on equal terms as soon as peace has been signed. At the same time clauses must be inserted, guaranteeing complete equality in trade conditions and freedom from external interference and prevailing economic warfare and exclusion by boycott.

Germany is to agree to the basic idea of army, navy, and air regulations and especially to the abolition of compulsory military service, in the beginning of a general reduction of armaments and abandonment of compulsory military service. Their own readiness to proceed in this respect is proved of their sincerity. But a period of transition must be allowed during which Germany may retain such forces as are required to preserve internal order before reducing her army to the 100,000 limit. On condition that Germany enters the League at once she will dismantle the fortresses in the west and establish a neutral zone, but no special supervision of the process of disarmament, except that of the League, can be admitted, and a extension of time must be granted after discussion on a basis of equality.

Under the provision of a financial arrangement Germany is to surrender not only the surface warships demanded, but however, the allied powers are also to accept all general regulations of the League as regards aviation.

Immediate oral negotiations to settle details are proposed. Germany is to do everything in her power to preserve humanity from another war, and if the nations are disappointed in their hope of this it will not be her fault.

CHAPTER III.
Territorial Questions.

Chapter II. deals with territorial questions. The first section lays down the principle of the right of self-determination in accordance with President Wilson's four points in his speech of Feb. 11, 1918, and the second point in his speech of July 4, 1918. The German delegations claim that on these principles the cession of Upper Silesia and the Sarre district cannot be demanded at all, and that where territorial cession can be acquiesced in it must be preceded in every case by a plebiscite with universal suffrage under fair conditions administered by a neutral power after evacuation of foreign troops. Further proposals are made as the exchange of enclaves and the filling of frontiers. This section also advocates the principle of protection of national minorities under the League, including such German minorities as may pass under alien sovereignty. These must be afforded the fullest possible cultural autonomy.

The second section deals with Belgium. It claims that the contested territories of Moresnet and Prussian Moresnet have a German majority. Eupen again is purely German, and the Walloons are considerably in a minority in Malmedy. Germany cannot consent in principle to the cession of such indisputably German districts, and in these instances a real plebiscite is not provided for. Germany is prepared to supply wood from the Eupen forests in reparation to Belgium, but cannot consent to the bartering of human beings. The brief third section on Luxemburg declares that the proposed economic and political conditions are one-sided and inadmissable.

The fourth section deals at considerable length with the Sarre district. Germany declares that the frontiers have been drawn to include important industrial districts beyond the coal mines, but even the cession of the mining district could not be admitted. A supply of coal can be guaranteed; but the total coal computed to exist in the Sarre mines would represent a hundred times the maximum French demands.

The population of the Sarre district is peculiarly uniform and has been attached to Germany for over a thousand years, during which period France has possessed it not more than sixty-eight years. The people today are as German as they were a hundred years ago, when they demanded reunion with Germany, but on account of the coal mines they are put under an abnormal and unfavorable form of Government; and since the armistice they have begun to learn what they will have to suffer.

All this is no compensation for coal destroyed in the north; but such a question can only be settled on an economic basis, not by tearing away a nationally undisputed territory and degrading the League of Nations by involving it in the transaction. The German Government declines to make any reparation in the form of punishment, and still more emphatically declines to pass on to individual parts of the population the punishment intended for the whole of the community. The annexation of the Sarre district to France would mean the creation of another Alsace-Lorraine, and Germany claims that the whole question must be reconsidered.

The fifth section, dealing with Alsace-Lorraine, insists that for the most part this district is German, but admits that according to present conceptions of right an injustice was committed in 1871 when the people were not consulted. Germany has therefore promised reparation, but it would be no reparation to cede Alsace-Lorraine with its immensely increased economic wealth to France at once.

The vote must be taken allowing a choice between union with France, union with Germany as a free State and complete independence. If the population should decide for France, the present conditions must be modified as to the dating back of the cession and the question of nationality; and if France is to take over the results of Germany's effort she must equally take over a proportionate share in the German debt.

A short sixth section declares that Germany has never intended to shift the frontier with Austria by force, but cannot pledge herself to oppose a possible desire of German Austria to be united with her.

A long and important seventh section deals with Germany's eastern frontiers. Germany has agreed to a creation of an independent Polish State, but the terms of the treaty include in it a number of totally German town and extensive German tracts of land for military or economic reasons, without regard to nationality or to history.

It is claimed that this particularly applies to Upper Silesia, which has had no connection with the Polish empire since 1163. The wishes of the inhabitants have been clearly expressed by the elections of the Reichstag in 1903 and 1907, when the majority voted for German rather than Polish Deputies. In 1919, when the Poles proclaimed their abstention from voting, 90 per cent. of possible voters voted for German candidates.

With regard to language, the parents of less than 25 per cent. of the school children have declared themselves in favor of education in a non-German language under the new provisions, and the Polish dialect spoken by a considerable part of the Upper Silesians is really a mixed language, and does not represent a mark of nationality.

Upper Silesia owes everything to Germany. Germany cannot dispense with Upper Silesia, while Poland does not really need it. The Upper Silesian coal has supplied almost the whole industry of Eastern Germany, and last year the output was 43,500,000 metric tons. Poland at the same period used about 10,500,000 tons, and the Polish output was nearly 7,000,000. Half the deficit came from Upper Silesia, the remainder from the mines now in Czechoslovakia, but the new Poland could probably supply herself with all of the coal she needs.

German conditions for working class life are incomparably better than those in Poland, and the cession of Upper Silesia, to which Germany cannot consent, would be as disadvantageous to its own population as to the rest of mankind.

The Province of Posen cannot be regarded as indisputably Polish. Germany is prepared to cede such parts as are truly Polish, but the proposed frontiers are based on obsolete strategic, not national, considerations.

As to West Prussia, the treaty gives almost the whole of it, and even part of Pomerania, to Poland. West Prussia is claimed as old German territory on which the Polish dominion of 300 years has left little trace. In the district assigned, directly or indirectly, to Poland it is claimed that the population includes about 744,000 Germans against 580,000 Poles and Cassubians, who are not to be identified with the Poles, and the German population is of far greater economic and cultural importance.

Germany cannot consent to the severance of East Prussia, with the German population thus isolated, and a belt from the German Empire. A connecting bridge must absolutely be preserved, but Germany is ready to cede to Poland such West Prussian territories as are indisputably Polish.

The cession of Danzig, a purely German town, is claimed to be in direct opposition with President Wilson's principles. To make it a free city and to surrender certain of its rights to Poland would lead to violent opposition and a continuous state of war in the East. Danzig must remain with the German Empire. But Germany is ready to make Memel, Konigsberg, and Dansig free ports, in order to secure to Poland the promised access to the sea, and to grant special transit facilities under specified conditions reciprocally applied.

In the southern parts of East Prussia a plebiscite is demanded; but these districts are not indisputably Polish, and the fact that a non-German language is spoken in certain districts is in itself of no importance.

With regard to Meterel and the adjoining districts, even the Lithuanian-speaking inhabitants have never shown any desire to separate from Germany, and the delegates state that in the whole territory there are about 65,000 Germans, as against about 54,000 Lithuanian-speaking inhabitants, who generally also speak German. Memel in particular is claimed as a purely German town, and Germany therefore declines to cede this territory.

If any German territory is ultimately ceded to Poland, Germany must protect its former nationals. This is all the more necessary because the Poles have not so far shown themselves trustworthy protectors of the national and religious rights of minorities.

The Germans further protest against the regulations as to change of nationality, and against the lack of security for German interests in the districts affected; and they demand a commission to assess damages caused by recent Polish disturbances.

In the eighth section the German delegates agree to the holding of a plebiscite in Schleswig, although this point was not mentioned by President Wilson. They protest, however, against the delimitation of the voting districts, and propose another boundary and a different system of voting and control for the plebiscite.

A short ninth section accepts the dismantling of Heligoland, but insists on any measure necessary for the protection of the coast in the interest of the population.

The tenth section deals with colonies. The delegates maintain that the demand that Germany should relinquish all her rights and claims is an irreconcilable contradiction of Point 5 of President Wilson's address to Congress of Jan. 8, 1918, which promised a free, sincere, and impartial settlement of colonial claims.

Germany's claim is based on the fact that she has acquired them lawfully and developed them laboriously. The possession of them will be even more necessary to her in the future than in the past, as, owing to the low rate of exchange, she must obtain raw material from her own colonies. She further requires her colonies as a market, and as settlements for a part of her surplus population.

As a great civilized nation, the German people have the right to co-operate in the joint task of mankind, in which they have already achieved great things. The interests of the colored population of the colonies speak for Germany remaining in possession of them, for the German administration established abuses and introduced peace, order, justice, health, education, and Christianity.

Germany has clearly looked after the interests of the natives. She has refrained from militarizing them, and has adhered to the principle of the open door. The demand that the colonies should be renounced is therefore considered unjustified.

Without modifying this position, the delegates further point out that the conditions under which the cession is demanded are unacceptable in detail, particularly as to State and private property and compensation; and they claim that any mandatory power should pay all expenses incurred by the German Empire, and that the territory should still be responsible for liabilities incurred.

They therefore make a counterproposal that an impartial hearing of the colonial question should take place before a special committee.

Germany claims that though justified in demanding the restoration of her colonies, she is ready to administer them according to the principles of the League of Nations if a league is formed which she can enter at once as a member with equal privileges.

The eleventh section agrees to the renunciation of German rights and privileges regarding Kiao-Chau and Shantung, with certain stipulations as to compensation.

Section 12 deals with Russia and the Russian States. Germany does not claim or propose to interfere with any territory which belonged to the former Russian empire. The peace of Brest-Litovsk has already been renounced in the armistice.

But Germany cannot recognise any right on the part of Russia to demand restitution and reparation, and it is only able to recognize the relevant treaties and agreements if their contents are known, and if they do not prove to be unacceptable.

CHAPTER III.
Germany's Rights Outside Europe.

The German delegates complain that according to the draft treaty Germany is to have no rights whatever in Europe outside her own frontiers.

If Germany is to continue to exist, the realization of these terms is impossible. Germany must have the use of shipping, but she is called upon to deliver up her entire overseas fleet with all tonnage which happened to be in enemy harbors at the beginning of the war. Further, the Allies refuse to recognise the decisions of German prize courts or to consider German claims for damages, while German seaports are deliberately weakened by a number of claims, so that a reconstructed German mercantile fleet will encounter totally unfair conditions in traffic.

The German submarine cables are to be taken away. Germany's foreign trade is to be excluded from all kinds of activity. Germany is called upon to violate the Egyptian right to self-determination by recognising the British protectorate. All concessions and privileges acquired in Russia since August, 1914, are annulled, and many other foreign rights are left in jeopardy.

The Allies have proposed economic and financial provisions which put Germany under a continued disadvantage, and they reserve to themselves the right to take exceptional war measures in regard to German rights, properties, and interests abroad, so that German citizens will be placed in an unbearable state of uncertainty.

The German delegates cannot reconcile such provisions with the principles of impartial justice. They may offer great advantages to rival merchants, but do nothing toward repairing the damage which Germany has undertaken to make good. It is only natural that the German people should now believe that the Allies intend to stamp out German commercial competition. The German delegates lay great stress on the necessity of granting full and reciprocal freedom of action whenever possible, and outline the proposals repeated in the following chapter:

CHAPTER IV.
Reparation.

Germany accepts the obligation to pay for all damages sustained by the civil populations in the occupied parts of Belgium and France, inasmuch as she brought upon them the terrors of war by a breach of international law through the violation of Belgian neutrality. She opposes reparation to other occupied territories in Italy, Montenegro, Serbia, Rumania, and Poland, as no attack in contradiction to international law was involved.

She voluntarily consents to responsibility for Belgian loans, but claims that the Allies have far exceeded in the categories of damages named in the draft treaty the agreements entered into at the armistice, especially in holding Germany responsible for losses to civilians outside the occupied territories, to the States themselves, to military persons, and in losses caused by Germany's allies.

Germany contests certain specific responsibilities, particularly as to the costs of an army of occupation, which she considers both unnecessary and uneconomic. She cannot accept the Reparation Commission as outlined, as the giving of such dictatorial powers would mean a renunciation of sovereignty. The commission would be both jury and judge, and the greater part of the reparations could only be collected by force. A German commission is therefore proposed for co-operation with this commission, any disagreement to be finally decided by a mixed court of arbitration under neutral presidency.

Germany is anxious to co-operate in the restoration of France and Belgium, to which end proposals will be shortly made. She recognizes the principle that her taxation shall be not less heavy than by any allied State, but predicates her whole attitude, as to reparations, upon the acceptance of her general proposals on the ground that she can bear the heavy burdens imposed only if her territory is not divided up, her industrial as well as her food basis not destroyed, and her overseas connections, colonies, and mercantile fleet retained. Also territories separated from her should pay their proportionate share of the war debt.

Germany agrees to issue, four weeks after peace, Government bonds for 20,000,000,000 marks gold, payable before May 1, 1926, and for the remainder of the reparations to draw up deeds for annual payments without interest, beginning May 1, 1927, the total not to exceed 100,000,000,000 marks, including repayments to Belgium, deliveries of materials during the armistice, and other concessions required. The annuity to be paid each year is to be fixed as a distinct percentage of Germany's revenues, that for the first four years not to exceed 1,000,000,000 marks annually.

Ton for ton replacement of shipping cannot be accepted, as this is entirely beyond Germany's reduced production power, and would destroy the German economic system. She agrees, nevertheless, to construct an even greater tonnage, and over a longer period than stipulated. The demand for the surrender of fishing vessels is impossible owing to their supreme value for the food supply of Germany, and especially as 146 of the 210 fishing boats are demanded. The surrender of the whole overseas merchant fleet is unacceptable, and not over 10 per cent. of the river tonnage should be given over.

Germany acknowledges the principle of placing her resources directly in the service of reparation, but only in so far as not to infringe on her economic sovereignty. To this end they propose a German commission parallel to the Reparations Commission, the two to work out details in co-operation. The requisition of materials shall be carried out, however, in such a way as to avoid the disorganization of German economic life; restrictions must be made first of all from free stocks; the time limits in certain instances must be increased.

Germany agrees, if her situation permits, to export to France coal equal to the difference occasioned by the destruction of the French mines, the maximum to be 20,000,000 tons for the first five years and 5,000,000 tons thereafter. In order, however, to expedite the reconstruction of the French mines, Germany asks to be allowed to devote her skill to this work. She is unable to accord the options for coal demanded owing to decreased production, but is willing to agree to a priority on the surplus over the German inland requirements of the next ten years to meet the requirements of France and Belgium. In return, Germany expects adequate supplies of minerals for her smelting work from Lorraine and France, as to coal derivatives, decreased production makes it possible to deliver only a portion of that demanded.

Germany agrees to the option demanded as to dyestuff and chemical drugs, though refusing to accept price control by the Commission as involving a surrender of business secrets, wholly unwarranted. A continuing option until 1925 is refused as impairing Germany's financial capacity.

In a final paragraph Germany states that shortage of time has made it im-

GERMANY TO HAVE ARMY OF 200,000

New Terms Double Her Allowance—League to Protect German Minorities.

EARLY ADMISSION PLEDGED

As a Member in "Near Future" She Will Have a Voice In Reparations Discussions.

PARIS, June 15, (Associated Press.)—Germany is to be allowed to have an army of 200,000 men for three years. This is one of the changes in the peace terms which has been sedulously kept secret.

The reason given for this doubling of the previous number of effectives is the impossibility of adjusting the armies of Austria, Poland, Czechoslovakia, and other new States proportionately to the previously arranged 100,000 men for Germany.

A general reduction of armaments is to be negotiated immediately.

A plebiscite for Upper Silesia will be taken in from six to eighteen months.

A new clause in the treaty deals with the protection by the League of Nations of German minorities inhabiting the districts taken from Germany. Another deals with the Interallied Civil Commission, which will administer the left bank of the Rhine, occupied by the allied troops, to which the existing Military Commission will be subordinated.

The Council of Five will resume on Monday its study of the conditions of peace with Austria and will discuss the terms of the reply to be made to the recent note handed in by Dr. Karl Renner, the head of the Austrian delegation.

The Council of Foreign Ministers is engaged at present in examining the question of fixing the boundary between Poland and the Ukraine.

According to the Temps, Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau will receive tomorrow a covering letter with appendices dealing with each question raised by the German counter-proposals and amendments, to such articles of the preliminaries of May 7 as the Council of Five has rectified.

These amendments will remain confidential, as did the text itself of the preliminaries of May 7. The covering letter and appendices will be published Tuesday.

Peace Conference editors and printers have been working unceasingly today and tonight preparing the answer to the German counter-proposals. It will undoubtedly be presented tomorrow afternoon, although tonight it is still far from completion.

DUTCH AID IN PROPAGANDA.

Make Vigorous and Indignant Protest Against Peace Terms.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, June 15.—The Germans, with the close co-operation of the Dutch, are still keeping up an energetic propaganda and protest against the peace conditions. Tonight there appears a full-page advertisement in the Rotterdamsche Courant, divided into three sub-columns. President Wilson's Fourteen Points are enumerated in the first column as "What Wilson Promised." The second column is headed "What His Friends Made of It." The third reads: "How Germany Wishes to Fulfill Wilson's Program."

Special large headlines are used for the paragraphs relating to self-determination, annexation, and indemnities.

It would only be wasting telegraph tolls to enumerate the stereotyped, well-worn arguments used by the Germans and repeated parrot-like ever since by the Dutch. The pro-allied Telegraaf publishes the same, pointing out on its editorial page that a refusal to publish political advertisements is against its policy. Just as the Dutch have not ceased to bemoan and bewail the harshness of the armistice terms, ever since the publication of the peace conditions they have kept up a constant chorus of lamenting and abuse re-echoed from the German papers and not a whit less indignant.

Petitions signed by hundreds of prominent citizens and members of the aristocracy, who are closely related to Germany, appear in the papers, protesting against a peace of violence and detention of prisoners. Not a day passes but some fresh protest appears.

TOLD NOT TO RESIST AN ALLIED ADVANCE

German Newspapers Opposite Occupied Area Caution Civilians to Stay in Home Towns.

COBLENZ, June 12, (Associated Press.)—A proclamation cautioning civilians to remain in their home towns and refrain from acts of resentment if allied troops cross the Rhine in force and advance further into Germany, is published in German newspapers opposite the Mayence, Coblenz, and Cologne bridgeheads.

The proclamation is a result of reports that civilians in villages over a radius of ninety miles beyond the occupied zones, were planning to withdraw or were moving into the interior of Germany. In some villages opposite Coblenz, Burgomasters have ordered district government employees to remain at their posts, even if the Allies should come.

German newspapers continue, however, to publish articles showing that steps may be taken to prevent the possible internment of males of military age in secondary schools. Pupils in the highest classes in preparatory schools are ordinarily required to take examinations at the end of the school year in July. The Minister of Education has issued an order permitting such pupils in institutions on the right bank of the Rhine to take emergency examinations immediately. Newspapers say that the order was given so that pupils might be able to leave their schools in case the armistice should be terminated and the territory occupied by the Allies.

possible to give an exhaustive statement and therefore proposes oral negotiation with the suggestion that she has in mind ways of reparation possible not considered by the Allies, especially the compensation of owners of destroyed industrial undertakings by the transference to them of proportional shares in similar undertakings in Germany.

CHAPTER V.

Regulations Concerning Commercial Policy.

Germany demanded that the economic provisions of the treaty be drawn up with full regard to the perfect equality of rights of Germany with those of other nations. She states that every creditor has the greatest interest in keeping debtors solvent, although Germany's strength has already been greatly impaired through an illegal blockade. She can only bear her burdens and regain a position equal to that of other nations if economic freedom similar to that before the war be granted her.

She therefore insists upon immediate admission to the League of Nations, with the economic advantages proposed in her draft, and suggests an unrestricted grant for a certain number of years of mutual most-favored-nation treatment instead of the one-sided rights provided in the treaty draft. Similarly, she proposes that all nations in the present unsettled state of the world retain full freedom as to tariffs, which would be especially desirable in her case, in order to facilitate reparation.

Questions as to the certificates of vessels, navigation, unfair competition, industrial, literary, and artistic property, and the international law of traffic could be settled through the League of Nations, by special agreements or at an international conference.

She agrees not to discriminate against Allied goods going by rail or vessel, but rejects interference with her internal railways and traffic organizations.

CHAPTER VI.

Internal Navigation.

The control of German river systems by international commission, in which Germany in no case is to have a majority, gives an economically unlimited authority over Germany's internal waterways and indirectly over German railways. This would have a decisive influence on the internal regulation of Germany's whole economic life, incompatible with Germany's sovereignty, and therefore impossible.

Germany agrees, however, to revise existing conventions to meet new conditions and open up German rivers to the utmost extent to the traffic of all nations, subject to the principle that riparian States are to participate in the administration.

As to the Elbe, she agrees to take the utmost account of the needs of Czechoslovakia; for the Rhine, she believes the Central Commission adequate, but is willing to accept negotiation for improvement; for the Danube, she demands representation on both commissions; for the Oder, a purely German river, she states that no commission is necessary; for the Vistula, she is willing to enter into negotiations with Poland, and for Nieman with the other riparian States.

She is unwilling to accept, except after more detailed negotiation, the arrangements placing Strassburg and Kehl under a single administration, or those dealing with the Rhine bridges and works for producing water power. As to the use of Hamburg and Stettin by Czechoslovakia, she is willing to negotiate a separate treaty to this end, and also to enter into negotiations as to how interested States may obtain a proportional share of the river tonnage beyond that surrendered under reparations.

The Kiel Canal can be open to the traffic of all nations under conditions of reciprocity, though the International commission proposal is acceptable only if other straits are similarly treated.

CHAPTER VII.

Treaties.

While unable in the short time available to check the completeness of the list of multilateral arrangements enumerated in the draft treaty as becoming operative again, Germany believes it preferable in principle for all multilateral treaties in force at the outbreak of war to come into force again at the peace, a later examination to decide which of them should be altered or terminated.

The provision to accept in advance future arrangements made by the Allies as to international postal, telegraphic, and wireless traffic is held incompatible with the dignity of an independent people.

An energetic protest is raised against the provision giving the Allies the exclusive right to decide which of the bilateral treaties in force before the war shall be revised. Instead, each party should be free to inform the other of any provisions which have become inoperative, the settlement to be arrived at by special commissions.

Germany notes that treaties with States not at war with her—as Peru, Bolivia, Ecquador, and Uruguay—are not affected by the rupture of diplomatic relations; refuses to accept the general abrogation of engagements with her former allies, Russia and Rumania, as threatening the ordered relations with those countries and declines to give the Allies certain advantages secured to her own allies and to neutrals until she has had time to examine them in all, after which special negotiations are proposed.

CHAPTER VIII.

Prisoners of War and Graves.

Germany requests the release of prisoners of war and interned civilians convicted of a crime or offense committed during their confinement in a hostile State. She also demands a full reciprocity of treatment for such prisoners and for the care of graves, and consents to bear only such expenses for prisoners of war and interned civilians as are incurred after they have left the territory of the enemy power.

CHAPTER IX.

Penalties.

As to the trial of the ex-Kaiser, Germany cannot recognize the justification of such criminal prosecution, which is not founded upon any legal basis, or agree to the competence of the special tribunal proposed, or the advisibility of the surrender to be requested of the Netherlands.

She cannot admit that a German be placed before a special foreign tribunal, to be convicted as a consequence of an exceptional law promulgated by foreign powers only against him, on principle, not of right but of politics, and to be punished for an action which was not punishable at the time it was committed. Nor can she consent to a request being addressed to Holland to surrender a German to a foreign power for such unjustifiable proceedings.

As to the surrender of persons accused of violations of the laws and customs of war for trial by a military tribunal, even when proceedings have already been begun by German courts, Germany is forbidden by her Criminal Code to make such extradition of German subjects to foreign Governments.

Germany again declares her preparedness to see that violations of international law are punished with full severity, and suggests that the preliminary question as to whether such an offense has been committed to be submitted to an international tribunal of competent neutrals to judge all violations by subjects of all the signatories. Germany to have her share in the formation of this tribunal, and the meting out of punishment to be left to the national courts.

CHAPTER X.

Labor.

The conditions of peace start from the standpoint that the interests of the working classes are not to be decided by the workers themselves, but are to remain the concern of their Governments. Moreover, since Germany is not immediately accepted as a member of the League of Nations and in the organization of labor, the German people are to be excluded from co-operation in determining the rights and duties upon which the health and welfare of the workers depend, although Germany's labor legislation has become a model for the entire world. The peace conditions destroy all the progress which the German workers have made and submit them to extreme distress and exploitation.

Such a peace would be concluded at the expense of the working classes in all countries. Consequently, the German workers can only agree to a peace which embodies the immediate aims of the international labor movement, and which does not sacrifice all their achievements in favor of alien oppressors.

A solemn protest is, therefore, made against even a temporary exclusion of Germany from the organization of labor. The Allied and Associated Governments possess no right to inflict damage upon German workers by the exercise of wilful and irresponsible power. A peace which does not bestow equal rights upon workingmen would be based upon quicksand. The peace terms are lacking of the first essential for recognition of equal rights of workers of all lands.

Germany once more proposes the summoning of a conference of labor organizations to discuss the Allies' proposals, the German counterproposals, and the Berne resolutions of February, the resolution to be embodied in the treaty of peace, and to attain thereby the force of international law. Any other settlement would signify a violation of fundamental human rights which the conscience of the world dare not allow.

CHAPTER IX.

Guarantees.

Even in the provisions for their execution, the peace conditions do not renounce the principle of force. As a guarantee for the fulfillment of conditions which strike such a terrible blow at the life of the German people, an occupation of German territory extending over many years is demanded, obviously to provide security against German aggression and as a guarantee against a refusal by Germany to fulfill her obligations.

No human being, however, could possibly consider that the German people, weakened as they are, could be seduced to the madness of an aggressive war which could only mean utter annihilation. Better guarantees of the fulfillment of the economic and financial obligations could be afforded. Whereas the occupation of the German Rhenish territory strikes a particularly hard blow at Germany, it also renders the payment of reparations most difficult or adequacy impossible. Large sums would have to be spent by Germany for the upkeep of the army, and the free economic life within Germany would be broken up exclusively by the form which the treaty of peace assumes.

The occupation would deprive the German authorities of the control of the administration, economic life and ways of communication, including the Rhine, and permit the continuance of the right of requisition which is permissible only in war. Moreover, a special customs tariff could be introduced for the occupied territory which might cut off this territory economically from the motherland and bring it under the influence of Belgium and France.

Germany, therefore, expects that the territory which has been occupied by the terms of the armistice shall be evacuated not later than six months after the signing of the Peace Treaty, and that during this time the occupation shall be restricted and most exclusively nil.

Up to now the world has failed to give due consideration to the great transformation which has taken place in the national life of Germany.

Through the will of her people, Germany has become a democracy and a republic. The new Germany is convinced that it deserves the confidence of its neighbors, and that it may therefore demand its place in the League of Nations, which in itself would constitute the most inviolable guarantee of good faith. However little Germany is in a position to exercise pressure in bringing about a peace which alone can be permanent, it would be remiss in its duty if it did not once more raise its voice in warning against the consequences of a peace of brute force. The fate of Russia, indeed, speaks in unmistakable terms.

The utterly exhausted German people is struggling desperately to preserve the country from the final dissolution of all its constituent elements. The outcome of this battle, which is now being fought with its last remaining strength, will be determined almost exclusively by the form which the treaty of peace assumes.

A permanent peace can never be established upon the oppression and enslavement of a great nation. Only a return to the immutable principles of morality and civilization and the sanctity of treaties would render it possible for mankind to continue to exist. In the very moment of founding a new commonwealth, based upon liberty and labor, the German people turn to those who have been its enemies and demand in the interest of all nations and of all human beings a peace to which it may give its assent in accordance with the dictates of its conscience.

Legal Supplement.

A supplement contains comments on special legal questions. These are for the most part of a detailed and technical character and hardly lend themselves to summarizing.

The first section deals with the resumption of diplomatic and consular relations. The second section deals at great length with the treatment of private rights, which the delegates claim to be unfair, owing to the lack of reciprocity. The German delegates have no fundamental objection to the proposed clearing house system, but they insist that it must be applied reciprocally, and that the private parties concerned should retain full powers of disposition.

A number of detailed criticisms and demands for fuller explanation are appended.

A protest is entered against the alleged anticipations of the signature of the Peace Treaty by the allied powers in France, Belgium, China, and elsewhere, and among the special criticisms which follow is the claim that the differentiation between the property of former German sovereigns and that of any other German is unjustifiable.

Further protests deal in some detail with the articles in the treaty concerning contracts, mixed courts of arbitration, and the protection of industrial property, with regard to which it is alleged that the restrictions on German industrial property are unbearable owing to their weakening of German economic strength in one of the few fields in which reconstruction might be attempted.

The third section, which is much shorter, deals with the special provisions affecting maritime law and prize courts, which are alleged to be intolerable and unjustifiable.

The fourth and final section deals with criminal law. In this connection the German delegates propose that each power shall grant the nationals of the other party immunity for all criminal acts committed in the course of the war for the benefit of their own country, with the exception of acts infringing the laws and customs of war.

Financial Supplement.

Another supplement contains the comments of the Finance Commission of the German delegation. These cover much the same ground as the corresponding section of the main comments, but at greater length.

Two further short notes have been issued by the German delegates, dealing with special points in Section 9 (finance) of the Peace Treaty, chiefly in reference to Turkey and Brazil.

PRINCE MAX WANTS GERMANY INVADED

Urges Rejecting the Treaty and Forcing Allies to "Use Inhuman Means."

MAJORITY SOCIALISTS GAIN

Weimar Congress Held to Have Strengthened Their Opposition to Accepting Allied Terms.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HERLIN, June 14, (via Copenhagen.)—The Berlin press is almost unanimously of the opinion that the Government Socialists scored a great victory at the Weimar Congress over the Opposition, which appears much weaker than was expected. As causes of this success the papers cite, first, Noske's revelations regarding the Independents' attempts to corrupt the volunteer army; secondly, Scheidemann's defense of the Government's policy regarding peace problems and his firm attitude regarding any reactionary activity, and, third, Bernstein's assertion that nine-tenths of the Entente's peace conditions are justified.

This last assertion provoked a storm of indignation, clearly indicating—so the Majority Socialists say—that Brockdorff-Rantzau's counterproposals are as much as Germany can concede, and that peace can be attained only within those limits.

This statement may be regarded as final, all the other Government parties having already expressed a similar view, while the reactionary parties condemn even Brockdorff-Rantzau's program as unpatriotic, although it is generally known that this is a pretense, serving merely to disguise their hope of an Entente invasion, which they prefer to the chaos they expect if the treaty is signed and as a result of the continuing in power of the present Government.

Prince Max of Baden has been trying to prove by long articles in the Tageblatt how widely the Versailles treaty differs in principle from Wilson's Fourteen Points, and concludes today with an earnest warning against signing the treaty.

"It would be best," he says, "to place the enemy in a position where he must use inhuman means against us. We must not save him the odious task of setting his troops in motion not for a Wilson peace, but for a peace of revenge to be visited upon an unresisting people. That would be the worst moral defeat in history. Our enemies and their Governments will soon collapse under the pressure of the discontent of their own peoples, which is already very great. Of course, we realize that Germany would suffer new injuries, but they would be of short duration.

"It might be argued that revision would come soon, even if Germany signed the treaty. That calculation is absolutely false. As soon as peace is made great celebrations will take place in the enemy countries. After that home problems would absorb the whole energy of the nations, and interest in Germany's fate would soon decline and be confined to the liberal press, which might give it space alongside the campaign against vivisection and similar matters. But no great public opinion would urge a statesmanlike operation of rescue, such as would be necessary for regrouping Europe. But that is the only thing that matters.

"Disillusioned Americans today shout aloud that European civilization deserves to perish; but if America fails us Europe must herself seize the torch and light it again."

Prince Max thus voices the opinion of the "intellectuals" who believe that "all is lost if the Versailles treaty is signed, while all may yet be gained if Germany stoutly refuses enslavement, come what may."

Weimar Again Seat of Government.

The seat of Government has again been transferred to Weimar, to which the German peace delegation is expected to return after the Allies have delivered the reply to the German counterproposals. Then the national convention will be immediately convoked and will give its decision, regarding which the opponents of the treaty say there can be no doubt if the allied answer is what reports in the Entente press indicate it will be.

The Tägliche Rundschau today, replying to Scheidemann's warning to the reactionaries in very much the same terms as the leaders of the Independents, disavows a desire on the part of the Conservatives for power.

"Scheidemann is greatly mistaken," it says, "if he thinks the reactionaries are prepared to overthrow him. They are not interested in relieving him of responsibility or in accepting the reversion of his administration. Only the Social Democracy would profit if the Conservatives undertook the government today. If such a foolish error were committed the Social Democracy would immediately rally all the discontented elements, even from the ranks of the bourgeoisie. No, we can afford to give them rope enough to hang themselves and wait until even the biggest blockheads realize that Socialist government means destruction of everything that was good in our country, and that its partisan policy places the most incompetent persons in power."

newed until the Peace Treaty becomes operative.

A great many Americans are now in Germany, and these would be subject to internment if found in German territory at the close of the armistice.

Raising Limits of German Army.

The concessions made by the Council of the Great Powers to the German appeal for modifications in the peace terms are likely to give the German Government an opportunity to assert that the Allies were obliged to soften the harshness of these conditions. The latest concession made is to permit Germany to maintain an army of 200,000 men.

The original draft of the treaty permitted the maintenance of a military force of only 100,000. This lenient action of the council is due mainly to its inability to make the provisions for the reduction of the Austrian Army dovetail consistently with that of the German Army. With Germany's great force cut to 200,000, the Austrian Army would be reduced to a ridiculously small number if the same proportion was observed as the allied peacemakers intended.

Another consideration was that, surrounded by smaller nations with larger armies—all of which are likely to have reason to pick a quarrel with her—Austria would be placed in the position of being unable to protect herself adequately from any sudden aggression. The same consideration applies to Germany.

June 14.—Marshal Foch left Paris Friday night for the Rhine via Nancy and Luxemburg. His departure at this time is significant of the seriousness of the arrangements made for dealing with the German situation in a military way, should the enemy plenipotentiaries at Versailles decline to sign the Peace Treaty.

Under notice to be given by the Allied Governments the armistice will expire at the end of five days of grace to be given the German plenipotentiaries, to indicate whether they will sign or not.

The American Peace Mission officials still cling to the belief that the treaty changes will be ready to lay before the Germans on Monday, which will mark the beginning of the five-day period. Elsewhere the view prevails that the notification of the changes will take place Tuesday.

The Supreme Blockade Council today completed plans for re-establishing the blockade of Germany to be carried into effect if the enemy refuses to accept the peace conditions.

General Pershing is still in Paris, but it is expected that he will go to Coblenz before the expiration of the period of grace given the German peace delegation.

Reports from Germany received by the American Peace Commission indicate a great desire on the part of the German people to have peace concluded without delay. In view of these reports, some officials who have been inclined to believe that the peace terms would not be accepted by the German Government now admit that they have changed to the contrary opinion.

Some Details of Treaty Changes.

June 13.—In their effort to make modifications in the peace terms imposed upon Germany without materially changing the treaty itself, the members of the Council of the Great Powers, which now includes a representative of Japan, have encountered certain difficulties.

They have reached the conclusion that some of the modifications agreed upon in the way of concessions to Germany cannot be effected through explanatory statements in the letter which Premier Clemenceau, as President of the Peace Conference, will send to the German plenipotentiaries at Versailles in response to their long note of objections and counterproposals.

Consequently, material changes in some portions of the treaty text will be necessary, in the Council's opinion, but most of the so-called modifications will be confined to clarifying explanations in the allied communication to the German peace delegation.

A case in point is the decision of the Supreme Council to permit civil government in the Rhine Provinces during the period of allied occupation. The treaty provides for military rule. It was decided by the Council that such a radical change could not be made effective by any statement in the letter which will accompany the revised draft of the treaty when it is handed to the Germans. The treaty itself, it was held, must specify the character of the government which is to prevail in the Rhineland while the allied troops are there.

Today the Council of the Great Powers is engaged in discussing what modifications already agreed upon shall be embodied in the treaty text or set forth in the form of clarifying statements in the letter to be sent by Clemenceau in response to the German memorandum of counterproposals. There seems to have been a disposition shown in the Council in the last twenty-four hours to change the treaty text, although this was the very thing to which Clemenceau objected and against which he fought strenuously and successfully. But it is now explained that, when the council came to re-examine the treaty with a view to determining the classifications to be incorporated in the note to the German envoys, it was found that some of the modifications were so directly opposed to the provisions in the treaty that they could not be made effective through assurances contained in the note.

But here another difficulty presented itself. To put all the changes agreed upon into the treaty would mean the practical redrafting of the major portion of the document—an enormous physical task. Besides, the mechanical difficulties of printing the treaty would be sufficient cause for further delay, and delay is exactly what the Council is endeavoring to avoid.

As matters now stand in the Council the disposition is to make as few changes in the text as possible and confine the clarifying and modifying features to a letter addressed to the German plenipotentiaries.

The character of most of the important modifications determined upon by the Supreme Council has already been recorded in Paris dispatches to THE TIMES. In this connection it is worthy of note that the Council has decided not to adhere to its decision to make changes, except, perhaps, a few in phraseology, in the text of the sections relating to reparation, but to interpret these sections in a letter to the German plenipotentiaries.

One new feature of that interpretation relates to a provision forbidding Germany to export gold during the period specified—this being regarded as necessary to insure the Allies of having a first lien on the German assets for the payment of reparational damages. In the accompanying letter the German peace delegation will be assured that if gold exports are necessary to meet prior obligations the Reparations Commission will grant the required permission to the Reichsbank.

Another modification—and in this case a change in the text of the treaty appears to be necessary—relates to a provision giving the new State of Poland the right to sequestrate enemy property, and requiring the German Government to reimburse its nationals whose property might be confiscated. The Supreme Council has reached the conclusion that this was a power given to Poland that might result in gross hardship to German subjects whose property was taken, and the provision will be changed so as to require the Polish Government to reimburse German nationals for the property sequestrated. This matter has an important bearing on the great coal fields of Upper Silesia. Poland will now have to reimburse the owners of these properties when they are taken over by the State.

Predicts Dire Consequences if They Are Forced on Germany.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, June 15.—"A peace which resembles that of Versailles will have grave consequences in Europe," said Prince Lichnowsky, the former German Ambassador to London, to a correspondent of the Giornale d'Italia.

"French militarism," he continued, "wishes to repeat the same errors committed by Germany in the treaty of Brest Litovsk. Wilson and the English statesmen desired to destroy German militarism and imperialism. Now that both have been destroyed, the peace of the Entente wishes also to destroy the German people. The peace of Versailles is an absolute negation of all principles of justice. It is an arbitrary, unreasonable peace. This peace of violence and might is every day preparing a new conflict.

"Germany cannot accept it. It is impossible. I wish to emphasize with firmness that if this peace is imposed, there will be a general republican Bolshevist uprising. It is impossible to predict what part Germany will take in it. From 1914 to today the world must register three blunders: First, the German declaration of war; second, the submarine warfare; third, the peace of Versailles."

Get rid of that dandruff with

Resinol

Dandruff often causes irritation of the scalp followed by the loss of hair. It should receive careful treatment. For best results wash the hair with Resinol Soap and occasionally touch the parts of the scalp where the dandruff appears with a little Resinol Ointment.

Usually this treatment is successful promptly—the hair appears glossy and soft, and the scalp regains its normal skiff health.

Sold by all druggists. For free samples write Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

Ever hear of the maguey plant?

It grows in Mexico. It is the most versatile plant in the world.

The Mexican roofs his hut with it—he makes his clothes of it—he eats it! Whenever something new comes into his life he turns to the maguey plant to help him out. And it never fails!

Library Bureau is the maguey plant of filing. Whenever the business man comes across a filing problem that he doesn't know how to handle, he turns instinctively to Library Bureau.

It was so years ago when Bigger Business wanted a better method of filing letters, memos, etc. than on hooks or in boxes. Library Bureau originated vertical filing.

Not once in all the years that followed has Library Bureau relinquished its place as pioneer and leader.

In the L. B. Automatic Index of today, Library Bureau has given the business world its quickest, most accurate and most understandable method of filing and finding. It is truly the system that solved the filing problem.

The plant has prospered. Library Bureau is better equipped today than ever to put the sunshine of growth into your filing methods. Forty-three years experience means something.

TELEPHONE GIRLS TO ORGANIZE HERE

Leader Who Carried On the New England Strike Moves for a Union of Operators.

TELEGRAPHERS CLAIM GAINS

Company Managers Deny That Operations Are Hampered—Labor May Appeal to Wilson.

As part of a nation-wide effort to unionize every telephone operator in the United States, organizers are already at work in New York City, it was learned yesterday. Secret meetings for the most part of small groups of girl operators have been in progress for a week, and during the coming week, possibly on Wednesday, the plans of the Telephone Operators' Division of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers to enlist all of the more than 5,000 switchboard operators in the New York main offices and exchanges will be laid before the girls.

The task of making unionists of the girls in this city is in charge of Miss May Matthews, Secretary of Boston Local 1A, one of the organizers of the operators' union and a leader in the New England telephone strike which ended in victory for the girls on April 21 last, after the telephone service had been paralyzed for several days. She is to be joined in a few days by Miss Julia O'Connor, President of the Telephone Operators' Division of the Electrical Brotherhood, now at Atlantic City, who will assume charge of the plans.

According to Percy Thomas, International Deputy President of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union, the unionizing of the telephone girls will be of material aid in the present strike.

It was reported, and the presence of a large delegation of telephone girls at a telegraphers' strike meeting yesterday bore out the report, that the girls had made representations to the telephone union looking to inclusion in its ranks. The delegation conferred with Miss Matthews after the strike meeting and arrangements were made for furthering the union's propaganda.

The same methods that won in New England are to be tried out in New York, it was reported. In Boston the girls began with a membership of 13 operators, and in two years ran their strength up to 4,500 girls, who walked out 100 per cent. when the strike call was issued. The effort to enlist the girls employed in this city by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company will be merely the start of the movement, which aims to make union members of all operators—those in apartments houses, private enterprises, and the like.

To Ask Labor's Help.

Before Miss O'Connor quits the American Federation of Labor Convention at Atlantic City, it was said, she plans to get the labor body to indorse the plan to bring the union's fight into New York City. Other cities are to be invaded, after the New York situation has been settled.

An effort to obtain the opinions of telephone officials on the unions plans was without results. It was understood, however, that the telephone company had already begun the organization of an employes' association along the lines of the Western Union's body, which, by remaining on the job, nullified to a great extent the force of the telegraphers' walkout.

Miss Matthews was one of the speakers who addressed a meeting of several hundred striking telegraphers in the auditorium of the Rand School at 7 East Fifteenth Street. She is small, almost slight in build, but is a forceful speaker, and left no doubt that she "meant business in the campaign to be undertaken in New York." She outlined the course of events that led up to the New England telephone strike and declared, in connection with organization plans, that "what was true of Boston will be true of New York."

"It would be a wonderful stunt if we could pull out all the telephone operators in New York City," she declared. "I know that you are going to win because Burleson"—groans from the meeting—"can't give one thing to one branch of labor and refuse the same thing to another. We are going to stand shoulder to shoulder with you people."

After the meeting Miss Matthews was questioned about her plans. She at first said that she had been merely passing through New York, but finally admitted that a delegation of operators—who, incidentally, were standing about her as she talked—had called upon her to begin organization work. She said that the original plans of the Telephone Operators' Division had been to organize throughout the country and then begin work in this city the last thing. She said that since coming here, however, she had found conditions propitious to organization and had about decided upon a meeting for this week. Miss Matthews finally said that organizers were at work and that Miss O'Connor would be here in a few days to supervise the situation.

Plan Appeal to Wilson.

The main developments in the telegraph situation yesterday were the determination of the union to appeal to President Wilson, through the American Federation of Labor, to intervene in the strike, and the issuance by Thomas of a telegram purporting to be signed by J. R. Hyland, Division Commercial Superintendent of the Western Union, directing operators and traffic managers to accept messages as follows:

D. H. Co.,
New York, June 13, 1919.

In view of reported instructions of the Order of Railway Telegraphers to their members to refuse to handle Western Union business commencing tomorrow, Saturday morning, messages for joint risk and subject to delay. * * *

J. R. HYLAND, D. C. S.

In connection with the decision to call off the strike of electrical workers, which was regarded as decidedly weakening the union's fight, Mr. Thomas announced that he was going to Atlantic City today or tomorrow to lay the question of the recognition of the union before President Gompers and the Executive Council of the federation, so that the matter might be forwarded with a full indorsement of labor to President Wilson. Mr. Thomas, as did other union leaders, was emphatic in declaring that Postmaster General Burleson's action in according the electrical workers the "right to bargain collectively" had opened the way for unions in strikes of the future.

"Mr. Burleson," said Thomas, "has admitted, for the first time officially, I believe, that the electricians have the right to organize and bargain collectively. If he refuses that right to other unions, especially the Telegraphers' Union, he will be guilty of the rankest kind of discrimination. Mr. Burleson has established a precedent that will return to plague its maker."

After reporting briefly on the general strike outlook, Mr. Thomas said the walk-out was going strongest in the West, and advised the New York strikers to emulate the example. He referred to President Carlton's statement that he was prepared to furnish brokers with expert Morse men in the event of a strike of financial wiremen. Mr. Thomas denied that the Western Union could furnish men, pointing out that brokers' men needed special training, "and what would the public do if a number of men were diverted from ordinary business and sent into Wall Street?"

"I don't believe in striking just for striking," said the telegraphers' leader, "and I take it that those who provoked the strike must come to us for peace terms. As far as I am personally concerned, I'd rather go down and out than take peace terms to anybody. I think the way to settle this strike is through Burleson. I think that it is up to this organization and others affiliated with the American Federation of Labor to put the case so strongly to President Wilson that he will see that something is done. I insist that Postmaster Berleson should recognize this union by the same rule of reasoning that he recognized the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. If he does not recognize us it would simply indicate that, upon the advice of Newcomb Carlton or other backers, whoever they may be, Burleson recognized the electricians only to weaken our strike. As for that $1,000,000 back-pay proposition—I predict that it will simmer down to a possible $1,000 when the time comes for payment."

At the offices of the telegraph companies it was said that wire business was moving normally and that the effect of the strike was not being felt at all. The Postal gave out this report on the national situation:

"Pittsburgh reports not a single office in that district affected, excepting in the city itself, where the men are returning. Superintendent Reynolds at Buffalo advises that Lockport, N. Y., is the only outside office in Western New York State where any employe remained away from duty for the past few days, and only one operator is concerned there. What few operators failed to report in Buffalo state they will report for work tomorrow.

"Philadelphia reports that the Superintendent of Telegraphs of the Pennsylvania Railroad states that he knows of no contemplated trouble with their men and that their offices are taking commercial business without question. Auguste, Ga., advises that all men have returned at Jacksonville and Augusta. Chicago informs us that six bonus men reported for duty this morning and that more are to follow."

BURLESON DENOUNCED.

Operators Send Their Grievances to Congress as a Memorial.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—A meeting of striking telegraphers here today adopted a memorial protesting against the conduct of Postmaster General Burleson, which will be sent to Congress tomorrow. This memorial, which will be carried to each member of Congress, also sets forth the alleged grievances of the striking operators. The document follows:

"As workers and taxpayers we protest against the machinery and funds of the Government being used in the interest of the telegraph companies in fighting the present nation-wide strike, as officially announced by Postmaster General Burleson through the public press.

"We claim as justification for the strike that the Postmaster General, since he assumed control of the wire systems, has at all times refused to receive and consider our complaints of discrimination against union employes and suggestions for adjustment of wage scales, but instead has adopted a policy of retaliation by inaugurating rules and ratings which reduced our earnings and increased our daily performance, thereby intensifying the unrest, already acute.

"We also claim that Mr. Burleson has used his personal influence to prevent an adjustment of differences between the workers and their employers.

"We demand the right to belong to a labor union and the right to bargain collectively.

"Reinstatement of all workers discharged in 1918 and 1919 for membership in a trade union or for legitimate trade union activities.

"Standardization of salaries with an agreement that will stop the individual wage reductions now being practiced through indiscriminate dismissals and re-employment—this being known as the sliding scale.

"We call your attention to the fact that approximately 25,000 commercial offices at railroad stations in this country are closed to the public as a result of the strike, that commercial messages and cablegrams are being sent by mail and suitcase messengers out of New York; that the situation from an industrial viewpoint is becoming more alarming daily, and we ask you what is your position in the matter?

"We would appreciate having this read into the Congressional Record."

BURLESON PROMISES TO ACT.

Will Order Conferences Between Operators and Companies.

ATLANTIC CITY, June 15.—Frank Morrison, Secretary of the American Federation of Labor, announced to National Convention delegates here tonight that Postmaster General Burleson had promised to give orders which would result in conferences between representatives of the striking commercial telegraphers and representatives of the companies. At these conferences, he said, machinery for "settling difficulties" would be arranged.

Mr. Burleson's action in recognizing the Electrical Workers' Union, thereby averting a strike, will not affect the resolutions which have been presented to the convention asking for his removal, sponsors of these resolutions announced. They declared that these resolutions would be pushed.

OPERATORS EXPECT TO WIN.

Chicago Strikers Confident Burleson Will Grant Their Demands.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 15.—The striking telegraphers held a mass meeting in the Masonic Temple today, and President Konenkamp said tonight that the strikers were confident that Mr. Burleson would grant their demands.

Officials of both the Western Union and Postal systems reported today that the strike was having hardly any effect on their business, which is going on as usual.

Konenkamp said that his men demanded that he cable President Wilson in Paris about the alleged discrimination against them by Postmaster General Burleson, and that he was considering it. A resolution was passed at today's meeting asking the American Federation of Labor to take up the matter and ascertain if the Postmaster General would not grant the telegraphers what they are demanding.

Waste Paper Gatherers to Strike.

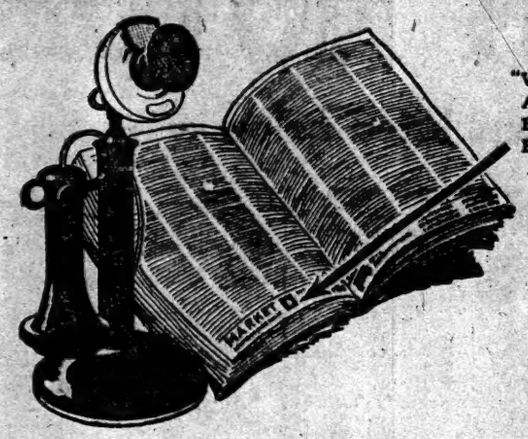
A strike of 1,500 waste paper gatherers employed by the New York Paper Assorters' Association, who remove paper stock and refuse from thousands of loft and other commercial buildings, was announced to begin today. The strike was called because the workers' demand for an increase of $5 a week had not been granted. The 200 members of the association, at their meeting yesterday at 475 Pearl Street, decided they could not afford to pay the increase unless the commercial establishments advanced the rate of payments for removal of the refuse paper. Failure to collect this waste paper, it was said, would cause congestion in business districts, as the city and the Department of Street Cleaning have decided that it must be removed at the expense of the storekeepers.

SPONGERS ASK WAGE RISE.

Textile Finishers Will Discuss the Workers' Demands Today.

The Textile Finishers' Association, Edward Fillmore, President, has announced a meeting at 10 o'clock this morning at the McAlpin Hotel, to discuss the demand made upon its members by the Cloth Spongers' Union for a 40 per cent. increase in salary and shorter hours.

"This is an almost prohibitive increase," said Mr. Fillmore, "and it seems that there must come a strike that will last for many weeks. The cloth spongers do not number many members, but when they close their shops they shut off the woolens from the manufacturers of garments in the city. That will mean the throwing out of employment of hundred of thousands of men and women."



"The Advertisements at the Foot of the Page That Help Push Business to the Top"

NO telephone user can get away from them,—or wants to for that matter, for those little advertising foot-notes at the bottom of the Telephone Directory pages are big helps to the man or woman who uses the telephone.

They stand right out on the telephone directory pages and proclaim, not only the advertiser's telephone number, but his name and his business in BIG TYPE.

They keep the advertiser in touch with old trade, introduce him to new and, as one advertiser puts it, "They exert their selling influence just when and where it will do the most good."

To the small advertiser and to the big advertiser we recommend foot-notes in the NEW YORK CITY TELEPHONE DIRECTORY as business builders.

This is just the time to telephone and arrange for YOUR telephone directory advertising for the October issue.

What makes "Y and E" Fire-Wall Steel Filing Cabinets three times as fire and heat-proof?

It's the "Built Like a Safe" principle.

A single steel wall heats up in a fire. "Y and E" discovered that years ago. So "Y and E" uses a double wall, with asbestos and dead air chambers between.

This fire-wall construction—two walls of steel and one of asbestos—runs all around the "Y and E" Cabinet: front, back, sides, top and bottom.

Yet "Y and E" costs no more than other equipment.

FAMOUS TAPESTRIES ON VIEW IN MUSEUM

Private Collectors Lend Their Treasures to Metropolitan for a Special Exhibition.

OLD LACES ALSO ON VIEW

Among the Drawings Are Some Dated in Fourteenth Century —Works of Correggio.

A collection of old laces, tapestries, and other treasures from private homes which have never before been placed on exhibition are shown today at the Metropolitan Museum of Art. The exhibits have been placed in the room that was formerly the home of the Morgan procelains and later of several special art exhibits, including that of the Courbet pictures.

The tapestries have been hung on the walls and the laces are in cabinets. The tapestries are from the period of Louis XIV., with all the magnificence of that period, and those more delicately pictorial of the later eighteenth century. One of the most brilliant in color and drawing is a triumphal scene, a tapestry of the finest weaving, belonging to ex-Senator William A. Clark. Two seventeenth century tapestries, brilliant in composition and softly toned in color, are Flemish pieces lent by Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James, scenes from the story of Dido and Aeneas.

Three of five tapestries in a set belonging to Mortimer L. Schiff are after cartoons by the French decorator Berain, and woven by Behagle.

Arrangement of Exhibition.

In viewing the laces, the spectator begins with the needle points on entering the exhibition hall and goes on, with arrangements in chronological order, to the bobbin laces. Each piece of lace has its own charm. There are quaint and amusing little figures in some of them—buglers, cheruba, and birds with bead eyes.

Some of the persons who lent articles for the exhibition were Jules S. Bache, Mrs. George T. Bliss, Mrs. Albert Blum, Mrs. George Blumenthal, William A. Clark, Mrs. De Witt Clinton Cohen, Mrs. W. Bayard Cutting, Mrs. Robert W. de Forest, Mrs. Harris Fahnestock, Richard C. Greenleaf, William Milne Grinnell, Miss Marian Hague, Mrs. McDougall Hawkes, Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James, Mrs. Leo Kessel, Mrs. J. Pierpont Morgan, Jr., Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer, Mrs. Herbert L. Satterlee, Mortimer L. Schiff, Mrs. George L. Whelan, and Miss Gertrude Whiting.

Drawings on View.

Also on exhibition are drawings from the Pembroke collection, nineteen of them purchased at Sotheby's, in London, July, 1917, at the sale of the collection belonging to the Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery. They had been kept at Wilton House, near Salisbury, in one of the famous English collections formed in the eighteenth century.

The earliest work in the group is a copy, dating from the middle of the fourteenth century, of the mosaic by Giotto on the wall of the old Church of St. Peter in Rome. There are three drawings by Correggio, including the "Annunciation"; works of Leonardo da Vinci; a "Horse with Anatomical Measurements," by Antonio Pollaiuolo, and Dürer's "St. Catherine."

The museum is now beginning to obtain possession of its purchases made during the war, the shortage of shipping during the war having made it impossible to transport art objects from the other side. On view now in the Recent Accessions Room are two delightful portraits by Ingres which have a special interest in that they belonged to Degas. The exhibition of tapestry and lace will be open until November, giving the public an opportunity to make a thorough study of the two arts.

G. A. R. MEMORIAL SERVICE.

Soldier Dead of All Wars Honored at Exercises.

Veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic and other allied organizations of the G. A. R. honored the soldier dead of all wars yesterday afternoon with a patriotic meeting and memorial service at the Soldiers and Sailors Monument, Riverside Drive and Eighty-ninth Street. The band of the Hudson Terminal Branch of the Post Office furnished music.

Rev. D. G. Verwey of the Union Reformed Church of High Bridge delivered the invocation. Julius Isaacs, who presided at the meeting, presented past Department Commander William F. Kirchner, who recounted the achievements of the Boys of the Union Army during the civil war. He said that if the Confederacy had won the country would not only have been divided North and South, but East and West as well. The success of the Union Army had made possible our army's work in the world war.

Gen. Charles Burrows, Past Senior Vice-Commander in Chief of the G. A. R., who is blind, and had to be led to the speakers' table, spoke of "The Soldiers of Yesterday." Gen. Burrows paid a tribute to the G. A. R., and told of its formation in Decatur, Ill., fifty-one years ago, and said its membership reached the high water mark in 1882. Since then, he said, death had made heavy inroads, and before many more years the last of the old guard would have passed away. "The G. A. R. men," he said, "had been shining examples for the boys of later wars." "Monuments," he said, "were fine things to perpetuate memory, but a keystone may crumble and a pillar may fall, while the Grand Army of the Republic, figuratively speaking, could never perish."

The Rev. John E. Zeiter, a former army Chaplain, who recently returned from France, made a similar address, and said he hoped that when punishment was meted out to the Kaiser, some one would be big enough and strong enough to say, "Hand over that cur, von Bernstorff."

The exercises closed with a salute to the dead by the Oliver Tilden Camp Firing Squad, and the sounding of taps by four girls of the Ella Bixby Tent, Daughters of Veterans.

MOSS TELLS FILM PLANS.

To Extend Theatre Control in Alliance with Famous Players-Lasky.

B. S. Moss, head of the chain of vaudeville theatres which bear his name, issued a statement yesterday bearing upon the partial affiliation of his theatres with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Although the Moss theatres will be associated with the film company, they will retain their identity, and Mr. Moss will continue as executive head of the organization.

The Moss theatres will now devote themselves more largely to films than has been the case in the past, but they will not be confined to the program of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. A considerable extension of their control of theatres is planned by Mr. Moss and Famous Players jointly.

THE SCREEN

There is a piece of work in Rex Beach's "The Crimson Gardenia" at the Rialto this week that is distinctly characteristic of the photoplay and belongs to it exclusively.

"Our hero" finds himself in a predicament, trapped in a room with five villains, one of whom is pointing an eager pistol at him. The main question among the villains seems to be whether he shall be shot in the head or the heart—and whether there shall be any conversation before the shooting. The hero persuades them to have a little conversation first, and does most of the talking. Before he starts, however, he notices a telephone near him on a desk. The edge of the book has slipped under the receiver, and by raising the volume with the weight of another book the hero is able to open the wire so that Central may hear what is said in the room.

The girl at the switchboard first says, "Number, please," and then hears the man saying that he came to "Alfred Le Duc's" house and accidentally stumbled into "you counterfeiters," that he is not a Secret Service agent, and will pay $10,000 if allowed to go. Central puts Police Headquarters on the wire and the Desk Lieutenant listens in, too.

Now there are three scenes going at once, and it is in presenting the simultaneous action of these scenes that the photoplay comes into its own field. The spectator feels that he is watching everything that is going on, as it happens. One scene cuts into another so quickly and naturally that he seems merely to be shifting his eye from one centre of interest to another, without losing anything.

The result is that, although the whole situation is frankly melodramatic, interest develops into suspense, and a high point of excitement is reached by the time the hero is saved by the inrushing police. This construction is not novel, but it is exceptionally well done in "The Crimson Gardenia," and is a clear illustration, in one particular, of the technique of the photoplay in its own field.

The main criticism that might be brought against this scene, as well as against the whole production, is that printed words are used too freely on the screen. Words are at best a necessary evil in a photoplay and it does seem that such ingenuity as made "The Crimson Gardenia" so effective pictorially could have gone a little further and eliminated some of its interrupting text.

The melodrama, however, is more interesting than most of its kind, and this is due, primarily, it seems, to the author, Mr. Beach, and also in great part to the director, Reginald Barker, and the excellent acting of Owen Moore, Tully Marshall, Hedda Nova, Sydney Ainsworth, and Edwin Stevens. Everyone in the cast, in fact, is competent. The scene of the photoplay is in New Orleans at carnival time, but the Mardi Gras is only its background.

Much merriment is added to the Rialto entertainment by Roscoe Arbuckle's latest farce, "A Desert Hero."

Charlie Chaplin is at the Strand in his latest—"Sunnyside"—so, of course, those who go there will laugh. Chaplin is a farm hand and country hotel clerk this time. He is at his best when depending upon his inimitable pantomime, and least amusing when indulging in slap-stick, in which he is not distinguished from countless other comedians. There is cleverness in "Sunnyside" and good pantomime, but, also, too much slap-stick.

The longer photoplay at the Strand is "You're Fired," with Wallace Reid delightful in the leading rôle. Reid used to do more posing than acting, but recently he has been showing that he can act in comedy and "You're Fired" is about his best demonstration of talent. There are like demonstrations by Wanda Hawley as the girl, Theodore Roberts as a money crab, and Raymond Hatton as a caricature of an orchestra leader. Jam Cruze directed the production and that's one of the reasons why it's good. The story is taken from O. Henry's "The Halberdier."

More or less made according to formula, but apparently owing much to the work of its director, George Melford, "Men, Women, and Money," at the Broadway, arouses interest. The story is of a country girl who comes to New York, is caught up in a fast society, becomes the victim of a misunderstanding, "goes broke," gets a job, and finally marries for love, although the man is a millionaire. Ethel Clayton is attractively the girl and Lew Cody is competently the man. James Neill and Jane Wolfe are convincing as the girl's parents. Mame Kelso, Sylvia Ashton, Irving Cummings, and others add life to the cast.

There is also an entertaining Spanish scenic, one of Educational's, at the Broadway.

"Square Deal Sanderson," with William S. Hart, is at the Rivoli this week.

"The Challenge of Chance," with Jess Willard, will open at the Park on Wednesday evening.

FIND INSIDIOUS BOLSHEVISM

Inter-Racial Council Tells of Non-American Town In New Hampshire.

In a statement given out yesterday the Inter-Racial Council, Woolworth Building, made public a report received from one of its field agents of the spread of Bolshevism, especially among Russians, in a city of 16,000 inhabitants in New Hampshire. The Inter-Racial Council is composed of representative men from industries and labor and from the various racial groups in the United States, which has been carrying on a systematic campaign to Americanize the alien residents in this country.

The report shows that in the New Hampshire town of 16,000 there are 10,000 French, 500 Russians, 1,000 Swedes, a few hundred Poles and Italians, and 400 Americans. There are 2,000 voters. Of the 500 Russians one is a naturalized citizen and two others of this nationality have taken out their first papers. There are night schools and a Y. M. C. A., but only seven Russians have shown any desire to learn English. The Russians, the report states, who were studied closely, are drifting into something akin to Bolshevism. They work conscientiously during the day and then go home to discuss Russia and to read Russian language newspapers.

The Inter-Racial Council believes that the only way in which to relieve this serious situation, which is said to exist to a certain extent in many other localities, is to send Russian or other foreign literature and speakers to counteract this insidious propaganda, and to work with individual employers to remove all causes of industrial unrest and discontent which give the agitators a basis for their propaganda.

BRAZIL'S PRESIDENT TO BE CITY'S GUEST

EXPECTED TO LAND MONDAY

Presidential Party Will Spend Week in New York Before Going to Washington.

Dr. Epitacio Pessoa, President-elect of Brazil, who is coming to this country after a visit in Portugal, is due to arrive Monday, June 23, aboard a French warship. Mayor Hylan has appointed a committee to receive and entertain the distinguished visitor while he is in New York, of which Rodman Wanamaker is Chairman; Alfred J. Johnson and Harry C. Sinclair, Vice Chairmen, and Grover A. Whalen, Secretary.

The official entertainment of President Pessoa and his party includes a dinner to be given on behalf of the city at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel on Tuesday evening, June 24, at which many national, State, and city officials and prominent citizens are expected to be present. On the following day President Pessoa and his associates will be entertained at luncheon by the Pan American Society of New York, and subsequently the President will be the guest of Elbert H. Gary.

When the visitors enter the harbor their vessel will be escorted by a squadron of United States warships and they will be welcomed down the Bay by an official delegation headed by Frank L. Polk, Acting Secretary of State, and representatives of the State and city Governments. The party will come ashore at the Battery and will proceed to the Plaza Hotel, from which point the President will make an official visit to the City Hall, where he will be received by the Mayor and other city officials. President Pessoa intends to remain in New York about a week before going to Washington, where he will become the guest of the United States.

Among those accompanying the Brazilian President are Mme. Pessoa and their 22-year-old daughter; Captain Armando Burlanaqui of the Brazilian Navy and Mme. Burlanaqui; Lauro Muller, Jr., Secretary of Legation, and Mme. Muller; Pessoa de Queiros, Secretary to the President-elect, and also member of the Brazilian Foreign Ministry; Mauricio Nabuco of the Brazilian Foreign Office, and two attaches and their wives.

It is expected that President Pessoa will remain in this country until July 2, on which date he will sail for Brazil from this city. The return voyage will be made on a United States warship.

BOYS ROB ARMY WAREHOUSE

Carry Off Wrist Watches and Bugles—Sent to Children's Society.

Military goods valued at $1,000 stolen from the U. S. Army warehouse at 533 West Forty-eighth Street, the police say, were found yesterday in the bedroom of John and Joseph Kuindules, aged 11 and 15 years, at 526 West Forty-ninth Street, the home of their widowed mother. The boys were arrested in the warehouse yesterday afternoon while packing up other articles to take away. When asked how they had gained admittance, Joseph replied:

"We climbed up the drain pipe and squeezed between the bars and through the window. We've been here before and got a lot of stuff, and as nobody interfered we thought it was all right."

Policeman Heinold said the boys raised a board in the floor of their bedroom and showed him the goods they had carried away, a great assortment of things, including wrist watches and twenty army bugles. At the West Forty-seventh Street Station the police said Joseph had been arrested six months ago after he had cut a panel in the door of the pawnshop of Joseph Miller at Ninth Avenue and Fiftieth Street, and was caught by a policeman when he emerged with some articles of jewelry. Sentence was suspended at that time in the Children's Court.

The police said the boys, although pupils in a public school, appeared to have no moral principles or any idea that they had committed a crime. They were sent to the Children's Society pending arraignment in the Children's Court today, with the suggestion that they should be placed under observation concerning their mental faculties. The boys said they took and hid the things while their mother was out at work.

Chicago Petitions for a Mint.

CHICAGO, June 14.—The establishment of a mint in Chicago was asked of Carter Glass, Secretary of the Treasury, in a letter signed today by James B. Forgan, Chairman of the Chicago Clearing House Committee, and each of its members. The shortage of cents and the increased business done for Panama, the Philippines, and other Governments, the letter said, called for another mint.

MUSIC

The New Symphony Orchestra has opened subscriptions at its offices, 25 West Forty-second Street, for ten pairs of concerts to be conducted by Artur Bodansky of the Metropolitan in the course of next season at Carnegie Hall. The dates, already announced, run from Oct. 9 and 10 next to April 29 and 30, 1920. At five pairs of concerts Mr. Bodansky will conduct orchestral programs only, after the manner of the Boston Symphony in recent years, while the other five pairs will engage solo stars, including Thibaud, Bauer, Rachmaninoff, Novaes, and Kreisler.

Three of the famous orchestras in America, two of which are rare and perhaps "first time" visitors to New York, will be heard one Sunday each at the Hippodrome next November, December, and January. They are the New York Philharmonic, under Stransky; the Cincinnati Symphony, led by Ysaye, and the Detroit Symphony, by Gabrilowitch. Another current announcement is that Walter Damrosch, now in Paris, has arranged for the New York Symphony Orchestra to give a series of concerts at the Paris Opéra next year, probably in May, and also in London, in June, 1920.

Sousa's band continued at Olympia Park, Newark, last night, its first tour since the war. This revival of his transcontinental journeys the bandmaster had chosen to open the day before with two concerts in the Academy of Music, Brooklyn, where he and his men—including twenty-seven veterans of army or navy service—received "an old-fashioned Manhattan Beach welcome," it was said. The new Sousa marches began with "Bullets and Bayonets" and his wartime "Wedding March." There were also his "Golden Star," dedicated to Mrs. Roosevelt, and his song to Colonel McCrae's "In Flanders Fields," while in lighter vein were Sousa's "Dwellers in the Western World" and "Showing Off Before Company."

American composers for the Stadium concerts this Summer are announced. Arnold Volpe will play Elliot Schenck's new overture, "The Arrow Maker," at the Lewisohn amphitheatre's opening on June 30; also Hadley's Fourth Symphony, "North, South, East, and West"; Chadwick's "Tam o' Shanter," and his overture, "Euterpe." Samuel Gardner, the violinist, furnishes a symphonic poem without title, to be played from manuscript, and Dr. Frank Ward of Columbia will add an "Ocean" rhapsody and "Peter Pan" scherzo.

Columbia University's free concert tonight by E. F. Goldman's Military Band will present operatic selections from "Oberon," "Thais," "Carmen," and "Tristan." There are also the "Rakoczy March" of Berlioz, cornet solo by Ernest Williams, Herbert's "Irish Rhapsody," and Strauss's waltz, "You and You."

WELCOME SOLDIERS IN FOG.

Westerners Greeted by Home Folk and Rocky Mountain Club.

A thick fog that enveloped the harbor did not dampen the ardor of a delegation of Westerners and some 200 members of the Rocky Mountain Club who went down the bay to greet the 146th Field Artillery, a Colorado and Idaho contingent, which arrived on the transport Peerless, one of the few transports to reach the city yesterday. The delegation included Governor E. W. Davis, Congressman Addison T. Smith, Congressman Burton L. French, and former Governor F. R. Gooding, all of Idaho; United States Senator John D. Kendrick of Wyoming and Congressman W. N. Vaile of Colorado. Herbert Weil headed the Rocky Mountain Club welcomers.

For the first time since the war, officials of the Port of Debarkation permitted visitors to go upon the piers and fraternize with the troops. Heretofore they have been compelled to remain outside of the pier limits, where they had little chance of seeing their boys. The 146th, which consisted of thirty-nine officers and 1,800 enlisted men, was commanded by Colonel Phillips Worcester, a regular army officer. The contingent took part in the Meuse-Argonne and St. Mihiel offensives, and suffered casualties of thirty-five killed and 150 wounded. The transport brought back 3,602 men in all, many of them belonging to casual companies.

The Alaskan, which left St. Nazaire on June 3, also docked yesterday. There were 2,128 soldiers on board, comprising the 4th Army Corps Headquarters Detachment and Headquarters Troop and the 315th Engineers. The last named contingent was made up of Texas and Oklahoma troops, and sailed for France a year ago last Saturday.

Walks 120 Miles to Honor Roosevelt

OYSTER BAY, June 15.—Among the 4,000 or 5,000 persons who visited the grave of Colonel Roosevelt today in Young's Memorial Cemetery and placed upon the mound daisies and laurels, which they had picked in the nearby woods, was Samuel Garvin, 67 years old, a lawyer of Philadelphia, who came here on his annual hike. He was a great admirer of Roosevelt, and decided to spend his vacation this year in walking to the grave of his friend. Mr. Garvin covered the distance in six days. It was his intention to arrive here yesterday, but he injured his ankle at Roslyn, which impeded his progress somewhat.

ESSEX MOTOR CARS

Essex Popularity Grows

Note Their Increasing Number On the Streets and Ask Their Owners Sells at $1395 f. o. b. Detroit

Hailed as a New Leader

All who have seen the Essex will understand how difficult it is to appear temperate in our claims for it.

People are saying the most enthusiastic things about it. They like its light weight and the way in which it combines the economy of the cheap car with the quality, endurance, comfort and performance of the large costly automobile. Motorists in every section are praising the Essex. Tens of thousands have ridden in it. A million have seen the Essex. All hail it a new leader.

"It Is THE Light Car"

That in a sentence expresses a view of practically everyone.

It describes their feelings as to its type, its value and its distinctive performance. Motorists have long talked of the car that would be enduring and comfortable to ride in and of great performance ability and still that would be neither heavy nor costly to buy or operate.

They describe the Essex as being "the car" that fills that field.

And they have long wanted a light car that they would not have to apologize for because of its appearance. So their expression, "That is THE Light Car," describes their feelings concerning the Essex.

When Can I Get an Essex?

That is the question all are asking.

Thousands of course have already been shipped. They are going out from the factory in increasing numbers every day. But orders are also piling up and from the first we have had waiting lists.

It is not a question of selling the Essex during the next several months. The question will be "Who will get them?" If you are to be an Essex owner you must not delay ordering.

Everyone who knows the Essex is enthusiastic for it. All are talking about it. You can understand something of Essex popularity if you will listen to what motorists are saying. Ask any owner. If you haven't ridden in an Essex there is a pleasant experience in store for you.

PRAISE FROM POINCARE.

French President Commends League of Red Cross Societies.

President Poincaré of France has written to Henry P. Davison, Chairman of the Board of Governors of the League of Red Cross Societies, congratulating him on the formation of the league and predicting the success of its plan for improving health conditions everywhere. The letter, which was given out yesterday at the Atlantic Division of the American Red Cross, follows:

Mr. Chairman: The Central Committee of the French Red Cross has informed me of the creation of the League of Red Cross Societies, and of the humanitarian object thus undertaken by the Red Cross organizations of the five great allied and associated powers. I take pleasure in congratulating you on this successful result of your untiring efforts. The articles of the association of the league pay a well-deserved tribute to the International Committee of the Red Cross for its achievements in the work to which the Board of Governors wishes to consecrate its efforts, and it is provided that the admission of any other Red Cross Society to the league shall be by the unanimous vote of the board.

It is with great interest that I quote these facts, and I do not doubt that the organization in which you have taken the initiative will accomplish in the future the generous mission which it undertakes for the wellbeing of humanity.

I beg you, Mr. Chairman, to express my congratulations and best wishes to the five Red Cross societies, members of the league, and to believe in my sincere esteem. POINCARE.

Largest Volume of Advertising Despite Censorship

During the five months ended May 31, 1919, The New York Times published 7,064,487 agate lines of paid advertising.

No other New York newspaper printed so large a volume of advertising for this period, notwithstanding that all advertisements in The New York Times are censored and selected.

Compared with the corresponding period of 1918, the gain was 1,535,457 agate lines (the greatest gain of any New York newspaper) and 1,925,968 agate lines compared with the first five months of 1917.

Advertising in May

In May, 1919, The New York Times published 1,669,932 agate lines of advertisements, a gain of 459,316 lines over May, 1918.

The record for the corresponding month in six previous years follows:

	Agate Lines		Agate Lines
1918	1,210,616	1915	877,255

FINANCIAL DEEPS AND SHALLOWS

Wall Street is making a commotion about a 12 per cent. rate on call money, "the highest since 1916," and some softening of security prices. When Wall Street's moods and prices are important they bear a closer relation to economic events than at present. Just now the important things are happening off Wall Street, and speculation is held in check lest it do harm elsewhere than in the stock market. "Neither labor controversies nor "foreign political uncertainties have "caused deviation from the forward "trend of business," says Dun's Review. "Favorable conditions continue "to prevail in wholesale and retail "trade generally," says Bradstreet's. Such are the conditions before the tide of peace trade has begun to rise. The Federal Reserve Board estimates that three billions of new money must be provided by private initiative within the next few months to maintain the export trade of the nation.

That is a minimum estimate, and will only begin our contribution toward feeding the hungry hundreds of millions who cannot raise their own crops, and who are so busy with reproducing the means of production that they cannot spare labor for providing themselves with consumable goods on even their usual scale in times when their needs were far less than they will be for a year or two at the lowest estimate. When Germany's damages are put at the maximum she can pay, fifty billions more or less, and concededly less than the mere money value of the harm done, three billions is only a beginning toward the contribution to be expected from the only nation with a surplus of everything—labor, food, consumable goods, cash, credit, organization, and good-will to use them all. The idea that our industry can be depressed under such conditions by Wall Street perplexities is to listen to the murmurs of the shallows.

The real problem before financial America is how it is to collect for the business it must do. It is a question of credit, not of capital, nor of capacity for business, nor of finding business. We are as necessitous sellers as our foreign friends are necessitous buyers, and business men in that frame of mind cannot be kept apart, even though it is not clear at the moment how they are to be brought together. The head of our War Finance Corporation is now abroad studying how to place a billion dollars of credit created months ago. At Chicago Mr. DAVISON proposes a Commercial League of Nations to issue a universal guarantee covering the buying, selling, and paying for of our cotton, copper, tobacco, foods, and general supplies.

That is a matter of merchandising, an industrial matter rather than a banking or financial matter. We would have to supply the goods, and the money to buy them with must come from our investors. Both will be supplied readily enough when the accounts are guaranteed either in the manner Mr. DAVISON suggests or in the manner of which a hint comes from Bulgaria. Its chief export is attar of roses, and the entire crop has been commandeered by the Government to pay for food sold by our Grain Corporation. When goods are bartered for goods there is no question of balance of trade, or of exports of gold, or of credit. Everything is in the prices at which the exchange is made, and trade is simplified to the last degree. This is a small matter, but it is an interesting contribution to the question of ways and means, and may result in greater things.

There are other matters of more importance to trade and the country than to Wall Street speculators who are frightened by the price of day-to-day money, and who cannot see that the world is now taking a position which it must hold through the next year or two at least. Congress is on the point of passing a contribution toward the railway deficit. It is not what the situation requires, but it will release some hundreds of millions now frozen in the accounts. The Government has paid the railways only some $250,000,000 of the $938,000,000 due as the rent of 1918, and the railways owe the Government an unadjusted sum of some hundreds of millions for advances. When the Government pays its rent the railways will be in position to repay the Government's advances so far and as fast as they are agreed to. The bankers appointed by the Railway Executives' Association are expected to report a plan for the issuance of $280,000,000 of certificates against equipment costing $400,000,000. This is a favored security, and it is expected to be so good that it will sell itself. Nor does this complete the list of factors which will release business money, and which will be kept out of Wall Street so far as it can be managed. Wall Street may think about its fractions and its day-to-day money. The country is thinking of hundreds of millions and even billions of trade pressing to be done, and which cannot be done without profit. The more Wall Street lets down its prices the greater will be the attraction to those who look to trade for the source of prosperity, and who are cold toward suggestions of disaster because overnight money is dear.

A GREAT FEAT.

Just two weeks after the completion of the American seaplane flight across the Atlantic, done in stages, and very properly safeguarded at every step with all the precautions that science could suggest for the saving of life in case of accident, the Atlantic is again crossed, and at a single leap, by two daring adventurers flying a British airplane.

The feat of ALCOCK and BROWN has been the dream of aviators since the WRIGHT brothers first rose from the ground in a heavier-than-air machine. They set out from Newfoundland for Ireland with no other hope in case of mishap than a chance rescue at sea. Flying nearly 120 miles an hour, often in fog and drizzle, they completed the journey from St. John's to Clifden in sixteen hours and twelve minutes.

It is a performance worthy to rank among the greatest of human achievements, and not merely as another high mark of British sportsmanship.

FEDERAL AND STATE EMPLOYMENT SERVICES.

As Congress, judging from its attitude toward army and navy appropriations, is heeding the desire of the people for economy in post-war expenditures, it will narrowly scrutinize the Nolan bill, which proposes to convert the emergency agency known as the United States Employment Service into a permanent bureau of the Department of Labor. If the institution is indispensable—that is to say, if it is necessary to the welfare of capital and labor—its perpetuation as a Government bureau would be most desirable; the only question to be discussed would be the size of the appropriation to maintain it. On the other hand, if the work it professes to do can be done efficiently by State and local agencies, the United States Employment Service is superfluous, and to spend millions upon its support now that the war is over would be scandalously wasteful.

The United States Employment Service does not seem to be as useful or as economically administered as a good State agency. Compare it with the Public Employment Service of Massachusetts, which conducts only three offices, at Boston, Springfield, and Worcester. The Federal service has no less than thirty-one offices in the State. Of the applicants for employment in 1918 the State offices found places for one-third of the number at an expense of $38,000. Work was found for two-thirds of the applicants by the thirty-one Federal offices at an expense of $200,000. On the score of cost the Federal service cannot justify its existence if such comparisons are reported from other parts of the country.

It has been asserted that, although the Sixty-fifth Congress gave the Federal service an appropriation of $5,500,000 for the fiscal year ended July 1, 1918, it had incurred a deficiency of millions by the Spring of 1919, "although the end of the war "had lessened the necessity for its "activities in November, 1918." Nevertheless for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1919, the United States Employment Service wanted $14,800,000. The last House of Representatives cut the estimate to $10,000,000, and ended by failing to place the amount as reduced in the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill. "To define "and establish the most effective "form of relationship between na- "tional and State employment activ- "ities" a conference was called in Washington on April 23, and it is significant that of the sixty-nine persons present thirty-three were Federal directors, or assistant Federal directors, or executive officials of the United States Employment Service. The fruit of the conference's labors was the Nolan bill, which provides for an appropriation of $4,000,000 and makes a statutory officer of the Director General.

An attractive feature of the Nolan bill seems to be the direction that the Federal Government shall pay to each State for the support of public employment offices under State control a sum equal to that set aside by the State. But there is this fly in the ointment: No payments to the States will be made in the absence of a certification that the State system is operated "in accordance with the "uniform rules and regulations and "with the standards of efficiency pre- "scribed by the Director General of "the United States Employment "Service, with the approval of the "Secretary of Labor"; that is to say, the States in their domestic policy would be subject to Federal control.

As the United States Employment Service has not made a shining record for economy, efficiency, and strict attention to its own business, no State would care to be subject to its orders and dependent upon it for financial contributions. Particularly has its intervention in labor troubles caused distrust and suspicion, and it is believed that it has spent a great deal of money in propaganda to obtain large appropriations. If the States can maintain useful and adequate employment agencies, there is no need of a Federal service, and a Federal service that did not hold true the balance between labor and capital would be intolerable.

THE PRICE OF BALKAN PEACE.

Bulgaria is the land of undying hope. The Bulgar character, like most national characters, is a blend of admirable qualities with some that are less admirable; but nobody can fail to admire Bulgarian tenacity. The Bulgars are still telling the Conference that the only hope for permanent peace in the Balkans will be in the granting of everything that Bulgaria wants—a somewhat more moderate demand today than a year ago, but still extensive enough, if granted, to make the Bulgarians, the least numerous of Balkan peoples, the lords of the Balkan peninsula.

The Bulgars still expect, or say they expect, that the Conference will grant what they ask; they seem to be counting on the generosity of America, a generosity that would have to be exercised with other people's property to give them all that they fought for. The fact that much more territory was offered to them than was justly theirs to come in on the allied side, and that they elected to join the Germans instead, does not seem of much account to Bulgaria's friends in this country.

Dr. PANARETOFF, the Minister at Washington, lately assured us that only by deception of the people and ruthless brutality did King FERDINAND and Premier RADOSLAVOFF overcome the opposition of other political leaders to the alliance with Germany. Dr. PANARETOFF said nothing about this while Mr. RADOSLAVOFF was Premier, while Dr. PANARETOFF was working for him, while Germany was winning the war. In those days Bulgarians had gone forth as one man with a single heart in the just enterprise of redeeming their irredenta. Now it is the wicked RADOSLAVOFF who deceived them. It is strange that Bulgarians did not realize the wickedness of RADOSLAVOFF till their armies had been routed by FRANCHET D'ESPEREY; a year ago the opposition was attacking RADOSLAVOFF, but because he had not got enough concessions in the Dobrudja and Thrace from his allies. Even MALINOFF, the "Ententophile" who succeeded him after the military disaster, said less than a year ago that alliance with Germany was an essential of Bulgarian policy.

An important light on this policy has lately been set forth in The Balkan Review of London, in an article by its editor, Mr. CRAWFURD PRICE. Mr. PRICE is a reputable journalist, an authority on the Balkans, and there is reason to believe him when he says that he has obtained from a source of unquestionable authenticity a hitherto secret treaty concluded between Bulgaria and Austria-Hungary early in September, 1914. By this agreement, when the war was hardly a month old, Bulgaria bound herself not to enter into any alliance directed against Austria; and there was the further provision that "if Austria-Hungary, without "any provocation on her part, is at- "tacked by any State bordering on "Bulgaria, the latter engages herself "to bring her military forces into "action against the State in question "as soon as a demand to this effect "shall be made"—a provision obviously aimed at Rumania, then still neutral.

Austria seized Bosnia and Herzegovina at the same time that FERDINAND solemnly proclaimed his independence of Turkey. It has always been believed that an understanding existed between the two Powers at this time; Austria's act almost drove Serbia into war, and it might have been then, as in 1915, a war on two fronts. When the Balkan League had shattered Turkey, Dr. DANEFF, head of the Bulgarian delegation to the Peace Conference in London, stopped on the way for a conference with Austro-Hungarian officials. Presently Austria refused to permit Serbian access to the sea, drove Serbia back to Macedonia, to ask for a reconsideration of the other chapters of the understanding which had allotted extensive territories here to Bulgaria on the supposition that Serbia would get her window on the Adriatic. Bulgaria temporized, talked arbitration, and then suddenly attacked the Greek and Serbian armies, hoping to get what she wanted by a simpler process. During that war and the diplomatic exchanges preceding it Bulgarian policy seemed to most observers to be directed by Count ADAM TARNOWSKI DE TARNOW, the Austro-Hungarian Minister at Sofia. But Austria brought no military help to her friend FERDINAND; the conspiracy to grind Serbia between the upper and nether millstones was nullified by the victories of Greek and Serbian armies.

We all know the long negotiations of the Summer of 1915, when the Allies tried to win Bulgaria over by bribes of Greek and Serbian territory. Opinion has divided as to whether Bulgaria had already chosen her side or was bought over at the last moment by a higher bid from Germany; almost all the evidence favors the first view, which is made certainty if we accept the treaty published by Mr. PRICE as authentic. Bulgaria picked the side which she thought would win; she carried on her part of the war with great ferocity and determination; and when her armies were finally beaten she turned to her American and English friends and said that she would be graciously pleased to call it a compromise provided she got Macedonia, the Dobrudja, and a sufficient Aegean coast line.

The Conference will shortly have to decide whether to buy peace in the Balkans by giving the Bulgars all they ask at the cost of shameless injustice to our smaller allies—and nothing less than their whole program seems enough to satisfy the Bulgars—or by dictating a settlement based on justice and seeing that it is enforced. We had the same dilemma with Germany, and on the whole the Conference decided to see that justice was done. The precedent is a good one; not even in the Balkans can lasting peace be bought by surrender, even of other people's territory.

BAITING THE PRIME MINISTER.

In Great Britain, as in the United States, the Peace Conference and the Treaty, the League of Nations, all the great international settlements and adjustments to be arrived at, are made the football of domestic politics. Partisan and personal animosities and hopes do what they can to obscure and bemuddle the cardinal questions at issue in Paris. A good many Republican Senators seem much more interested in making war on Mr. WILSON than in the peace of the world. If Mr. LLOYD GEORGE, one of the alertest and subtlest of politicians, is now said to have been drawn by the supposed exigencies of home politics into a disposition to make to the Germans concessions that seem strangely remote from the extreme anti-Germanism of his electoral campaign last December, we in this country, remembering what politics is and does, are able to make allowances for his position.

On the other hand, Americans may not be too much impressed by the renewed attacks upon Mr. LLOYD GEORGE of that bustling newspaper proprietor who deems it his pleasure and duty to warn and discomfort, to laud and castigate, to make and break public men and Governments. The Prime Minister denies that he has been in communication with those pacifists, those pleaders for tenderness to Germany, ARTHUR HENDERSON and RAMSAY MACDONALD. That is one of the charges hostile newspapers which accuse him of "wavering and wabbling" about the peace terms bring against him. Meanwhile the labor press is bewhacking him for his ruthlessness to poor, suffering Germany, is lamenting the "cruelty and wickedness" of the peace terms. Thus the Extreme Right and the Extreme Left are pouring out the vials of wrath simultaneously on his head. His policy is too strong. His policy is too weak.

In short, on any pretext and on directly contrary pretexts, Mr. LLOYD GEORGE'S personal and political enemies want to drive him out of office. But why should he be disturbed by them? Can it be supposed that the English electorate, so hot against the Germans and the pacifists, the Radical and Socialist Laborites, the electorate that reduced the Asquith Liberals to so scanty a remnant in the House of Commons, has changed its mind? Has the coalition, so surprisingly strong at the polls and in the House, suddenly become infected with that curious pity or love of pitiless Germany that the Hendersons and Macdonalds and Snowdens nourish?

In this country Mr. WILSON'S political adversaries like to picture him as under British influence. In Great Britain Mr. LLOYD GEORGE'S adversaries like to picture him as a meek victim of American influences, as wholly under Mr. WILSON'S thumb. There are people in both countries who would like to stir up trouble between them. Mr. LLOYD GEORGE'S enemies in Great Britain would be equal to any misrepresentation and careless of any consequence if they could only bring about his fall. They have said much about his mercurial temperament and volatility of opinion; but on this side of the water it has never been believed that he would be more considerate to Germany than the colleagues with whom he has been in substantial harmony for months, that in less than six months he should have reversed or have softened so marvelously his opinions. The accusations against him are so contrary, political bias or malice is so evident in them, that impartial foreign observers have seen in them only a British example of the well-known American diversion called "playing politics."

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Not Enough for the Job. One could not with entire justice charge lack of the caution that goes so well with courage against the man, whoever he was, who planned the robbery of the Colonial Bank's two messengers. Evidently he credited the messengers with no small amount of fighting inclination and ability, for he sent six, or perhaps accompanied five, able-bodied subordinates to seize the treasure they were carrying, and he showed himself well up to date by providing a fast automobile to take the band to the chosen scene of their exploit and to take them promptly away after its accomplishment. These preparations would be declared adequate by almost any expert critics of such undertakings, but, as the event proved, the planner had not taken into consideration all the facts in the case, and the result was failure. He neglected to note that the name of one messenger was RYAN and that of the other BOYLAN, or else, if he did not ignore the ominousness of those patronymics from a highwayman's point of view, he mistakenly ascribed too much importance to their ages—RYAN is 58 and BOYLAN 67—and decided that six men could easily handle two, thus burdened with years, even if the two were militant by heredity as well as training in the police force.

He should have enlarged his company by at least three more, and a dozen in all would not have been more than enough to insure success. What happened he might have expected. An exiguous six did not even suggest to Messrs. RYAN and BOYLAN the wisdom of submission. Instead of merely resisting, they instantly attacked. The conflict was brief, and its end the flight of the bandits to their car and so away, with nothing to show for their trouble and expense except that they all immediately became the objects of a vigorous man-hunt by the whole police force.

Again They Asked for Silence. Having performed, as was right, the duty of according to the Colonial Bank messengers well-earned appreciation of their bravery and prowess, another and a too familiar feature of the adventure clamors for notice—and explanation. As soon as the detectives were on the case—which was with commendable promptitude—they told everybody who had any knowledge of its details not to talk.

That was in strict accord with precedent as established under the most ancient of police administrations and reverently followed by all its successors, but the uninitiate public never has known, and in all probability never will know, any good reason for these impositions of silence. Several poor ones come to suspicious minds, and first and most often that, when the commission of a crime has been little or not at all the topic of general discussion, failure of the police to apprehend the criminals will also be undebated. The police want us to believe that bad men are more easily caught if their evil deeds remain untold, but though absurdity has won faith for more doctrines than a few, it never got it for that one.

Mayor HYLAN has recently made a new plan for letting crimes here go without mention or comment, declaring that thus would the wicked remain uninformed as to the possibilities that await them here; but that argument cannot be said to have made a real hit with the metropolitan public, either. It omits too many and too important elements of the situation, and is so easily answered by saying that publicity, if it consist of tales of police efficiency, as it would if they could be told, will make all criminals keep away from the city.

Opportunity Denied No Longer. By determining to let into its unions the whole great mass of negro workers the American Federation of Labor has taken action highly important from several points of view. In the first place, this decision marks the breaking down of a barrier the existence of which could be defended only on the ground that it protected the interests of the white race by denying to the black one a right seemingly natural—that of working on terms of equality with the other race if competence to do so could be demonstrated.

This right is now admitted by the strongest and best of American labor organizations, and all over the country the negro worker will have, as he has not had hitherto, a chance to enter all of the skilled and therefore better paid trades, and in them to be judged on his merits—which is all that he can reasonably expect and also all that he has ever demanded.

But the federation's action does more than make its own position logical, and its own claims in a new way and degree valid. The abolition of an inequitable discrimination will open to the ambitious and industrious negro paths long closed to him, and the effect of this cannot fail appreciably to elevate his status in the industrial world. He will no longer in effect be excluded as a worker from any except the tasks called menial and held in little respect.

How the new plan will work in practice is for time and experience to show. There will be troubles and difficulties in its operation, no doubt, for racial differences are real. There is promise, however, in the fact that the change is to be thorough—that there are not to be white and black unions in inevitable rivalry and probably hostility, but that a union man is to be a union man, regardless of his color.

"Wring" Is Such a Harsh Word! Is it true, as one of THE TIMES correspondents has asserted, that the $2,000,000 which Congress has been asked to appropriate for the support of schools in Porto Rico would be the return of "but a very small fraction of the wealth wrung from her soil each year to be spent in the United States, and in peace times in Europe"?

The charge would be more serious if the "wringing" was said to be from the Porto Ricans and not from their soil. Even as it stands, however, the accusation grates on American nerves, for as a people surely we have no desire to injure the island or the islanders, and it would take a lot of proof to make us believe that, as a nation, we really have done harm to either.

But the Porto Ricans are not necessarily disadvantaged by the development of their resources, even though some of the profit goes away as return on capital from the outside. The absentee landlord is more or less detrimental, of course, to any country or region, but he is so often at the mercy of his resident agents that the balance of the account is by no means always in his favor.

Another correspondent more than intimated—he explicitly charged—that the island's ills were largely due to what he called "our Tammany Hall," by which he evidently meant local politicians or a political party that exploited the ignorant and stupid part of the population by inciting it to dream of independence. That would be a calamity indeed, and nobody with any sense would propose carrying the principle of self-determination to the length of making every islet in the Antilles a separate nation.

LAST TO BE BOLSHEVIKI.

That Honor Is Claimed for the Chinese at Home and Here.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the Sunday TIMES, in the article entitled "Official Translations of Our Bolshevist Papers," occurs the following statement: "Only recently it was announced that a newspaper to encourage among Chinamen in America radicalism of the most extreme type was shortly to make its appearance, this particular paper to be backed by the most powerful organization in this country, which is now engaged in a country-wide propaganda campaign, the aim of which is to overthrow law and the established order."

If I am allowed to express my views I would say that statement is totally unfounded. As a student of sociology, I am in touch with the social conditions of the Chinese immigrants throughout the country.

In the first place the Chinese laborers in this country do not care what kind of government this country has as long as there is safety to their persons and property. In the second place, Western capitalism has not yet invaded China to any great extent; consequently, there is no sharp conflict between capital and labor as it is in this country and in Europe, for Bolshevism is essentially the result of sharp conflict between capital and labor, whereas in China the Chinese have no conception of anarchism or Bolshevism. No matter what may happen in this country or in Russia, you would find the Chinese people the last ones to become Bolsheviki.

Recently certain Japanese propagandists in China financed several hundred Chinese bandits in Northern China and influenced them to open a headquarters in Shanghai and called it Bolshevist Headquarters, but immediately it was raided by the Chinese Government, who arrested the members. Thus ended this Japanese enterprise. But this is no indication that the Chinese are tending toward Bolshevism.

The Chinese laborers in this country do not care what "isms" may arise in this country as long as they have work to do and earn enough money to return to their native land.

The rate of decrease of Chinese laborers in this country is also a sign of the Chinese laborers' disinterestedness in the internal affairs of this country. According to the United States Census, in 1890 there were 107,000 Chinese in this country, in 1900 there were 93,283, and in 1910 there were only 70,944 Chinese in the country. Most of the Chinese laborers who once get out of the country would never return to this country. During the last four years of the war Chinese immigration was practically at a standstill. At present it is safely estimated that there are less than 50,000 Chinese in this country. At the present rate of decrease, by the time of the census of 1940 there would be no Chinese laborers in this country, except the native born Chinese citizens of America, and a few Chinese students and merchants, all of whom will be intelligent individuals as compared with the Chinese laborers who came to this country in the past.

YU TINN HUGH.

Italy's Slavic Claims.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In reply to Mr. Tolemaino's letter, published the 12th inst., I have no cognizance of any party among the Croatians and Slovenes who are glad of the change from the hands of an Austrian Emperor to those of the Italian King. There exists the great Democratic Party or Coalition Party, the parties of Starchevich, the socialistic parties, the Peasants' Party, and a small Clerical Party, all of whom wanted to get rid of emperors and kings, and if they must be put into the hands of a king it is much better for them to be with the Serbian King, who is a Jugoslav and speaks their language.

If the Czechoslovaks are worthy of support, why are the Serbians not so? And the Serbians and Croatians are one and the same people, and so are the Croatians and Slovenes. It was the policy of the Austrian dynasty and the Church to divide them.

Why should the Poles have more sympathy from the Allies than the Jugoslavs? The Poles fought for Austria, never supported the Slavs of Austria, and in the beginning of the war considered the Germans as their liberators from the Czarist yoke. All the Jugoslavs sided with the Czechs in the Austrian Parliament. A small exception, perhaps some Clericals of Styria, did not.

As to Fiume and Istria, if they are not left in the hands of Jugoslavia, where history and ethnology put them, then at least let this little country be a republic, and Slavs and Italians there will live in harmony like the people of Switzerland.

If Italy is to be paid for her support in this war, is she not satisfied with Tyrol, and the control she gets in Asia and Northern Africa? I have nothing against Italy and the people of Italy, but I do not wish a portion of the Slavs to become their subjects to satisfy their imperialism. If Italy wants to become a great power, let her have some of the lost German colonies, but not a people that belongs to European civilization.

President Wilson knows history, and the fact that he opposes the surrender of these countries proves that there must be something wrong with the demands of Italy.

THE SLOGAN OF THE FORUM.

"Fight, tooth and claw!"—The world is drowned in noise
Of frantic forums where wild mobs contend;
Bereft is life of all its calm-eyed joys—
The beauty self-forgetting love can lend.
Oh, is success a battle prize to rend
From men down-thrust, who for our wreaths must die?
Are men but brutes in the arena
penned?
"Fight!" rings the slogan, so all fight.
But why?

While service of the Christ the lip employs
With all the life we Mammon's creed commend;
And, even as children struggling over toys
Break the frail playthings they would fain defend,
Self-seeking bankrupts self. Alas, to spend
The golden heart, while scorning years slip by,
In useless use enforced by folly's trend!
"Fight!" rings the slogan, so all fight.
But why?

Alas that Ishmaelitish greed destroys
Even the home; and so the markets blend
Trade-cries with prayer that even religion
cloys!
Even charity is made a thing to vend—
Who gives to God nor asks a dividend?
Who battles for the soul? Whose aim is high?
We tread down others, but do we ascend?
"Fight!" rings the slogan, so all fight.
But why?

ENVOY.

I see Love working toward a happy end
Through dark and light, and Law is Love's ally;
The world you challenge smiles, and seems my friend!
"Fight!" rings the slogan, so all fight. But why?

COVENANT CANNOT BE SEPARATED FROM TREATY.

Seventy-one References to the League in the Peace Terms Offered to Germany.

By HAMILTON HOLT.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

On June 15, 1910, Philander C. Knox, then Secretary of State, delivered the commencement address at the University of Pennsylvania, part of the peroration of which was as follows:

"We have reached a point when it is evident that the future holds in store a time when wars shall cease; when the nations of the world shall realize a federation as real and vital as that now subsisting between the component parts of a single State; when by deliberate international conjunction the strong shall universally help the weak, and when the corporate righteousness of the world shall compel unrighteousness to disappear and shall destroy the habitations of cruelty still lingering in the dark places of the earth."

When these pregnant words were uttered Secretary Knox was engaged in the laudable effort of negotiating all-inclusive arbitration treaties with England and France, which, it may be incidentally recalled, the Democratic Senators were then attacking as furiously as the Republican Senators are today attacking the covenant.

But times have changed. Last Tuesday Senator Knox introduced a resolution into the Senate which, if adopted, is likely to undo all that our delegates have concretely done at Paris for the very federative principle which the distinguished constitutional statesman so eloquently favored nearly a decade ago. The purpose of the Knox resolution is nothing less than frankly to separate the covenant from the peace treaty. The League of Nations is to be left "for later determination" on the pretext that "the people of the United States have had neither time to examine and consider nor opportunity to express regarding it a matured and deliberate judgment."

It was no mere chance that the Peace Conference passed at its second plenary session, on Jan. 25, a resolution, of which the following is the first paragraph:

> It is essential to the maintenance of the world settlement which the associated nations are now met to establish that a League of Nations be created to promote international obligations and to provide safeguards against war. This League should be created as an integral part of the general treaty of peace and should be open to every civilized nation that can be relied upon to promote its objects.

The question of whether a League of Nations should be an "integral part" of the treaty was the burning issue from the day the conference assembled. Every conceivable effort was made by all the forces of chauvinism, militarism, commercialism, and old-time diplomacy to have the consideration of the League of Nations deferred until after peace was declared. But the League of Nations was one of President Wilson's cardinal Fourteen Points, and largely through his insistence better counsels prevailed and the League became the very frontispiece of the Peace Treaty.

And now a careful perusal of the full text of the treaty as published by the Senate discloses the fact that the League of Nations is so interwoven in the texture of the whole general peace that to extract it from the treaty would be like the attempt of the dentist who, when he tried to pull the tooth, brought out the whole skeleton with it. I have gone over the treaty with special reference to the covenant, and not counting Part I., which is a republication of the covenant itself, the League of Nations is referred to by name seventy-one separate times.

The League, for instance, will have full charge of final disposition of the Sarre Valley; it will control the free city of Danzig; it will supervise the conventions between Germany and Poland and Germany and Austria; it will have unlimited power to investigate conditions in Germany; it will supervise all treaties between Germany and the allied powers; it will have duties to perform in regulating the international traffic of ports, waterways, and railroads; it will have power to settle all disputes arising out of the Peace Treaty and to amend it; and it is inextricably bound up with the labor conventions, in which it has all sorts of administrative, executive, legislative, and even judicial functions.

These and similar duties are given to the League of Nations under the Peace Treaty. The League is, in fact, the organization that is intended not only to keep the peace of the world, but, as is stated at the head of the preamble of the covenant, "to promote international co-operation."

Moreover, the League is the only power adequate to safeguard the integrity and independence of the new nations born during the war. How long could Poland, Finland, Jugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Hedjaz, and Palestine exist as independent nations in an era of old-time militaristic alliances? What chance would Esthonia, Latvia, Lithuania, the Ukraine, Georgia, and Armenia have to work out their destiny unmolested except under the aegis of a League of Nations? And what about our enemies, Germany, Austria, Turkey, and Bulgaria? Shall we simply sign with them a scrap of paper and then depart from Paris under the delusion that the treaty will execute itself? The sentence imposed upon Germany by the Allies was an indeterminate one, to borrow a term from the criminologists. Can there be the slightest ground for hope that such a sentence can be carried out except by a powerful League of Nations always on the job as probation officer to see that Germany keeps disarmed and pays her fines and continues to keep on her good behavior? And then how about disarmament? Is there the slightest chance that one single nation will disarm unless all do the same, and is there any chance that all will disarm if some can rearm again at their pleasure? Is not the League of Nations the only organization strong enough to maintain that general disarmament so passionately desired by the war-weary peoples of the world?

What about the captured colonies? If we sign a peace without a league these colonies will be put in the grab bag for annexation by the rival powers instead of being administered with regard to native interests by the admirable mandatory system of the League. And what about those nations who have no access to raw materials? Are they to be left out in the cold? They are likely to be so unless a League of Nations is there ready to provide for their necessities on some equitable basis.

Indeed, if no attempt is made to establish a League of Nations in the present Peace Treaty the world will run the risk of sinking back to the old system of alliances, with its mutual hates and suspicions, scandalous armament rivalries, cutthroat economic competition, class exploitation, and inevitable wars.

We are still at war with Germany. It is difficult to conceive of anything better calculated to divide the American people, antagonize and dishearten our allies, and "give aid and comfort" to the enemy than the discreditable resolution bearing the name of Senator Knox.

THE JUGOSLAV CAUSE.

Money Collected Here Was Used for Relief, Not Propaganda.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The writer's attention has been called to the assertions of the Italian newspaper, Epoca, as reprinted in the columns of your paper, stating that the support the entire Jugoslav question is finding in this country was largely due to the extensive Jugoslav propaganda financed by funds collected here by different influential Americans. Regarding this, allow me to say just a few words here.

The Serbian National Defense League of America is one of those organizations which were doing charitable work in this country for the Jugoslavs, and up to now it has collected from Americans and Jugoslavs a sum amounting to over $360,000, but not one single penny of this entire amount was used for any other purposes than those to which it was dedicated, viz., buying of food, clothing, medicines, and other articles necessary for the war-stricken Jugoslav people.

Moreover, the same league is under direct supervision of the National Investigation Bureau of this city, its books and other documents being examined every six months by responsible State auditors, as is the case with all other mentioned societies and organizations doing this charitable work for the Jugoslavs; and for anybody to come now and say that the funds collected by those organizations are misappropriated is more than ordinary injustice and calumny.

And today, regarding the Fiume controversy, Serbia, at the Peace Conference in Paris, is doing nothing but humbly asking that this controversy be decided by the delegates of one country that sacrificed thousands and thousands of lives of her noblest sons and spent billions and billions of her treasure for no other purpose but to save civilization, the Allies, and this same Italy, while Italy goes not only so far as to refuse this country for her judge, but claims, in spite of her tremendous disasters, that she saved, not only herself, but all the other Allies also.

In the face of such audacity and presumption, the writer can say nothing further.

Personal Politics.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In a conversation I had recently with a staunch Republican he said that "personally" he did not care for President Wilson, and therefore he did not think much of his work or ideals.

Is this the attitude which is governing our illustrious Republican Senators at Washington?

Apparently it is, as their actions in assailing Woodrow Wilson appear to be more because of their personal feeling than because they are, as they claim, looking out for the welfare of our country. No statesman who had the interest of America at heart would wilfully try to block the Peace Treaty and support such a document as the Knox resolution.

Surely there are enough clear-minded Republican Senators to avert such a catastrophe as allowing the Knox resolution to secure even one-third of the votes of the Senate.

The War Answers Colonel Harvey.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Colonel George Harvey says that the League of Nations involves our country in entangling alliances and so violates the great traditions of Washington, reiterated by every following President. His viewpoint is, to say the least, narrow and antiquated. The present war has to a great extent overthrown these traditions, and in the light of this struggle of all people to rid themselves of the dominating yokes, a new era has come into being. Our participation in the present conflict is the best answer, showing conclusively that we could no longer hold ourselves aloof from questions of international import.

Although the League is a radical departure from the old system of imperialistic domination of peoples, it is but the outcome of the desire of all nations to rule themselves by some concerted republican form of government, for the purpose of adjusting international disputes and not for the purpose of regulating the internal policy of any of the leagued nations.

The taxation of all the people of the European nations for military purposes had reached such unbearable proportions before the war that the break had to come. Now, after the struggle is over, which one of us would care to go back to secret diplomacy, military oppression, and imperialistic egotism?

Bolshevism and Lithuanians.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In an article published in your issue of Sunday, June 8, you traced the growth of Bolshevism among foreign-born residents of the United States. The impression is conveyed that American citizens of Lithuanian descent have Bolshevist sympathies. From my work among the Lithuanians in this country I am convinced that such is not the case. The million Americans of Lithuanian descent who are found in this country are patriotically American in their aspirations and sympathies. They have contributed generously to the winning of the war and have many thousands in the army and navy of the United States.

The Lithuanian societies in this country, which embrace all of the American citizens of Lithuanian descent, have given their unqualified support to the establishment of an independent Lithuanian democratic republic. The Lithuanian Republic is, as you know, strongly anti-Bolshevist in character. The Lithuanian National Army has been fighting the Bolshevist troops ever since the signing of the armistice; cause, the Lithuanian territory is to be laid open to the menace of Russian anarchy. They are hindered in this work by the invasion of Polish troops from the rear, thus causing them to divide their forces to fight on two fronts.

A Trade School Education.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

On your editorial page on June 7 I read a statement, signed by Mrs. Alice Carpenter, that the public schools were so crowded that the children were obliged to attend in shifts.

That same day, for the first time, I went over a recently completed and very beautiful public school building which at present might accept several hundred more in its ample quarters, built to accommodate 1,000 pupils. This is the Manhattan Trade School for Girls, at Lexington Avenue and Twenty-second Street. Yet this building is in the centre of the city and close to thickly populated districts.

If the upper classes of the grammar schools are so crowded, why could not some of the girls who have proved better suited for trade work be transferred to this school and relieve some of the pressure?

YALE PAYS TRIBUTE TO ITS DEAD IN WAR

Commencement Exercises Open with Memorial Service for 210 Killed in Action.

HAD 8,000 IN UNIFORM

President Hadley Exhorts University to Protect Democracy, That They Shall Not Have Died in Vain.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 15.—Yale's commencement exercises opened today with memorial services for its 210 men killed in the war. The commemorative address was delivered by President Arthur T. Hadley, and an ode was sung which was written by Brian Hooker, 1902, and set to music by Professor Horatio W. Parker, head of the School of Music. They are, respectively, the composer of the libretto and the music of the opera "Mona." The principal address at the annual meeting of "Yale in China" was given by Clarence H. Kelsey of New York City.

"Two years ago this place was filled with men in uniform, eager in their enthusiasm for the work that was before them," said President Hadley. "A year ago they had left us, and among those who remained the spirit of enthusiasm had given place to one of solemn resolution. Today those who went out have returned in triumph to lay aside their uniforms and to resume the work of peace. The spirit of the day is one of rejoicing.

"But not all of those who went have come back. Two hundred Yale men have given their lives in their country's service. Some had the joy and the glory of being killed in action. The runner has ended his last race on the fields of France, with his face toward Berlin. The oarsman has fought his best contest to a finish in the waves of the English Channel. The scholar has set forth more of the true meaning of what Yale had to teach in a single immortal day than others, less privileged, have done in a lifetime. And side by side with those who have thus borne public testimony of their devotion there is a larger number called to bear the yet heavier burden of lingering death from wounds or from disease. Theirs has been the greater sacrifice, with the lesser visible good, and to them belongs today the fullest measure of recognition.

"These men have fought their fight; ours remains before us. Fifty years ago Abraham Lincoln pointed out the way—the only way—in which the living can worthily commemorate the dead. It is for us to see that these heroic dead shall not have died in vain. The visible memorials which we may erect, whatever their usefulness or their beauty, are but symbols of our gratitude and affection. The gratitude and the affection themselves are manifested in seeing that the work of the dead is not left half done.

"The need of this admonition is even greater today than it was when Lincoln spoke; for the dangers to freedom are more immediate and more complex today than they were fifty years ago. At the close of our civil war we faced the comparatively simple problem of preserving freedom for men already trained in the principles of law and morals, on which free institutions had been based. Today we have to secure freedom to men of many races, with many standards of law and morals, more accustomed to despotic authority than to the exercise of self-government. Liberty is threatened from below as well as from above. Those who died have protected democracy against the attacks of those who conceived themselves to be above the law. To us remains the harder task of protecting it against the machinations of those who conceive themselves to be beneath it.

"It is one of history's plainest lessons that democracy is based upon self-control; that a people cannot remain free unless its members will voluntarily use their freedom for the purposes of the community under a system of moral law. Yale has taught this lesson in the past. May she continue to do so in the future; and may we, as Yale men, take out part in the teaching! Thus shall we render to the dead the highest honor that is in our power, by keeping our hand day and night upon the maintenance of the work to which they have given their lives.

"In a very real sense this year's Yale commencement is a 'victory commencement.' More than 8,000 Yale men were in uniform, including practically every able-bodied member of the present graduating classes in the college and the Sheffield Scientific School; more than 200 made the supreme sacrifice and an equal number were taken prisoner or wounded, and 234 Yale men received a total of 273 war decorations from the United States and seven Allied countries."

In a normal year twenty or more classes would return to hold formal reunions during Commencement Week. This year the unusual circumstances following the close of the war will bring back in all fifty-seven classes. Their reunions will range all the way from sitting together at the Yale-Harvard baseball game on Tuesday afternoon and attending the dinner of the "Class of 1492" that evening to living together for a week in special class headquarters and carrying out elaborate programs as class units. It is expected that some 4,000 graduates will participate in the picturesque parade to the baseball diamond on Tuesday afternoon, as perhaps thirty or more of these classes will be dressed in special reunion costumes.

Some people of generous enthusiasm," he went on, "have believed that the unselfish purpose, the lofty ideals, the inspiration generated by this war will prove permanent, and raise men to a height of character that will transform our nation and keep it on a higher plane. But history gives little warrant for such an expectation. The waste of war—and there has never been a waste comparable to that in the track of this war—leaves devastation, losses, and debts to be made good, and it is natural that men's minds should be for a time engrossed by material aims. Everywhere we shall need moral convictions, strongly held, and sustained by strenuous moral effort.

"Never before had the world, or our own country, more need of statesmen to direct the current of thought and action than in the period of readjustment that lies before us; never more use for brave men and true, concerned, not about office, political career, or party advantage, but about integrity, good service, and wise judgment in the Government; never a stronger call for people who can think clearly and speak fearlessly.

"There is, I know, a widespread belief that a man who in worldly affairs tries to be better than his day courts failure. This is no more true than the opposite maxim that in business honesty is the best policy. From the point of view of worldly success, of money making, dishonesty sometimes succeeds and sometimes does not. If honesty is often the best policy that is not the reason for being honest; and if shrewd overreaching prosper that is not the for its adoption. If your aim is material, the world will estimate your success correctly, but in so far as your aim is higher you must look elsewhere for judgment. Almost every one fails and fails constantly, and sometimes those who have failed most are in the end most successful."

Men, made fitting mention of the nineteen members of the class of 1919 who have given their lives in the war.

DENY AMERICAN UNIT MUTINIED IN RUSSIA

Men of 339th Infantry Back at Brest Say Reports Were Exaggerated.

Copyright, 1919, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

BREST, June 11, (via Paris, June 15.)—From the swamps and waste lands of Archangel and Murmansk, and along the Volga, where through the dreary Russian Winter they fought bravely, the first homeward bound contingent of the 339th Infantry arrived here tonight. A total of fifty-two officers and 1,800 men was brought ashore at 5 o'clock this evening from the tanker Czar after an eight-day trip. Major J. Brooks Nichols commands the detachment.

This is a detachment from the regiment whose reported mutiny last March created such a furore in army circles in the United States. But there was no revolt. The highest officer and the lowliest buck private in the unit indignantly deny there was a mutiny, but it is admitted there came near being one.

Company I is credited with the mutiny. Company I says:

"We kicked like hell, but we didn't mutiny."

No man in Company I arrived in chains; none ever wore a chain; none ever was court-martialed for mutiny. What actually happened, as near as one gathers from officers and men, was something like this:

The men complained a long time because they did not understand why there was fighting in Russia when the war was over. Late last March Company I was ordered to entrain at Archangel for the front. When the top Sergeant transmitted the instructions to the men in the barracks they refused to don their packs, asking: "Why in hell are we here?"

The Sergeant reported to Captain Winslow, commanding the company, and he and Colonel Stewart addressed the men sternly but kindly, and the men arose, put on their packs, and entrained for the front.

"The same company forty-eight hours later fought off an enemy attack outnumbering them seven to one and put up a brilliant fight," said Major Nichols.

Colonel Stewart, then commanding the forces in Russia, did not consider a mutiny attempted, the officers say, but decided it simply was a refusal of the men to obey the noncommissioned officer. However, there is no attempt on the part of the officers to deny the fact the men were in a bad state of mind and rebellious because they had to fight in Russia.

Brig. Gen. Richardson was sent to Archangel in April to assume command. Immediately he became aware of the situation he advised the War Department to have the men evacuated as soon as possible. Brig. Gen. Richardson and Colonel Stewart still are in Archangel with 2,000 troops of the 339th.

The outfits which arrived here today were: Headquarters 3d Battalion, Companies A, E, J, I, L, and M; a machine gun company, and a medical detachment. Most of them hail from Detroit, and are hard looking, fit, and bronzed after the rigors of the Winter winds. Out of 1,500 men only fourteen were in sick headquarters. The regiment lost 200 killed and 400 wounded since going to Russia in September.

The regiment had about 100 engagements. The last fighting was done in April by Company A, the Captain being wounded.

CHICAGO IRISH PROTEST "TYRANNY" OF BRITAIN

Declare Against League of Nations Unless Ireland Is Free Under It.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 15.—More than 200 delegates representing every Irish society in the city adopted resolutions today warning America against British propaganda.

The program determined on consisted mainly in combating what each speaker termed "damnable English efforts to delude America into believing the Irish question is one of internal politics in Great Britain." Each speaker urged study of the League of Nations covenant and a campaign against the project if Ireland's freedom is not provided for. The resolutions protest against England's "tyranny," poke fun at Britain's "freedom of the seas," and beseech President Wilson's aid for Ireland.

Defending the Sinn Fein movement, and declaring that the American press is deceived by British propaganda, the resolution continues:

"It took the Revolutionary War to eradicate nearly all the Anglo humbug from our system, so the Tories left our shores. Now their progeny, with their 'Hands Across the Seas,' are seeking to fasten their monarchical ideas upon us. Our Government is a protest against the English and we want it so to remain."

DOUBTS PERMANENCE OF IDEALS FROM WAR

Lowell, in Baccalaureate Sermon at Harvard, Says History Points the Other Way.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 15.—President Lowell of Harvard delivered the baccalaureate sermon at the seniors' Sabbath services this afternoon, opening Commencement Week at Harvard. The service was held in Appleton Chapel. Several hundred members of the class of 1919 marched to the church, headed by Henry C. Flower, First Marshal of the class. The class of 1894, observing its twenty-fifth year from graduation, also held services in the college chapel. Both classes later attended the reception held by President and Mrs. Lowell at their home.

DAYS OF PEACE OVER, DR. HIBBEN DECLARES

"Must Build the World Anew," He Says in Princeton Baccalaureate Sermon.

NEED FOR LEADERS URGENT

War Has Created Many New Fields for College Men, President Tells Graduates.

Dr. John Grier Hibben, President of Princeton University, delivered the baccalaureate sermon yesterday to this year's graduating class, and also to the members of the 1917 and 1918 classes, many of whom were in France or on the seas in the service of their country at the time that their exercises were to have taken place. In his address, he called upon the returned heroes to assume the responsibilities which belonged to their comrades who had fallen in battle, and "to prove themselves worthy of them and of the cause in devotion to which these our beloved dead, laid the glory and the promise of their youth upon the high altar of sacrifice."

"You who are here before me belong to the privileged class of our land," Dr. Hibben said, "the only privileged class which the world knows and owns today, men of an enlightened mind and quickened conscience. Before you is the sword of the spirit; grasp it with courage and consecrated purpose. Flash it boldly in the dark places where your mission in life may summon you, and, as in the primal fiat of creation, there will be light.

"In former baccalaureate addresses I have endeavored to unfold to the graduating classes the nature of the experiences in the unknown world before them, but today I feel that I am speaking to many who have only yesterday returned from participating in the greatest world convulsion which the history of man has recorded. In the crowded hours of the past few months you have accumulated a wealth of experience unknown to the mass of men who lead their self-centred and pitifully limited lives throughout the uneventful period of their three-score and ten years.

"The day of peace is past. We dare not return to the old order of things. We cannot if we would. We must move to advanced positions, there consolidate our forces, and push forward the shock troops which alone prevail in the great emergency. The call comes to you at this critical hour. You are ordered to the front. Never has there been such a responsibility or such an opportunity as yours. You are to be the builders of the new world.

"In the old days the possibilities of a career before the man who sought his place in the world by a college diploma were relatively limited. There were the professions of the ministry, law, medicine, and teaching, or a business career. Today the world's need has created many other tasks which make their strong appeal to the trained intelligence and the enthusiasm of college men. There is a demand, strong and urgent, for leaders in the great human movements which seek to give a new life to man, not only in the length, but in the increasing depth and broader scope of his years upon the earth.

"There are organizations to educate the returning soldier, to fit the maimed and the blind for work at which they may be happy and successful and not become a burden upon themselves or society. There are societies to combat the beginnings and progress of disease, others to study the problems of poverty and crime, to teach our foreign-born population something of the living power of our national institutions, inculcating a reverence for law and the recognition that citizenship has its duties as well as its privileges. There are the welfare organizations of our large corporations, the social settlement in the congested districts of our great cities, the Boy Scout movement, now this week particularly brought to our attention; societies for the promotion of general community interests, improved housing conditions, sanitary regulations, school privileges, care of boys and girls criminally inclined, and all that makes for bodily and moral health. There are the special missionary enterprises in foreign lands, which is idealism in its supreme and most practical manifestation.

"Whatever be your station, you will sooner or later be called upon to deal at close quarters with your fellow men. Your success in life will depend upon your ability to work with them and through them in mutual understanding and co-operation. The restlessness of the great masses of mankind, which is a constantly increasing menace to all our political, social and economic life, challenges the attention and serious study of the college man. The problems created by this condition cannot be solved until they are understood. Who can understand, if not the man of trained mind?

"The war has removed all social distinctions between comrades. Do not create anew these differences. Recognize a man when you see him. Give him the hand of comradeship, and let him feel that you believe in him, that you wish to give him the chance to prove the worth that is there.

"Members of the graduating class, you stand before me, a composite body, members of the Class of 1919, with those also of the Classes of 1917 and 1918, who have returned from war service to complete their interrupted course. There are others whose place today among their comrades is vacant. They have freely given their lives for the great cause. They will always be held by us in loving and grateful remembrance.

"And as we name them in our hearts, we thank God that at the call of duty they did not falter, and in the hour of death they knew no fear. In the name of their unfinished work, it is your privilege to assume a responsibility which would have been theirs. They represented you in their death; so also you may represent them in your life, and prove yourselves worthy of them and of the cause in devotion to which these our beloved dead laid the glory and the promise of their youth upon the high altar of sacrifice. Behind you are stirring memories, before you the way of service and of sacrifice. It is the way of the spirit, and it leads to the high places where man may walk with God and so realize the divine possibility latent in every human life. May the spirit of the living God guide you and abundantly bless you in His wisdom and love."

CALLS FOR GREATER VISION.

President of New York University Delivers Baccalaureate Sermon.

Declaring that the world is now one great neighborhood, in which one nation cannot keep apart from the others, the Rev. Dr. George Alexander, President of New York University, in delivering the baccalaureate sermon to the graduating class of the university yesterday afternoon, said that the reconstruction of the world will be accomplished through the visions of the young men and the dreams of old men. Dr. Alexander referred to the faith held by the Jewish patriarchs and prophets of Biblical times in visions and dreams, and of the progress of the race through these dreamers. The same farsightedness, visions, and dreams must be used in solving the problems of the present-day world, he said. Dr. Alexander preached from the text, "Your young men shall see visions."

"Old age is reminiscent," he said, "youth is prophetic. It is characteristic of old men to dream dreams and young men to see visions. We have, however, been living through a period in which visions and dreams have been at a discount. The scientific spirit has been dominant. Hard facts have been in demand. A materialistic view of the world order has left no room for the mystical. Scholars imbued with the spirit of the age have tried to apply in the realm of faith the same canons of criticism which have been so successfully applied in the material realm, and to relegate to the domain of myth and fable everything that cannot be tested by the rules of evidence observed in courts of law or in the researches of the laboratory.

"A reaction has come. Man's logic may have no place for the supernatural, but man's heart cannot do without. The moral progress of the race has been due to successive impulses received through men to whom come fresh disclosures of the unseen and eternal. The founders and guides of the Hebrew commonwealth were seers, all of them, and the history of Judaism is a testimony of the truth of the proverb, 'Where there is no vision the people perish.'

"The glory of Christianity has been the testimony of her seers. The great epochs in the annals of Christendom have been those in which her young men were seeing visions and translating them into deeds. If I read aright the signs of times, we are now in the midst of such a season of spiritual quickening. Five years ago who would have thought that the oncoming generation was capable of such idealism and altruism as have been exhibited. Labor conditions," he said, "would be adjusted and a closer brotherhood established between the worker and the employer through the visions of those who could read aright the signs of the future.

"The visions of God, of truth, of duty, that sustained us through the bitter conflict," concluded Dr. Alexander, "will be needed for our support as we face the task of reshaping a shattered world. Blessed are they who can say with the greatest genius of the Christian centuries, 'I was not disobedient to the heavenly vision.'"

CANADIAN TROOPS RIOT IN AN ENGLISH CAMP

Large Part of Quarters Near Godalming Burned After Demobilization Demonstration.

LONDON, June 15.—Witley Camp, near Godalming, Surrey, was the scene Saturday night of a serious outbreak among Canadian troops stationed there. The greater part of "Tintown," as it is called locally, was burned to the ground, and a part of "Little Tintown," about half a mile away, was also destroyed by fire.

Nearly 20,000 Canadians occupy the camp. The trouble is believed to have arisen from irritation at delay in demobilizing the men and shipping them home. The disturbance started when a large body of men assembled on one of the parade grounds to hold a demonstration against the delay.

Whether the fire in "Tintown" was due to accident is not yet determined. There seems no doubt, however, that the smaller fire was the result of a deliberate act of incendiarism.

General Sir R. W. Turner, Chief of the Canadian General Staff, visited the scene today and addressed the men. He denounced the work of the rioters and said that a few blackguards had brought disgrace on the name of Canada. He told the men that everything possible was being done to speed up demobilization.

Many of the men stationed at the camp have been serving for the greater part of the war, and some are repatriated prisoners. They allege that men who were conscripted and had had comparatively little experience of army life have been sent back to Canada out of their turn. Many men strongly disapproved of the rioting and gave assistance in extinguishing the fire.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, June 15.—Fire again has broken out at Wiley Camp late tonight. The flames can be seen for many miles.

BOATLOAD OF CHILDREN CAPSIZES IN ALABAMA

Nineteen Known to be Drowned and Twelve More Are Still Missing.

TUSCALOOSA, ALA., June 15.—Nineteen persons, most of them children, are known to have been drowned, while rescue parties, aided by powerful searchlights, were tonight dragging the Warrior River near Tuscaloosa for the bodies of twelve others missing from a pleasure party of fifty-three who were cast into the water late today when a gasoline launch was overturned in midstream near Holt, a suburb.

The boat, the Mary Francis, was owned by Sam Alston of Tuscaloosa who had been giving weekly boat rides to children of the city. Alston was saved after he had exhausted himself endeavoring to save his guests.

Overcrowding is given as the cause of the accident, though the launch was supposed to have a passenger carrying capacity of sixty.

There are several instances in which two or more members of the same family are drowned.

The scene of the tragedy is about five miles from Tuscaloosa, where the Warrior River is about a quarter of a mile wide and 18 feet deep in the channel. A number of persons witnessed the disaster and aided in the rescue.

TO FINANCE A NEWSPAPER.

Johnson of Shoe Fame Will Enter Binghamton Morning Field.

Special to The New York Times.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., June 15.—George F. Johnson, who controls the largest shoe factory in the world, is about to enter the newspaper field. He will finance a morning newspaper that is to be under the direction of Representative William H. Hill, a relative of Mr. Johnson. Efforts are being made to buy The Morning Republican, the only morning paper in the field in this section. If these prove unsuccessful, a new newspaper is to be started. It is to be Republican in politics, but will devote itself to the interests of the workingmen.

Mr. Johnson has just started a profit-sharing system among his 27,000 employes, and has other plans for the reconstruction of labor, which will be a feature of the new publication.

LAMBS GIVE $11,000 ENCORE

Their Gambol Repeated with All But Sousa Present at Hippodrome.

The Lambs repeated their 1919 gambol, one of their best, last night at the Hippodrome, thereby accommodating a large audience which had been unable to gain admission at the Manhattan Opera House a week ago. The Hippodrome was crowded last night, and the club exchequer was enriched by some $11,000.

The program was substantially the same as that given a week ago, with the Messrs. Collier, Cohan, Corthell, Judels et al. as the satellites. Only John Philip Sousa was missing from the ensemble, his place being taken by Gustav Kerker. Raymond Hitchcock, newly returned from London, took the stage to auction an autographed program, which sold for $800.

Catholic Actors' Guild to Meet.

There will be a meeting of the Catholic Actors' Guild at the Hotel Astor tomorrow afternoon in celebration of the completion of the fifth year of the organization. The annual election of officers will be held.

CLEMENCEAU ENDS PARIS CAR STRIKE

Appeal to Patriotism Prevails, and the Companies Make Concessions.

MINERS TO GO OUT TODAY

Federation Officials Decline Offer of Labor Minister Colliard to Continue Negotiations.

PARIS, June 15.—The strike of transport workers was called off last night and work will be resumed by all companies tomorrow.

The workers having appealed to Premier Clemenceau, the latter conferred late in the afternoon with municipal representatives, the directors of transport companies, and a workers' delegation. Some claims of the workers were recognized and others were rejected, but the Premier appealed to the strikers' sense of patriotism and justice, pointing out the necessity for union and concord at the present grave juncture. It was in response to his appeal that decision was reached to resume work.

One point on which the transport companies gave way at the instance of the Premier was that no employe should be penalized for participating in the strike.

The conference of French and Italian Socialists, which was to have been held on Thursday, has been postponed, owing to the fact that British and Belgian representatives could not be present.

The officers of the National Federation of Miners yesterday received a letter from M. Colliard, the Minister of Labor, offering to continue the negotiations for a settlement of the miners' claims.

The executives of the federation, however, declined the offer, declaring they had no mandate from the men to take such action nor any right to override the decision of the federation itself.

The miners' strike, therefore, will be begun tomorrow, as had been planned.

ITALIAN STRIKES SAP VITALITY OF NATION

Drastic Measures Are Expected as Result of Orlando's Conference with Colosimo.

LONDON, June 15.—A wireless dispatch received from Rome says that the movement for a general strike has been ended throughout Italy.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, June 15.—After the meeting of Premier Orlando and Vice Premier Colosimo at Oulx, great hopes were entertained here that some drastic measures had been discussed between the two Ministers to combat the ever-increasing strike, which is slowly sapping the vitality of the nation. All commercial and industrial centres are practically at a standstill through the unwillingness of the workmen to resume work.

To cap all this, the labor unions have decided upon a general strike throughout the kingdom, to warn the Government of the necessity for a durable solution of the labor problems, and not merely a temporary one.

Matters have come to such a pass that shops have been sacked, automobiles destroyed, and a member of Parliament maltreated, while in the inevitable clash between the police and strikers several have been killed and wounded.

All hope is now centred in Orlando's return for the opening of Parliament. It is expected that the Premier will take the situation in hand. The pessimists, however, remark that it will not do any good, as he will shortly have to leave again for Paris.

PARIS, June 15, (Associated Press.)—Dispatches from Rome indicate continued labor disturbances in various parts of Italy. The advices state that a general strike has been begun in Milan, and that there has been a similar cessation of work in Turin.

The Post Office employes are demanding ameliorated conditions, and it is announced that 12,000 Post Offices will be closed on June 20 in backing up the demand.

Mrs. Anne Starr Griscom.

Mrs. Anne Starr Griscom, wife of Rodman E. Griscom, Vice President of Bertron, Griscom & Co. of 40 Wall Street, died on Saturday at her home at Haverford, Penn., according to word received here yesterday. Mrs. Griscom was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Starr. Her home, Dolobran, was one of the show places of Haverford. One of the most active war workers among the women of Philadelphia, Mrs. Griscom was appointed in December last as a member of the Women's Advisory Council to assist the Federal Government in matters relating to the welfare of women employed on war contracts. The funeral will be held on Tuesday at Bryn Mawr.

Brazil's Ex-Finance Minister.

RIO JANEIRO, June 15.—The death is announced of Sabino Barroso, former President of the Chamber of Deputies. Senhor Barroso also held the post of Minister of Finance, but resigned in 1917.

FLEES HARTS ISLAND TO SEE SICK MOTHER

17-Year-Old Inmate of House of Refuge Tries to Swim Across Long Island Sound.

When the mail was distributed among the boy inmates of the House of Refuge on Harts Island yesterday afternoon there was a letter postmarked Schenectady, N. Y., for Chester de Jewski, who is 17 years old and rather small for his age. Reading it, Chester found that his mother was dying, and he decided to escape and see her before it was too late.

Shortly before 6 o'clock the chance to get away came along. Eluding the guard, the lad slipped down to the waterfront and dove in. He could see far over the Sound the outlines of City Island, and he planned to swim there. He had often swum long spells in the Mohawk up at Schenectady, and he thought he was equal to the long struggle to City Island.

Less than half the way over, however, Chester's youthful strength gave out and he was giving up the battle when a log floated in front of him. He grasped it, and finally landed astride it. Caught in the swift intake of water that made Hell Gate noted for its current, the lad on the log was swept along. For two hours of the daylight of his trip Chester rode down the river, thinking that somebody on the many boats he passed would answer his shouts. But nobody paid the slightest heed, and darkness settled down.

It was 12:45 o'clock this morning when a watchman on a pier at the foot of East 132d Street fancied he saw a strange figure silently pass the pier head. Looking closer, he saw a lad, with head bended down, seated on a log going downstream fast.

The watchman shouted and the lad stirred and feebly replied. Rushing up to the next pier and meeting Policeman Alexander Eisele of the Alexander Avenue station on the way, the two men put out in a launch to chase the solitary log rider.

Down opposite East 128th Street the motorboat caught up with Chester and his craft. The boy was taken ashore and given something to warm him up. Then he was taken to the station house, where his garb of the House of Refuge was noted. When the police tried to question him, after getting his story of the ride down the river, he shivered a bit and said:

"I was going home to see m-mother. Do you guess they'll let me get away in time?"

Where Japan and the U. S. first joined hands

IN 1854 Commodore Matthew C. Perry near here delivered to the Shogun's Representative the historic friendly letter from the President of the United States. Then a fishing village, today Yokohama, the gateway to Japan, has 25 native banks and claims 40% of the Empire's foreign commerce, reaching in 1916 with a total of 707,390,841 Yen ($353,695,420). With a whole population of 500,000 the foreign residents number 8,000.

The two Customs Piers accommodate ten ocean steamers at one time. Yokohama (with Tokyo) built the first steam railroad in the Empire in 1872. The city's endless amusements include horse racing, frequently attended by the Emperor and other Imperial personages. Yokohama abounds in points of historic interest, and the first sight visible to the arriving voyager is the majestic, snow-capped peak of Fuji-yama, the sacred mountain.

BURGLARS KILL JIM, A HERO AMONG DOGS

SAVED THREE MEN'S LIVES

Animal Wore a Medal for Valor and Was Honored by the Great—Book Written About Him.

Jim, the Great Dane which was feted by his admirers, had won a bronze medal for saving life, and was sung of by at least one poet, is dead. His owner, Dr. H. T. Galpin, a druggist at Fifty-seventh Street and Sixth Avenue, told yesterday how Jim was beaten by burglars Tuesday morning, and how he died of the beating Saturday. The dog was of unusual intelligence. He knew bad men from good.

On Monday, after the close of business and Dr. Galpin had closed his store for the night, Jim went to his accustomed sleeping place in the basement. Dr. Galpin sleeps in a rear room, and was soundly sleeping, shortly after 3 o'clock in the morning, when he was awakened by the entrance of Jim, which trotted into the room, thrust his cold nose against the doctor's hand, and then ran into the store.

A commotion followed. There was much tumbling about, and the doctor sprang from his couch. Before he could reach the store he heard Jim yelp. Entering, he saw two men tearing out of the door. They fled, but that they had not escaped unscathed was proved by a trail of blood that led to the street. Jim had left his mark upon them.

A hurried examination showed that the burglars had emptied the cash drawer and were at work upon the safe when the Dane sprang upon them. In the safe were the stamps and cash due to the Government from the branch post office in the store. Jim lay upon the floor, badly beaten by some heavy weapon, probably a blackjack. He was taken to a dog hospital, where an examination showed that his ribs had been broken and the abdominal wall pierced. The police were notified, but no clue to the burglars has been obtained.

A book telling all about Jim has been printed by Dr. Galpin. It records his many acts of intelligence, and contains an article printed about him in THE NEW YORK TIMES of Jan. 4, 1914. This tells how Jim won a bronze medal by saving the life of his master, his master's brother, the Rev. Dr. Galpin of Pittsburgh, Penn., and a friend, who were visiting the doctor.

At 6:30 o'clock one morning a fire started in the drug store, burned off twenty-two gas meters and released the gas. The store and the adjoining room where the doctor and his guests were asleep soon began to fill.

Jim, knowing there was something wrong, tried to awaken his master by barking, but the doctor was too much under the influence of the gas to hear. Then the dog went at him with his teeth. He left 106 tooth marks on his body before the doctor was sufficiently aroused to save himself and his guests.

For this act of courage and intelligence, a luncheon was given in Jim's honor at the Alps. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Irving Twombly, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Hanford, Mr. and Mrs. Hart Gress, Mrs. S. W. Long, and Dr. F. L. Fossume. The bronze medal was attached to Jim's collar, and always thereafter he wore it.

Jim's fame spread. Artists, writers, and verse makers made a point of being introduced to Jim. Sometimes the Great Dane even went out of his way to meet people. This happened in February, 1914, when he called upon Mrs. James Speyer, President of the New York Woman's League for Animals, at her home in Fifth Avenue. His age was then rising three years, and he weighed 127 pounds. For this visit he had been especially groomed, and his brindle coat shone. At Mrs. Speyer's home he met the officers of the league and other guests and received another medal.

In the same month Miss Kate Sanborn, who writes nature stories, gave a tea in his honor. Later still he was a guest at the annual dinner of the Canadian Camp. He was entertained royally and received so much praise and so many tokens of love that he would have been spoiled if this had been possible.

Jim was the constant companion of Dr. Galpin and went with him whenever the doctor took trips in his automobile. A special seat had been arranged for him in the car. It was said that Jim traveled in this way many thousand miles. It would take a much bigger book than the one already written to tell Jim's complete life story. This is what W. J. Lampton wrote about him:

Jim, Jim, mark it high for him.
A man that's as good a man as Jim
In a dog, is the kind of a man who can
Be counted on as the right kind of man.

ROBS WOMAN ON ELEVATED.

Snatches Necklace Through Window as Train Leaves Station.

Mrs. Bella Englehart of 118 East Ninety-seventh Street was robbed in an unusual way last night when the northbound Second Avenue elevated train in which she was riding was pulling out of the Forty-second Street Station. A man reached through the car window and tore a diamond lavalliere from her throat.

She shouted for help, but the robber escaped before persons on the platform were able to learn what had happened. Mrs. Englehart said she had been to Staten Island and was on her way home when the robbery occurred. She was seated in the first car of the train, she said, when a tall man boarded the train at Chatham Square.

The man seated himself directly across from her, she said, and made her uncomfortable by the steady gaze he directed at her and at the lavalliere on her throat. She said that she had decided to leave the train to escape him when, at the Forty-second Street Station, he left the car.

STRAY SHOT WOUNDS GIRL.

Child May Die Following Fight Between Sailors.

A bullet fired, the police of Brooklyn assert, when two Porto Rican sailors were struggling for possession of a revolver, may cause the death of 6-year-old Angelina Stele of 32 Degraw Street, Brooklyn. While playing near her home yesterday she was shot in the stomach. She was taken to the Long Island College Hospital. The two sailors are under arrest at the Amity Street station, one charged with felonious assault and the other held as a witness.

The prisoners, Jose Araban of 53 Degraw Street, and Victor Mattuson of 70 Van Buren Street, Brooklyn, quarrelled in the hallway of 53 Degraw Street. When one of the men drew a revolver the other man struggled with him for its possession. The shot which wounded the girl was fired in the course of the fight.

SAVED 50 WORKMEN FROM SHELL EXPLOSION

Policeman at Aberdeen Galloped Through Explosives to Warn Them of Danger.

Special to The New York Times.

ABERDEEN, Md., June 15.—Only masses of brass, casings, splinters of opaque grenade cones, tangled fuses, and fragments of detonators remain on the blackened field which was the scene yesterday of the explosion of 1,500 tons of German high-explosive shells, grenades, and bombs on the Government's proving grounds. Not a single officer at the reservation is sorry. The ammunition had been shipped here for inspection, experimentation, and storage. But no officer doubted that it would explode before the experiments were really begun.

As a matter of fact, before the ammunition was seized by the Allies it was suspected that it had been tampered with, that certain chemical agents had been administered, making the detonators very dangerous to handle.

To the suspicion with which the officers viewed the ammunition is due the fact that no life was lost. As soon as the fifty-five carloads had been dumped, every precaution was taken. And therein lies the story of another Paul Revere who risked his life to save fifty civilian workmen engaged in unloading the death-dealing charges.

This man is a military policeman. Saturday he was riding along the edge of the field when he heard a sharp report. He turned and saw a detonator in flames, the fire then occupying an area of about fifteen square feet. He did not wait to look twice. He urged his horse across the field, which was piled several feet high with loaded shells, bombs, and grenades. The animal steeplechased over the menacing mounds, and finally burst in on a group of workmen carrying a large shell.

The policeman knew that if he yelled a warning they would drop the shell, thus undoing all his efforts. He quietly dismounted and ordered them to set down the explosive. When they had done so, he told them quickly of their danger, and in a few minutes they were out of range.

SAYS DISEASE GRIPS SOUTHERN EUROPE

Col. Folks Sees Need of Sending Aid Quickly to Check the Spread of Pestilence.

HIGH TUBERCULOSIS RATE

Tells National Association Growth of Malady Among Civilians Is Due to Lack of Food.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 15.—American doctors and public health experts must be sent into the devastated districts of Southern Europe at once to battle with disease, which if not brought under control soon might develop into waves of pestilence which would imperil the world. Lieut. Col. Homer Folks of New York warned tonight in addressing the annual convention of the National Tuberculosis Association. Colonel Folks spoke on the relationship between tuberculosis and a general health program, both national and international.

"Among the human costs of the war must be put down a great increase in tuberculosis in Europe," said Colonel Folks.

"If less tuberculosis has been caused by the war among soldiers than was at one time thought likely, a great deal larger increase of tuberculosis has been caused among civilians than was thought possible at the outset.

"This may be due partly to the greater employment of women, but I think the chief factor has been the diminution in food supply. That seems to me the big lesson of the war in regard to tuberculosis. As the food supply goes down the tuberculosis rate goes up, and this increase in tuberculosis is continent-wide."

Colonel Folks pointed out that in Italy before the war the tuberculosis rate had been steadily decreasing. The war, he said, immediately stopped this decrease and almost immediately there began an increase. Although no statistics were available, Colonel Folks said that conditions in Greece even before the war were shocking, tuberculosis being responsible for one death in every six.

"As we know," he declared, "that food conditions in Greece were very bad during certain periods of the war, we cannot doubt that the prevalence of tuberculosis during the war went from bad to worse."

Serbia, he said, had been hit hardest by the white plague, for after that country had been drained of all food supplies for the benefit of Austria the increase in tuberculosis was appalling. Colonel Folks stated that figures showed a tuberculosis death rate in Belgrade in 1917 of 1,453 per one hundred thousand, or about eight times that of an ordinary American city.

"Serbia, as well as other sections of the Balkans, needs immediate help. It can not be done, however, simply by sending money. Too many of their doctors have been lost from typhus, war, and influenza. American doctors and public health experts must be sent to aid in person. Public health nurses and trained social workers must be sent over to demonstrate the success of methods which have proved successful elsewhere."

The eleventh triennial session of the Congress of American Physicians and Surgeons will open tomorrow in a two-day program of conferences. Meeting in conjunction with this body are fourteen other organizations, including the American Climatological and Clinical Association, Association of American Physicians, the American Association of Genito Urinary Surgeons, the American Orthopaedic Association, the American Pediatric Society, the American Association of Pathologists and Bacteriologists, the American Opthalmologists' Society, the American Otological Society, the American Neurological Association, the American Gynecological Association, the American Dermatological Association, the American Society of Tropical Medicine, the American Laryngological Association, and the American Surgical Association. Dr. Simon Flexner of New York City is President of the congress.

UNITED SYNAGOGUE OPENS SESSION HERE

"Star Spangled Banner" Sung After Opening Prayer by Rabbi Goldman.

WAR ACTIVITIES DESCRIBED

Conservative Judaism Offered as a Bulwark Against Threatened World Chaos.

The seventh annual convention of the United Synagogue of America and the second convention of the Women's League of that organization were held yesterday in the auditorium of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America at 531 West 123d Street. Almost 300 men and women from 110 Jewish conservative congregations and sixty sisterhoods, which are affiliated with the body, attended the first day's sessions. The meetings will be resumed today and the convention will end tonight, when an informal dinner will be held in the seminary building.

Following the opening prayer by Rabbi Solomon Goldman of Cleveland and the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner," the Rev. Dr. Elias L. Solomon, President of the United Synagogue, delivered his annual address. He told of the work of the organization in the last year, and said that notwithstanding the war its growth had been steady, the membership having increased from eighty-two to 110 congregations. He said that the United Synagogue had participated in all war activities and helped to find rabbis to serve as chaplains in the army and navy, and helped also to raise funds for all the various drives.

"We deem it our duty as Americans and as Jews to whom the cause of peace is dear," he continued, "to uphold the hands of President Wilson and his colleagues at Versailles in the matter of the establishment of the League of Nations. Faulty as the covenant of the League of Nations may be, (and what human instrument is perfect?) it affords some basis for humanity's hope that such a catastrophe as we have witnessed shall not occur again. It represents a step forward. Humanity's progress consists of a series of steps. We cannot at once attain to perfection or to any stage that will give universal satisfaction. Even the gradual progress, the slow improvement, is to be welcomed, and we rejoice that universal peace is brought nearer to realization by means of the League of Nations."

The wrongs alleged to have been suffered by the Jews in Poland at the hands of the Polish Legion also received attention from Dr. Solomon in his message. "We have occasion to deplore the inhuman treatment still being accorded our helpless brethren in Poland, Galicia, Rumania, and in other countries of Eastern Europe," he asserted. "As always, we are ready to succor the unfortunate ones and to alleviate their sufferings as far as possible. But it behooves us to join all other organizations in public and emphatic protest against the barbarism which still makes the Jew the victim. We cherish the fervent hope that the efforts of the United States Government and the Peace Conference will succeed in stopping the alleged outrages.

"Though peace has come," he continued, "dark clouds of unrest and discontent hover over us. The rumblings of coming revolution which would tear down established institutions can be heard. Destruction threatens everything. We must cultivate our faith, that by means of Judaism, with its conservative attitude, we can help in keeping our country from chaos."

Mrs. Solomon Schechter, wife of the late Professor Schechter, who was President of the Jewish Theological Seminary and founder of the United Synagogue, told of the work of the Women's League, as the President of that body. She said that the activities were mainly connected with war service; that of knitting, doing Red Cross work, raising funds in war drives, furnishing meals to soldiers and sailors, and donating money and garments to the stricken people in Eastern Europe and Palestine. She also told of the work done by the Students' House at 406 West 117th Street, which the organization maintains. It was acquired for the students of Columbia University and the seminary, she said, but with the entry of this country into the war it was turned into a hostess house. Until last December, she asserted, it was given up entirely to soldiers, sailors, and marines, and it was also placed at the disposal of the Students' Army Training Corps of Columbia.

The development and extension of the United Synagogue was discussed at the afternoon session, the discussion being led by Professor Louis Ginzberg, Chairman of the Faculty of the seminary. Reports were read by Rabbi Samuel M. Cohen, Mrs. Samuel I. Heyman, and Dr. Charles I. Hoffman. Following the session, tea was served in the Students' House and a reception for the delegates was held at the Jewish Centre, at 131 West Eighty-sixth Street, last night.

There's no reason why a merchant should worry about his income tax report or his store records

THE average storekeeper who uses a bank check book and an up-to-date National Cash Register can get the figures which tell him how his business stands every day, and the figures he needs for his income tax report once a year.

From his check book and bills:

He can get the cost of running his store, cost of merchandise bought, and a record of payments made.

From his National Cash Register:

He can get a record of his store transactions:

① Cash Sales ③ Received on Account
② Charge Sales ④ Petty Cash Paid Out

These store transactions are the basis of his gross income. They total sixty per cent to ninety per cent of the details occupying his time and clerical labor.

They must be made rapidly during the rush of selling.

They are hard to get, hard to keep, impossible to verify, and expensive to record unless he uses a modern National Cash Register.

National Cash Register figures are the foundation for accounting systems in stores all over the world. A post card or phone call will bring you full information about the way a modern N. C. R. System will keep your store records by machinery.

CONFIDENCE

The Tag is your guarantee

WE could go into the fine points of construction and describe the economical operation of our engines, pumps and special power outfits.

But our Bulletins and Engineers tell about these things ever so much better.

Briefly, we would rather tell you about the guarantee that goes with every engine, pump, concrete mixer, hoist, air compressor and sawing outfit we sell.

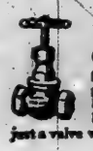
This guarantee is "The Fairbanks Company O.K." It assures quality, fair price and long, reliable service.

Then there are Mill, Mine and Railway Supplies, Scales, Valves, Power Transmission, Trucks and Wheelbarrows, Machine Tools, Automobile and Service Station Equipment—all gathered under one roof—all sold under "The Fairbanks Company O.K."

We are proud of our service. And justly so, because we aim to keep at all times stocks of various sizes and types of mechanical equipment and supplies, and make quick deliveries.

SCALES

Of course you know Fairbanks Scales. They are used in every industry. The name itself is a synonym for reliability and trustworthyness. Fairbanks Scales bear "The Fairbanks Company O.K."



VALVES

Get the benefit of "The Fairbanks Company O.K." on all valves—angle, globe, gate, blow-off, swing check, re-grinding, vulcanized asbestos stop cocks, big and little—iron, bronze and nickel-bronze mounted. A valve is more than just a valve when it is backed up by this guarantee.

TRUCK and WHEELBARROWS

Trucks and wheelbarrows must be right in quality, right in type for the service. Otherwise they make work hard for the men. In the full variety of the Fairbanks line you will find exactly what you need—trucks and wheelbarrows that are easy-running—right in balance. The quality is backed by "The Fairbanks Company O.K."

MACHINE TOOLS

Turret and engine lathes, screw machines, drill presses, millers, planers, shapers, grinders, hack saws and many other kinds of tools. They are all leaders in their line and sold under "The Fairbanks Company O.K."

MILL, MINE & RAILWAY SUPPLIES

There is something more to a twist drill or a shovel when it carries "The Fairbanks Company O.K." The reputation of The Fairbanks Company is back of a complete stock of mill, mine and railway supplies. And that is why every article is good enough to bear "The Fairbanks Company O.K."

POWER TRANSMISSION

Rivet your attention to the ceiling of your shop or to the drive on your machine some day. Think how much depends on this power transmission. If it isn't right, production is held up. It pays to replace old transmission or to equip that new addition with transmission that bears the mark—"The Fairbanks Company O.K."

AUTOMOBILE and SERVICE STATION EQUIPMENT

20-YEAR SENTENCE FOR A.E.F. TRAITOR

Perlmutter, of German Descent, Convicted of Aiding the Enemy When Captured.

IN LOVE WITH GERMAN GIRL

Owes His Detection to Volunteering for Armistice Service to be Near Her.

CONVICT IS A NEW YORKER

Captain Gordon, Who Was the Principal Witness Against Him, Also from This City.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COBLENZ, June 13.—One of the most sensational courts-martial in the history of the American Expeditionary Forces has come to a conclusion with the approval by General Headquarters of sentence to 20 years' imprisonment at hard labor and dishonorable discharge imposed upon Private Lawrence Perlmutter of the Medical Department, 9th Infantry, Second Division.

The charge against him was supplying military information of value to the Germans while he was a prisoner of war. The witnesses against him were fellow prisoners.

But for Perlmutter's being in love with a German girl he probably would have had his freedom today instead of being in a military prison in Coblenz. The most imaginative war fiction could not exceed the human interest of this affair. Incidentally, this man who is convicted of treachery, belongs to what is perhaps the best division in the army.

Perlmutter volunteered for service. His home address is 61 East 103d Street, New York City. He joined the 9th Infantry at Syracuse. He speaks perfect German and is of German descent. He went to France with the 9th Infantry when that regiment was made part of the Second Division. He was assigned to the Medical Detachment, went through a period of training in France, and went into the line with his regiment early last year to the left of St. Mihiel, in the Rouvrois sector.

On the night of April 14, last year, the Germans sent over a raiding party of 500 men, dressed in American and French uniforms. They got beyond the American first line, and in a fight that followed a dugout containing a medical aid station, under command of Lieutenant W. H. Gordon of 250 Riverside Drive, New York City, became surrounded. Perlmutter was in that dugout.

Lieutenant Gordon and his six men put up a fight against the Germans, when the latter tossed hand grenades in upon them while they were engaged in their work of mercy, but after at least three of the seven had been wounded the Germans captured them all. Reports of the fight carried their names as among the missing, and Perlmutter and his comrades were dropped from the 9th Infantry rolls.

Within two hours after their capture Perlmutter's fellow-prisoners saw him talk to a German officer, and thereafter ride away in the German lines. This was just before midnight. At 4 o'clock that morning Lieutenant Gordon and his other five men were brought one by one before the German intelligence officer, where they were astonished to find Perlmutter acting as interpreter. But what dumfounded them more was that, when they refused to give up information in reply to the German's questions, Perlmutter in every instance spoke up and gave just the information asked for. These men were misused and beaten by the Germans in a vain effort to get from them information such as Perlmutter gave, and apparently willingly, they declared.

According to these other men, Perlmutter suffered none of the hardships to which they were subjected, but enjoyed the maximum liberty for a prisoner of war, and appeared always in the favor of the Germans. They allege that they heard him, from time to time, give freely information of the greatest value to the Germans about the American disposition of forces and strength. When the other captured doughboys were sent to the mines and munition dumps to work, Perlmutter continued to act as interpreter or fill some other easy job.

Later, for a little while, the captured Americans were taken to a prison camp at Darmstadt, Lieutenant Gordon being placed in the officers' camp near the enlisted men's camp where his men, other than Perlmutter, were kept. Soon afterward Perlmutter appeared and was put to work as an interpreter and general handy man. According to these witnesses, he had much liberty, always plenty of cigarettes, and special food, and they accuse him of spying on them. While here Perlmutter, it is alleged, became enamored of a German girl, enjoying sufficient liberty because of his good work for the Germans to be able to see her frequently.

When the armistice came Perlmutter was able to get away quickly, and reentered the American lines in December, going to the concentration point in Toul. In January Lieutenant Gordon and the other five men got back into our lines, and the five men were sent to Toul, where they found Perlmutter.

Soon afterward the returned prisoners had a chance to volunteer for military police duty in the Army of Occupation. Of the six men of this story Perlmutter alone volunteered. Before he started he made the mistake of telling one of the other men that he wanted to get to Coblenz, whence he could make his way back to Darmstadt and marry his German girl. A few days after Perlmutter had gone his five companions were sent back to the 9th Infantry, then occupying the sector of the Coblenz bridgehead.

While in the prison camp, Lieutenant Gordon had sent word to the other five men to turn in their names and addresses to him, as sooner or later he meant to appear against Perlmutter. He had communicated with the officers of the 9th and told them of what he wished to accuse Perlmutter.

One day one of the five was in Coblenz on an errand, when he saw Perlmutter in the street doing military duty. He reported the fact when he returned to the 9th headquarters, incidentally repeating what Perlmutter had said about getting back to Germany. That night Perlmutter was arrested. Complete evidence was gathered against him and he was first brought to trial in April. Captain Gordon, who had been promoted, and the five fellow prisoners appearing against him.

Perlmutter denied everything, but at the end of the hearing a general court martial found him guilty, and recommended a twenty-year sentence. Approval from General Headquarters has just reached Coblenz. Perlmutter is to be shipped away in a day or so to begin his sentence.

Bering Ice Swings Back and Blocks Nome Harbor

NOME, Alaska, June 14.—Bering Sea ice, which disappeared from the roadstead in front of Nome two weeks ago, returned just in time to block the passage of the first ships of the year from the outside to this icebound port.

Two big steamers, the Senator and the Victoria, crowded with passengers, and several freighters and traders today were reported held at the southern edge of the pack, between 60 and 100 miles from here.

MILITARY TRIAL CONFRONTS MINOR

New Yorker Held at Coblenz Regarded by Authorities as Dangerous Red Propagandist.

HOUSE ASKS HIS RELEASE

Liggett Refuses Request from Paris—Charges Still Secret, but Known to be Serious.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COBLENZ, June 13.—It is as a result of an investigation with many international complications that Robert Minor, a New York newspaper man, is in confinement in the American military prison, facing charges of a most serious nature, placed by the Commander of the American Army of Occupation. Charges may also be placed by the French and British military and civil authorities. General Liggett tonight declined to accede to a request from Colonel House that Minor be released.

Minor's activities, as a result of which he is under day and night watch by a doughboy guard with fixed bayonet, make a trail from Russia across Germany, through Cologne and into France. He was arrested last Sunday in Paris by French gendarmes, after he had been in conference with the leaders of the present Paris strikes.

When arrested, Minor had credentials obtained from the American Peace Commission, entitling him to all the privileges enjoyed by correspondents covering the Peace Conference. He had passports and passes entitling him to travel in Russia, Germany, Holland, England, France, and other countries. He had passes obtained from General Harries, the head of the American Mission at Berlin, giving him extraordinary privileges. These passes were all obtained upon his representation of being an American newspaper man.

Minor is said to have been in the Ruhr coal district, having seen the serious strikes there during the Spring months. He is said to have gone there from Russia, where he was reported to have been in communication with Lenin and Trotzky. His presence there is said to have directed the attention of the British Military Secret Service to him. I understand he later turned up on the Cologne Bridgehead, where suspicion was directed to him as being an undesirable radical.

Placed Under Surveillance.

He was watched, and when he went to Paris the Secret Service was notified and close tab was kept on him. Meanwhile, the American State Department had been notified of some of Minor's alleged Red activities, and Secretary Lansing was interested. Communications between Minor and certain well-known radicals in Paris were said to have been intercepted. Certain propaganda, said to have been prepared for circulation among the American soldiers in Germany, was reported to have been found in his trunks at his hotel when he was arrested.

Due to this factor, the French at once brought Minor to Coblenz, where, on Monday he was turned over to the American Military Secret Service and placed in close confinement. It was reported here that the British had asked that he be turned over to them for trial, but subsequent investigation by the American authorities revealed certain facts which cannot be yet divulged, which, however, resulted in the determination by the American military commanders to hold onto him. I understand that this was done, although the British had arrested ten persons alleged to have been working with Minor in their territory.

The investigation here has not been completed, and it is rumored that others may be arraigned on charges similar to those on which Minor is held. The censorship here does not permit giving the exact charge on which Minor is held, but it may be said that his activities were considered as extremely and vitally dangerous.

It is believed here that Colonel House was not aware of the nature of the charges against Minor when he requested his release. There had been much mystery placed around his arrest in Paris and his subsequent disappearance. The French would give no explanation. It was when the request went to Colonel House to secure his release that the story became public and the military authorities here permitted the sending of dispatches relative to Minor, although I had known for three days about his arrest, having been in Army Headquarters when he arrived from Paris.

Faces a Military Trial.

Minor faced trial by a military tribunal here. That the army authorities refused Colonel House's request to release him would seem to indicate that they intend to press charges against him. Minor professes absolute unconcern over his arrest, refusing to talk to any one.

The military authorities are reticent in discussing the case, and refuse to give any details of what they have discovered here. It is stated, however, that there is much evidence against Minor in documentary form. It is reported that while Minor was in Russia he became more or less imbued with the Bolshevist doctrines and more or less a convert to them. The military authorities here are trying to get a line on his activities in New York, endeavoring especially to find out how close was his connection with the New York radicals.

There has never been any development of Bolshevism among the American troops, and there is the strongest determination on the part of the American commanders that no one of any nationality is to be allowed to work in that direction. Minor's case may have most interesting developments if it can be shown that he had associates of importance or that his work in Europe was in any way connected with any kindred activities on the other side of the Atlantic. While his case is far from worked up, it can be stated that he is regarded by the English, French, and Americans as a dangerous man.

COBLENZ, June 14. (Associated Press.)—Friends of Robert Minor have started a movement designed to bring about his release, according to word received in Paris. Minor's cell is in an old German prison now used by the American forces. He is allowed daily exercise under the guard of an army officer.

KNOX WON'T CHANGE HIS RESOLUTION

Rejects Suggestion to Eliminate Threat to Defeat League in Its Present Form.

DEBATE BEGINS TOMORROW

Anti-League Senators Not Moved by Miller's Warning—Johnson Indorses the Resolution.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Advocates of the Knox resolution, urging the Peace Conference at Paris to amend the treaty of peace with Germany so that the United States and other nations may join the League of Nations as they desire, after the treaty is signed, said today that they were ready to go on with the fight in the Senate next Tuesday, when the measure is to come up.

Senator Knox, it is understood, will not yield to a suggestion of Administration Senators to amend the resolution so as to eliminate the threat that the Senate will reject the League of Nations if the reservation to join it after the treaty is signed is not written in it. The Pennsylvanian intends, it was said today, to push the measure as it now stands.

Senators espousing the Knox resolution are not appreciably impressed with the assertion of David Hunt Miller, special adviser to the American Peace Mission at Paris, in his conference with Senator Hitchcock, that the peace conferees would regard a vote in favor of the Knox resolution as endangering the peace negotiations with Germany.

"I am an American first," was the comment of Senator Johnson of California, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, in discussing Mr. Miller's statement today. "As an American, I am thinking of how the League of Nations will affect this country. I confess a profound interest, of course, in Lithuania, Hedjas, and other remote States. But my interest is chiefly in my own country. And I do not want to see my country involved in a League of Nations such as this one.

"It is not hard to understand why some of the peace delegates would not want a resolution such as that introduced by Mr. Knox adopted by the Senate, but to my mind it is exactly the character of measure that the Senate ought to pass, to impress the peace delegates with the attitude of the American Senate.

"I intend to vote for the Knox resolution. Whether it will be accepted or not, I cannot say. I don't know that a poll of the Senate has been taken."

Senator Johnson will speak on the Knox resolution. Senator Hitchcock, who is leading the opposition to the resolution, hopes to be able to postpone a vote on it until Germany has signed the Peace Treaty. Republican Senators backing the Knox measure insist that this effort will fail and that a vote will be taken before the end of the week, so that the resolution if passed may be communicated to the Paris Conference before Germany signs.

House to Act as Senate Talks.

WASHINGTON, June 15, (Associated Press.)—Senate discussion of the Peace Treaty and the League of Nations, promising to continue all this week and indefinitely thereafter, transcends in interest all events expected to come before Congress this week.

The treaty debate will probably begin Tuesday, and is expected to rival in partisan intensity and oratory all discussions of the subject. Senator Knox will open the fray for supporters of the measure, and virtually every Senator present, Republican and Democratic, is expected to speak on the resolution.

Democrats have laid careful plans in opposition, with several promising to express their opposition in every possible way, some even proposing a filibuster.

A vote the present week on the Knox resolution is thought improbable. Several Senators, including Chairman Lodge of the Foreign Relations Committee, do not plan to return to Washington until late this week or early next week, and a vote is not expected in most quarters before the succeeding week, with some Democrats in favor of preventing a vote entirely if possible.

While the Senate is thus engaged in discussion of international questions, the House plans to clean up the appropriation bills needed by July 1. Passage tomorrow by the lower body of the Naval bill is planned, and on Thursday the House leaders propose to take up the last remaining appropriation measure, the Sundry Civil bill. On Wednesday the House hopes to propose the bill to repeal the daylight saving law.

Efforts are to be made in the Senate to rush through appropriation measures. The $36,000,000 agricultural appropriation bill, with the committee rider proposing repeal of the Daylight Saving Act and the $15,000,000 District of Columbia appropriation bill will be reported out of committees tomorrow. The $718,000,000 army appropriation bill will be transmitted from the House to the Senate tomorrow and the Senate Military Committee plans to begin consideration. Efforts are expected to increase the bill's appropriations and to raise the figure of 300,000, set by the House, as the "average" army for the coming fiscal year.

Much committee activity in both Senate and House also is planned this week. The hearing include prohibition legislation by committees of both bodies, legislation to repeal the act authorizing Federal control of telegraphs, telephones, and other wire systems, by the House Interstate Commerce Committee, tariff legislation, immigration restriction, and Secretary Lane's bill for allotment of land to soldiers and sailors by House committees, and railroad, shipping, and other legislation by Senate committees.

WANT LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

Farming Journals Favor Its Immediate Ratification, Says Prof. Campbell.

Following a nation-wide canvass of the agricultural press on the subject of the ratification of the League of Nations Covenant in its present form, the canvasser, Professor W. J. Campbell, Rural Extension Secretary of the League to Enforce Peace, announced yesterday that he found an overwhelming proportion of the papers that circulate in the farming communities favor ratification.

According to Professor Campbell, the editors and publishers of sixty-six farm papers, including nearly every prominent publication of this kind in the country, answered the questionnaire sent out by the league. Sixty-two of them unqualifiedly favored ratification as the Covenant now stands. Two were for ratification conditional upon a clearer understanding of the Covenant's meaning. One was non-committal, and only one paper, the Tennessee Farmer and Southern Statesman, published in Knoxville, Tenn., was absolutely opposed to this action.

In reporting the results of this canvass, Professor Campbell said that it was even more convincing than the long list of several hundred favorable resolutions adopted by granges and other agricultural organizations. The sixty papers, declared Professor Campbell, represent a reading public in forty-three States. Six of them, all favorable to the Covenant, have a combined circulation of 2,100,000 copies.

A. E. F. in France Is Burning Automobiles French Government Won't Let Us Sell Them

By CHARLES A. SELDEN.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, June 14.—The extreme result growing out of the French Ministry's determination against the use of foreign-made goods has been reached in the town of Romorantin, where, according to The Matin correspondent, many American Army automobiles are being deliberately destroyed because the French people, who want them, are not allowed to buy them.

There are thousands of machines of all sorts and sizes parked at this depot—American most of them, and in need of slight repairs. The American Army authorities offered to sell them to the French rather than transport them to the United States. The offer would have been eagerly accepted by doctors, storekeepers, small manufacturers, and other French business men, but such purchases would be contrary to the theory of the Ministry of Commerce that in order to protect the French manufacturing industry imports must be kept out, so the privilege of buying these automobiles is denied and the work of burning them has been begun by American soldiers.

It took me more than four months to get a typewriter admitted into this country from America for private office use, and it was only after much letter writing and promises that the machine would not be sold that the necessary Government permit was granted.

REPORT ON IRELAND CALLED FANTASTIC

London Newspaper's Irish Correspondent Says It Is Full of Misstatements.

FLATLY CONTRADICTS IT

Irish-American Delegates Accused of Deliberate Attempts to Poison Wells of American Opinion.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, June 15.—The Daily Telegraph's Irish correspondent says the report on the condition of Ireland drawn up by the three Irish-American delegates is "one of the most fantastic documents ever prepared for political propaganda." He proceeds:

"It is full of misstatements—they deserve to be characterized by a much stronger word. The details it purports to give must have been gathered from partisan sources, with no attempt made to verify them, and all the charges are so grossly overcolored as to make them untrue.

"From beginning to end the report is an absolutely grotesque view of the condition of Ireland today. The Irish executive must answer it, and answer it without delay. It will be easy to refute these allegations by facts which are incontrovertible."

As regards the alleged numerous assaults in public on Republicans, which the delegates declare they witnessed, the correspondent points out that neither the places nor dates of these so-called outrages are given, and that the delegates in their public utterances in Ireland did not refer to them.

"The fact that they do not go into details of what they declare they saw themselves, and then make charges based on the statements of persons of 'unimpeachable integrity,' will render their report worthless in the eyes of any thinking man."

The correspondent then refers to the "ridiculous stories of political prisoners in Mountjoy Goal being locked in steel cages," and says:

"Any one who read the reports of the inquiry into the Sinn Fein riot at Belfast Goal and learned how leniently the Sinn Fein prisoners were treated knows these statements in regard to Mountjoy Prison are obviously untrue, and to say men and women prisoners are compelled to live for days upon water and poorly baked sour and stale bread is a lie.

"One must not pass by the charge that within the past few months at least ten citizens have been killed by soldiers and constables under circumstances which, in the majority of cases, the Coroners' juries found to be wilful murder under the laws of England.

"The Coroners' juries in Ireland bring in strange verdicts. In a recent case where two members of the Royal Irish Constabulary were brutally murdered in a train, while escorting a Sinn Fein prisoner, the Coroners' jury declared the English Government responsible for the murders.

"There was not a word in the report about these Sinn Fein murders, or about the murders of two constables in Tipperary, or of the murder of Mr. Mullins, Resident Magistrate of Westport. No one has been brought to trial for these wicked murders because no one dares in these days of Sinn Fein terrorism to come forward and give evidence, nor is there any mention in the report of the shooting of sentries, of Sinn Fein raids for arms, or of the discovery of a Sinn Fein bomb factory in Cork.

"The Irish-American delegates are silent on these, as on other, matters which make it absolutely necessary to keep a large military force in Ireland, or the lives of peace-loving citizens would not be safe for a day."

The Daily Telegraph, commenting editorially on the report, says:

"The whole production is too evidently a deliberate attempt to poison the wells of American opinion, and seeing on what authority facilities were extended to its authors in Ireland and what countenance has been given to them by President Wilson according them an interview in Paris, we must say emphatically that an official and detailed refutation of this farrago of falsehood is required without delay."

AUTOMOBILE KILLS THREE.

Two Girls and a Boy Die When Struck by Motor Car.

BROCKTON, Mass., June 15.—Three persons were killed, and another was seriously injured when an automobile struck them at Marshall's Corner, near here, tonight.

Muriel Smith, 15 years old; Hazel Pollard, 18, and Irving Taft, 10, all of Brockton, died while being taken to a hospital. August Lawson, 18, has a fractured skull. They were walking on the road when struck. The car was driven by Walter Cheesman, who was arrested on a charge of manslaughter.

HELD ON ROBBERY CHARGE.

Prisoner Accused of Attacking Merchant in Hallway.

Peter Powers, of 1,109 Manhattan Avenue, Brooklyn, was held in $1,500 bail when he was arraigned in the Bridge Plaza Court yesterday on charges of assault and robbery. The police are looking for a sailor, with whom it is alleged Powers waylaid John Carlo, a produce merchant, in the hallway of his home at 1,107 Manhattan Avenue yesterday morning.

Patrolman Schwed, of the Greenpoint Avenue Station, heard Carlo's cries and chased two men. He followed them for three blocks down Java Street to Franklin Street, where the sailor disappeared from view. Schwed kept on after a man said to have been Powers. The patrolman fired three shots at the fugitive, but he did not halt. Schwed searched an empty lot and found Powers hidden in an empty boiler.

MAGYAR ADVANCE HALTED BY CZECHS

Savage Fighting Continues, No Quarter, It Is Said, Being Given by Either Side.

MARTIAL LAW AT PRAGUE

Bela Kun's Reply to Allies Assumes Virtual Recognition of His Soviet Government.

PRAGUE, June 13, (Associated Press.)—Czechoslovak efforts against the Hungarian Soviet troops are beginning to take effect. The Hungarians appear to be halted, although much sanguinary fighting is going on, no quarter being given by either side. The Czech losses were severe last week, often only twenty men remaining from single companies. Large numbers of soldiers who are returning from Russia and also from the Italian front have joined the Czechoslovak army, and are improving the situation.

The fact that the rioting in Prague a fortnight ago coincided with the offensive of the Soviet army leaves little doubt that the disorders here were due to the Bolsheviki. Martial law has been proclaimed to prevent further troubles threatened by the elections for seats in Parliament to be held on Sunday. Eight parties have candidates in the field.

Among the reforms agitated in the campaign is one favoring the sending of a delegation to Rome to ask that the rites of the Catholic Church in Czechoslovakia be performed in the Czech language, instead of Latin, and that priests be permitted to marry.

PARIS, June 15.—The reply of Bela Kun, the Foreign Minister of the Hungarian Soviet Government, to the message of Premier Clemenceau, as President of the Peace Conference, demanding that Hungarian forces cease their advance against the Czechoslovaks, was, according to a Budapest dispatch by the way of Basle, transmitted through the Hungarian Minister at Vienna. The message is quoted as follows:

"The Government of the Hungarian Republic of Soviets learns with joy of the intention of the allied and associated powers to invite Hungary to the Peace Conference. The Hungarian Government has not the slightest hostile intention against any people on earth. It desires to live in friendship and peace with all. Inasmuch as it does not take its stand on territorial integrity, it had no intention to attack the Czechoslovak Republic and has not attacked it. The Hungarian Government has always strictly adhered to the line of demarkation fixed by the Allies and has observed the clauses of the military convention framed on Nov. 13, 1918.

VIENNA, June 12.—The newly appointed Hungarian Minister to Vienna, Czobel, today declared the Soviet Government at Budapest considers the Entente note as involving virtual recognition of the Soviet republic, and that the military successes of the army furnish proof of the vitality and solidity of that republic.

The last Foreign Minister of Austria-Hungary, Count Julius Andrassy, has left for Switzerland to confer with statesmen of the Entente and neutral powers concerning the question of the reconstruction of Hungary. Count Andrassy will point out the necessity of eliminating Bolshevist rule, as otherwise Hungary will ever remain the scene of disorder and upheavals.

RUMANIANS DEFEAT REDS.

Wipe Out Detachment That Succeeded in Crossing the Dniester.

BERNE, June 15.—Rumanian forces on the Dniester River have been attacked by the Bolsheviki, a detachment of the latter succeeding in crossing the river, but being virtually annihilated on the right bank.

Its losses are reported to be 200 killed and hundreds of wounded and prisoners, according to a statement issued here by the Rumanian Press Bureau.

COUNCIL OF FIVE HASN'T "RECOGNIZED" KOLCHAK

Has Merely Expressed Satisfaction With His Statement of His Russian Policy.

PARIS, June 13.—A portion of the French press, as well as a certain element of French politicians, is declaring today with some elation that the allied and associated powers have recognized the Kolchak Government in the usual diplomatic and political sense of the word "recognition." That is not true. The Council of Four repudiates this interpretation put on its note to the Russian leader. To say his Government has been recognized is letting the wish be father to the thought.

The Big Five have simply agreed to continue to supply Kolchak with munitions, hoping thereby to aid him to bring Russia into such a condition that it will be able to establish a Government worthy of recognition later on. In other words, the Council agrees now to continue to do exactly what it has been doing for some time. It had intimated that it would discontinue even that aid until it had assurance from Kolchak that he would comply with certain conditions with reference to a Constituent Assembly, the rights of Jews, and frontiers. He sent such assurances. The Council expressed its satisfaction with them, whereupon this expression was twisted into the "recognition."

FRENCH TARS ORDERLY NOW

Crews Mutinous in Black Sea Sober Down in Home Port.

PARIS, June 15, (Havas.)—Admiral Ronarch today reported to the Minister of Marine that the discord among the sailors brought to Toulon from the Black Sea, where they participated in a "Red" demonstration, had entirely disappeared.

OUR AID TO FRANCE KEPT HER IN THE WAR

Soldiers Heartened for Years of Struggle by America's Civilian Efforts, Says Folks.

SERBIA A LAND OF HORROR

Man Power All But Gone, and Not a Child Living Under Three Years of Age.

Lieut. Col. Homer Folks, Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association, who returned a week ago from Europe, spoke yesterday morning from the pulpit of the Baptist Church of the Redeemer in Yonkers. Mr. Folks was head of the Civilian Relief Committee of the American Red Cross and also of the Reconstruction Commission of the organization, which visited the devastated areas.

The speaker told of his experiences during his work in France, and said that the Red Cross took care of three million refugees. These refugees, he said, because of the love of home, were drawn back to the devastated regions of France and are living now in cellars and among piles of ruins. He declared that if all the workmen who were engaged in the building industry before the war were brought back to this reconstruction work it would take them fifteen years to rebuild, providing, of course, that they could get enough material, and he doubted whether there was enough building supplies in the world at this time.

Mr. Folks said the civilian relief work in France strengthened the morale of the French and gave them courage to stay in the fight. For three years, he said, they fought on with no end of the war in sight and no assurance that when it did end it would be in their favor. They were rapidly coming to the conclusion, he declared, that the consequences of surrender could be no worse than continuance of the struggle. He added the belief that the people of France would always feel grateful toward Americans, no matter what the international relations might be in the future.

The speaker touched upon his visit to Italy, where, he said, conditions were very bad. He said the nation had always run close to the hunger line, and when the war broke out things became serious in a short time. The death rate mounted while the birth rate fell, and Italy today has far fewer people than before the war.

Regarding his trip to Greece, Mr. Folks said the 200,000 Greeks who had been deported by the Bulgarians were now going back to a land of desolation.

He then spoke of Serbia, which country, he declared, suffered greater hardships than any of the other nations. The country is practically wiped out, and there is hardly a child under 3 years of age in the whole land. Serbia has lost almost its entire man power, the towns are devastated, highways are virtually impassable, and as to the food and clothing supply, bread is selling at ten times its former price, thread is $5 a spool, and shoes, which last a month at most, are $40 a pair.

Mr. Folks was made a Commander of the Order of the White Eagle in Serbia. His address yesterday was among his neighbors in the parish of the Baptist Church. He lives at 428 Hawthorne Avenue, Yonkers.

HAGUE A RENDEZVOUS OF BALKAN ENVOYS

All Are Eager to Tell the Story of the Wrongs of Their Nationals.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, June 13.—To obtain a good idea of the Balkan and Central European pot-au-feu which has been stirred up to the boiling point by the ideas of self-determination and ethnographical frontiers it is only necessary to take a trip around The Hague to a few of the best hotels. Here nests of delegates, emissaries, envoys plenipotentiary, and special press representatives may be found en masse eagerly waiting a chance to get in touch with any one with even the remotest American or Paris connections.

Each of these delegates is here to defend or dispute some small strip of territory, often no larger than Long Island, or some ancient tradition of a feud or racial hatred which to them spells life's raison d'être.

These emissaries arrive with elaborate ethnographical maps and armfuls of literature. With passion they will talk for hours of their wicked neighbors, "those barbarians," encroaching and enforcing their religion and customs on poor, oppressed peoples while Wilson and the Paris Conference appear unaffected by the tragedy and nonchalantly continue their work in Paris.

The Serbians consider the Hungarians and Bulgarians as Asiatics and barbarians, while the Hungarians hate the Czechoslovaks, Rumanians, and Serbs so that although most of these small States are economically interdependent the rational idea of forming a Danubian or Central European United States does not appeal to them and even an economic confederation is at present out of the question.

Each mission has special press agents who issue reports and attacks on the offending neighbor in hopes of publicity in the Dutch press. At present the Ukrainian mission is much agitated at the Polish advance on Ukrainia.

"The reason of the present offensive in the Ukraine is that the Poles wish to present the Entente with a fait accompli," said the Ukrainian Envoy Plenipotentiary Koulichere, talking with THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent. "They wish to have historic Poland from the Baltic to the Black Sea."

M. Koulichere asserts that General Haller's army is attacking the Ukrainians contrary to the agreement with the Allies, and that the Poles came to an agreement with the Bolsheviki giving them liberty of action as far as Broutch in exchange for the Bolsheviki's promise not to attack the Polish troops occupying Eastern Galicia, thus deceiving the Allies.

A Ukrainian just arrived at The Hague declares that there is at present a positive reign of terror, cruelties, violence, and pogroms in Ukranian Galicia, due to the Polish occupation, although four-fifths of the inhabitants are Ukrainians and Jews.

M. Koulichere stated that there were at present enough grain stores in Ukraine to feed the whole of Germany and Austria, but that the peasants refused to sell grain, as there was absolutely nothing purchasable with money. The peasants needed clothes, shoes, and manufactured articles, but of these the country was barren. He added that Americans could do a tremendous business in Ukraine, as there was a large market for manufactured goods and great need of factories.

"To establish order and avoid anarchy economic relations must be renewed," he said. "The situation is bad at present, as a Red Army is endeavoring to penetrate Hungary through Bessarabia and Rumania."

M. Koulichere said that the German garrisons left behind in Russia had sold their artillery to the Bolsheviki and that many German officers were serving in the Bolshevist army of Russia.

Whitlock Silent on Report of Transfer to Italy

BRUSSELS, June 14.—Brand Whitlock, American Minister to Belgium, declined today to talk on the rumor that he was to be transferred to Rome as successor to Thomas Nelson Page, American Ambassador there. Belgians would like to see the Brussels legation elevated to an embassy, and if Mr. Whitlock cannot occupy the place, would like to see Herbert Hoover the American Ambassador. This, however, is realized as being almost impossible, owing to Mr. Hoover's desire to retire to private life.

Among the names mentioned by those speculating on the successor to Mr. Whitlock are those of Hugh Gibson, now American Minister to Poland, and former United States Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois.

PROHIBITION PASSES PALE OF SENTIMENT

Counsel for Brewers Declares It Is Now a Cold Question for the Courts.

NO BALM IN WILSON'S WORD

Case Hinges Wholly on Word "Intoxicating" and What Constitutes an Intoxicant.

Tomorrow the United States Circuit Court will hear argument on the appeal of the Government from the decision of Federal Judge Mayer temporarily enjoining United States District Attorney Caffey and Acting Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue McElligott from interfering with the manufacture of beer containing not more than 2.75 per cent. of alcohol.

The argument for reversal of the lower court will be made by Mr. Caffey and William C. Fitts, assistant to the Attorney General. Elihu Root and William D. Guthrie will reply on behalf of the brewers.

While the battle against the war prohibition law, which becomes effective on July 1, is being waged in the name of the Jacob Hoffman Brewing Company, the complainant, it is really in the interest of all of the brewers in this jurisdiction, who are as vitally interested as the Hoffman company, and who have joined in the fight with all the power they have.

One of the counsel associated with Mr. Root and Mr. Guthrie was asked yesterday if the President's suggestion that beer and light wines might very reasonably be excluded from the prohibition law would have any effect on the situation. He replied that it had made the question very sensitive, and that the fight for 2.75 beer would have to be handled more tenderly than it would otherwise have been. In this respect, he said, the suggestion would not be helpful to the brewers in the legal sense, and would certainly not be helpful to the Government's desire to accept the interpretation of the Collector of Internal Revenue as to the meaning of the law.

Asked if he did not think that the President's reference to the subject would add to whatever moral strength the brewers had, he answered:

"The situation has reached a point where moral support is of no value. It is now a life and death struggle, and is within the cold realms of the courts. The subject will hereafter be considered from a purely legal viewpoint. If we can convince the courts that the law means what it says, that only intoxicating beverages are illegal, and can further convince them that 2.75 per cent. beer is not intoxicating, we will win; otherwise we will lose."

If the Government loses its appeal the case will be taken to the United States Supreme Court for a final decision. If the brewers lose, an early trial of the issues will be urged, and if they lose again the case will then go to the highest court. But counsel for the brewers have decided not to appeal to the United States Supreme Court until the fight has been carried to the end in the lower courts. The early hearing of the case by the Circuit Court is due to the urging of both sides of the controversy, and the court will be asked to give a decision not later than June 30.

Emory R. Buckner of counsel for the brewers said that his clients expected to win because all of the points made by the Government had been heard and disposed of by Judge A. N. Hand, in his opinion denying the application of the Government for the dismissal of the action, and by Judge Mayer, in his opinion granting the temporary injunction. The presentation of the facts to the Court of Appeals, he said, would follow the lines that have proved successful in the lower courts, and that an equally favorable opinion was expected by the brewers.

At any rate, it was pointed out, the brewing of 2.75 per cent. beer would go on without molestation on the part of Government officials until the court of last resort had passed upon the meaning of the law and decided whether the word "intoxicating" in the law means anything or whether it was just placed there to differentiate lager beer from other beverages called beer.

IGNORES PROHIBITION BAN.

Bayside Man, Sure Town Will Not Go Dry After July 1, Opens Cafe.

There is a man in Bayside, L. I., who is confident that the town is not going dry after July 1. He has a strong premonition that something is going to happen to make it possible to stand on a brass rail after that day. His name is George Graul. Graul is a business man. He used to run a tavern on the corner of Jackson and Junction Avenues, Corona, and he has an eye for business.

Graul would not start in any new venture in the liquor line at this time if he thought that its sale would not be legally permitted after July 1. On Saturday he opened a café on the corner of Crockeron and Bell Avenues, Bayside.

DENIES BOMB WARNING.

Flynn Declares He Did Not Predict Further Outrages.

William J. Flynn, Chief of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice, denied here tonight he had issued a warning to various cities that more bomb outrages might be expected, as stated last night by the police of Paterson, N. J. In ordering special guards to protect public buildings and homes of prominent citizens Paterson police officials said they understood "similar warnings" had been sent throughout the country from Flynn's headquarters.

One of Chief Flynn's assistants said that there was nothing new to be given out regarding the investigation now under way to identify and arrest the persons responsible for the attempted assassination of Attorney General Palmer and other prominent citizens.

FINDS SENTIMENT FOR WINE AND BEER

Roosevelt, Gompers, and Cardinal Gibbons Quoted Against Wartime Prohibition.

RESOLUTION FOR CONGRESS

President Wilson Declared to Have Full Power to Modify Regulation.

NATIONAL DANGER SEEN

Workingmen Expected to Seriously Resent Interference with Liberty.

A report of an investigation into the sentiment of the country concerning the prohibition of light wines and beer along with whisky and other high-percentage alcoholic beverages, was made public last night by C. H. Duell, Jr. In his report Mr. Duell points out that among others who stood in favor of allowing the manufacture of light wines and beer were the late Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, Cardinal Gibbons, and Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor.

In the course of his report, Mr. Duell has given out the text of a resolution which will be offered in Congress today, calling on President Wilson to exercise the powers granted him under the Food Control Act of Aug. 10, 1917, to authorize the manufacture and production of light wines and beer after July 1. The resolution reads in part:

> Whereas, In passing the Wartime Prohibition act, which the President recommends now be repealed, Congress expressly thereby provided that nothing therein should be construed to interfere with the power conferred upon the President by Section 15 of the Food Control act, approved Aug. 10, 1917, to prohibit or to permit the production of malt and vinous liquors, which power the President has heretofore exercised by his various proclamations.
> Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that it is hereby expressly declared that the last provisions in Section 1 of the act approved Nov. 21, 1918, as follows: "Provided, however, nothing in this act shall be construed to interfere with the power conferred upon the President by Section 15 of the Food Control act, approved Aug. 10, 1917," authorizes and empowers the President to make effective the provision of Section 15 of the act of Aug. 10, 1917, and thereby to permit the manufacture and production of light wines and beer.

Commenting on this resolution, Mr. Duell in his report says:

"What the President did in his recent message to Congress recommending light wines and beer was in substance to put the responsibility of modifying wartime prohibition up to a Republican Congress. The answer that the Republican Congress can make to this is to simply say to the President, as indicated by the above resolution, that under the Food Control act you have constantly exercised the power "to do and undo" and to make any changes from time to time under the Food Control act that you saw fit by proclamation, and you still have the same power under the Wartime Prohibition act, which states in substance that the power conferred upon you by the Food Control act of Aug. 10, 1917, shall not be interfered with in the present act concerning wartime prohibition."

Of the country's deep-rooted opposition to the prohibition of the light percentage alcoholic drinks, Mr. Duell says in part:

"Initially I have found among labor interests a constantly increasing discontent over the possibility of the workingman being denied his glass of beer—the beer that helps to wash down the dried-out lunch in the noonday hour. The workingman is accustomed to his beer, and not only has it been his custom for years but his tradition for centuries. If, when July 1 comes, it is taken away from him grave labor unrest will confront the country, becoming more pronounced as the heat of Summer increases.

"There is also another side to this question of labor and beer which will cause great discontent—which, in fact, is leading squarely in the direction of Bolshevism—it is the denial to the plain, average citizen and workingman what is not denied to the man who is rich or even of moderate wealth. The latter for some months past, and even now, are putting by large stores of various liquors, in many instances sufficient to last a lifetime. Whatever the outcome is to be, all of us, both rich and poor, should share and share alike in the results of any prohibition legislation. That's only fair play and a square deal.

"Here are some leading opinions obtained from many men and women of great prominence in the country who, while standing against whisky and the saloon, favor light wines and beer.

"Cardinal Gibbons, with whom I recently had a long talk, writes me as follows:

> "To present to the people of the country the issue of the use of light wines and beers, also the abolishing of the saloon of the old type," meets with my hearty approval. For more than fifty years I have preached temperance, being convinced that the practice of the virtue of temperance has regard to the free will and God-given liberty of man, and at the same time makes for merit and reward. I am persuaded that the denial of light wines and beer will be hurtful, if not disastrous, to the cause of temperance, and bring contempt upon the prohibition law. I know the good qualities of the American people, which none esteem more highly than myself. I recognize the worth of that large labor element, the very backbone of our country, and at all times willing to join hands in every fair and honest movement. If, therefore, the law of prohibition can be so interpreted as to permit the use of light wines and beer, I feel sure, it will be an efficient measure for temperance, and meet with the approval of the majority of our citizens. Faithfully yours,
> J. CARD. GIBBONS.

"Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, states:

> It is my belief that the inauguration of a citizens' movement, nation wide, "to present the issue of modified or limited prohibition to the people of the country, specifically for light wines and beer, and opposed to whisky and liquors containing an obviously high alcoholic percentage—also abolishing the old type of saloon, its family entrance and barroom rail," is excellent and should be undertaken.

"Here is the opinion held by the late Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, as obtained by his sister, Mrs. Douglas Robinson, shortly before his death:

> I remember my brother, Theodore Roosevelt, saying that he found it very difficult to make up his mind positively on the subject, but that he was inclined to feel that it would be wiser at present to allow the sale of light wines and beer.

"Now in regard to a possible plan of action in connection with the present wartime prohibition, effective July 1, which might lead to its modification at the present time to the extent of light wines and beer—I believe this can be accomplished readily by Congress now in session exactly in accord with President Wilson's expressed views on the subject, for the President has indicated in no uncertain terms that he would like to see wartime prohibition modified to the extent of light wines and beer."

SHOCKER AVENGES EXILE BY YANKEES

Pitcher Sent by Huggins to the Browns Gives His Old Mates a Thrashing.

SCORE OF DISASTER, 1 TO 0

Burke's Fighting Team from St. Louis Backs Twirler Well—Yanks Lose League Lead.

Once upon a time, the Yanks didn't think Urban Shocker was good enough to play on their ball team, so the pitcher was exiled to St. Louis and they supposed that would be the last heard of him. Shocker made the Yanks sorry they ever let him go up at the Polo Grounds yesterday. He stopped the local athletes short with five hits and the Browns took the game, 1 to 0.

The result of the sad affair was to retire the Yankees from their glorious post as drum-majors of the American League parade. The White Sox, which idled away the Sabbath, regained the lead by the defeat of Mr. Huggins's young men.

Shocker had a moist ball bobbing slyly around the Yankee bats, and the few times the Huggins batsmen threatened, Shocker was always able to tighten up and turn back the impending danger. The Yanks had a fine chance to at least tie up the score in the eighth. After two were out, Frank Baker bounded a two-bagger off the right field wall, the first man-sized hit which had been made off Shocker. Duffy Lewis laid a slow bouncer on the lawn in front of third and easily turned it into a hit, sending Baker to third.

It was up to Wallie Pipp, but that was rather unfortunate because Pipp is the one member of Huggins's club who has not been able to get into his batting stride. He has been unable to get his bat swinging as he has done in other seasons. What the hoodoo is Pipp cannot understand. He can poke them anywhere in the lot, but he cannot hit them safe. So instead of planking forth a long hit, as he has often done in the past, Pipp was an easy out at first and the Yanks' chances died with him.

Burke Puts Pep in Men.

The Browns don't appear to have much of a ball club on paper, but they have an eight-cylinder manager in Jimmy Burke. Jimmy used to be first assistant orator to Hughey Jennings on the Tigers and he has had a fine schooling in the line of oratory which encourages players to do their best. Burke has the Browns on their toes fighting all the time.

One of baseball's curiosities is Jimmy Austin, who plays third for the Browns. Jimmy played with the Yanks in the old hilltop days. All those who played with him in those ancient times have long since gone back to the farm, but Austin is out there as big as life playing ball every day. There was some surprise when Manager Burke took Austin down off the dusty shelf and put him back in the game this year. As Austin had a batting average of 1,000 yesterday, Burke is evidently one manager who knows what he is doing.

Austin had a double and a single and got two bases on balls in four times up. Any time during the afternoon that one looked out onto the diamond, there was Jimmy Austin on the bases. They couldn't keep him off. He didn't do any scoring, although he could have scored several runs with the least encouragement from his clubmates.

The Browns got their lonesome run in the second inning when Jack Quinn lost control for a moment and picked Ray Demmitt in the ribs with the ball. Ray staggered to first and Baby Doll Jacobson slammed a three-bagger to right centre and sent Demmitt home.

Squeeze That Failed.

After Smith had gone out at first and when Gerber was at the bat, Jacobson tried to squeeze his way home, but Quinn was wise to the wrinkle and Jacobson was out. Jacobson is so big that Hannah couldn't have missed touching him if he tried. Jacobson is another athlete who used to play in New York but like many others, he was peddled around the country before any one discovered that he was a good player.

Quinn was in constant trouble yesterday and there were times when only fine support kept runs away from the plate. Quinn, like Shocker, was using a saliva delivery. It made a slow, tedious game, for these kind of flingers take up a lot of time before they get the tricky delivery ready to shoot.

Umpire Brick Owens, who was doing observation duty on the bases yesterday, twisted his leg and was out of action for awhile. Brick broke the leg a few seasons ago, and whenever he makes a quick stop or start trouble follows. George Sisler, who was hit in the eye with the ball, is still out of the game. He will probably get back today.

Tomorrow will be Leviathan Day at the Polo Grounds, when the Yankees will entertain 1,500 officers and enlisted men from the ship which has carried so many soldiers across the seas.

TIGERS GOBBLE SENATORS.

Timely Hitting and Washington's Six Errors Make Score 8 to 5.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Opportune hitting at the expense of Ayres, together with Washington's errors, enabled Detroit to win today, 8 to 5. Only one of the Detroit runs was earned, Washington making a total of six errors.

ROBINS FINALLY WIN ONE.

Capture Game from Cardinals After Losing Ten Straight.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 15.—The Robins put over their first victory of the season in the West this afternoon when they defeated the Cardinals by a score of 3 to 2. Previous to today the Robins had lost ten straight games.

The game was won by a ninth inning rally which netted two runs and in which Manager Robbie's reserve strength was thrown into combat with success. Hy Myers, who was out of action with a lame leg, came up as a pinch hitter and singled to right, sending over two men.

Marvin Goodwin opposed Leon Cadore on the mound and both pitchers twirled great ball. Cadore gave way to a pinch hitter in the eighth, and Clarence Mitchell finished the game.

The Robins scored their first run in the opening round, when Olsen singled to centre and was forced by Johnston, who stole second and went to third on an infield out. Zack Wheat then hit to Lavan, whose throw to first was dropped by Miller, and Johnston scored on the error.

The Cards forged to the front in the second inning when they scored twice. Heathcote singled and stole second. Lavan tripled to left, scoring Heathcote, and Clemons singled to center, and Lavan crossed the plate.

Griffith started the Robins' half of the ninth with a single through short. Zack Wheat singled to right, sending Griffith to third. Koney and Magee were both retired. Hickman then batted for Schmandt, and was purposely passed, filling the bases. Myers batted for Otto Miller, and came through with a single that scored Griffith and Wheat. Hickman took third on the play, and Allen ran for Myers. The side was retired when the double steal failed, Hickman being caught at the plate.

The Cards threatened in their half of the round, but with Heathcote on third, as a result of his single, a sacrifice, and an infield out, Clemons ended the game with a roller to Magee.

CUDGEL OF KAUFF TERRIBLE TO CUBS

Giants' Centre Fielder Makes Five Hits, Including Important One in Tenth.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 15.—A crowd which numbered close to 25,000 and which shattered the attendance record at the present National League Park here, saw the Giants beat the Cubs in a ten-inning game today by a score of 5 to 4. Part of the great throng was banked around the field, making ground rules necessary. A double by Benny Kauff, who made five hits in as many times at bat, and a single by Heinie Zimmerman resulted in the run which gave the Giants the victory.

The Giants used three pitchers in the successful effort to hold the Cubs in check, Pol Perritt, Jean Dubuc, and Rube Benton working in the order named, while four Cub hurlers, Claude Hendrix, Speed Martin, Phil Douglas, and Grover Alexander were paraded for the edification of the home fans.

Perritt lasted less than one inning. Flack, the first man to face him, hit one into the crowd in right field for two bases. Pick flied to Burns, but Mann and Merkle walked and the bases were filled. At this juncture Perritt gave way to Dubuc. Paskert then hit one over Burns' head into the mass of spectators in left field and Flack and Mann scored. Deal struck out and Kilduff grounded to Chase.

The Giants got back one run in the second. Kauff led off with a double to left. Zimmerman drove a long fly to Paskert on which Kauff romped to third, and Chase followed with a sacrifice fly to Mann, Kauff crossing the plate.

In the fourth the New Yorkers tied the score. Doyle was retired on a foul to Deal, but Kauff singled to center. Zimmerman flied to Flack, after which Kauff stole second and Chase drew a pass. Hendrix fielded McCarty's slow roller in front of the plate and pegged the ball over Merkle's head, Kauff scoring.

Hendrix was driven from the hill in the following inning. Burns walked and Young hit to Kilduff, whose toss to Pick to force Burns was too late. Pick then tried to get Young at first, but his throw was wide, Burns reaching third and Young second on the error. Fletcher rapped a single to right, scoring Burns, and Doyle also singled to right, scoring Young.

Hendrix retired in favor of Martin, and Kauff greeted the newcomer by beating out a hit down the third base line, filling the bases. Martin then tightened up and checked the Giants. Zimmerman hit into a double play, Deal to Killefer to Merkle, which engulfed Fletcher and himself, and Chase was an easy out.

The Cubs scored in the seventh. Flack, first up, was hit by a pitched ball and Pick singled to centre, putting Flack on third. Mann drove a long sacrifice fly to Burns on which Flack scored.

An error by Doyle in the ninth aided the Cubs in scoring the run that knotted the count. With Benton on the mound for New York, Flack beat out a hit to Doyle, and Larry heaved wildly past first in a vain attempt to head him off, Flack reaching second. A sacrifice by Pick advanced Flack to third, and he dashed home on Mann's sacrifice fly to Young.

Fletcher and Doyle were turned back by Alexander in the tenth before Kauff stepped to the plate. Benny then crashed the pellet past Flack and into the crowd for two bases, and Zimmerman punched a single to left, on which Kauff raced home with the run that decided the game. Chase ended the inning by striking out, but in the Cubs' half of the same inning Benton mowed the enemy down hitless in regular order.

YALE CUB MATERIAL GOOD.

Coach of Freshman Nine Sees Future 'Varsity Strength.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 15.—Despite the fact that the Yale freshman nine lost its two chief games, those with the 1922 teams from Cambridge and Princeton, Colonel Beard feels that valuable players have been uncovered and developed, and that the season has been a success. By playing consistently good ball the 1922 team won the other six games on the schedule, and the defeats by Harvard and Princeton came after tight games. Fast fielding, excellent pitching, and close scores were the features of the games against Dean Academy and Andover.

After winning the first six games, the climax of the season came with the Princeton game. By playing an uphill game Princeton finally won in the eleventh, 5 to 4.

In the Harvard game the freshmen were shut out 3 to 0. Calhoun allowed but four hits, but errors lost the game.

Commenting on the team, Colonel Beard said:

"The object at the outset of the season in developing the freshman baseball team was twofold; first, as a farm for university players and, secondly, as a class team. We carried out these two objects to the best of our ability and it is believed that the university line-up next season will contain several names of the freshman line-up for this season.

"Lastly, Crane should be congratulated on the excellent way in which he handled the team and his sound judgment in everything that came up during the season. He made an excellent captain and with the handicap of being an outfielder playing at third base, he played a most excellent game in that difficult position.

"When it is considered that the team lost its two big games, it may be thought that the season was a failure, but before that decision is reached let us wait for a year or two to see whether any of the present freshmen will help the university put it over the same two colleges to which we lost."

Results on Flushing Links.

E. J. Kilduff, Maynard H. Spear, and W. J. Coleman survived the second round in the handicap match play for the Governors' Cup on the links of the Flushing Country Club yesterday, and together with either H. Kenworthy or Timothy W. Hoxie will meet in the semi-finals. The match between the two latter was postponed.

AQUILLA OUTSAILS OTHER FAST STARS

Leads Fleet Home in Class B Division on Manhasset Bay—Saturn Heads Class A.

Special to The New York Times.

PORT WASHINGTON, L. I., June 15.—Seventeen yachts of the Star class, grouped into two subclasses, A and B, sailed this afternoon in the second of the series of races for the championship in the respective divisions on Manhasset Bay. The yachts that the Racing Committee deemed to be the speedier were grouped in Class A and the others in Class B. Peculiarly enough, the last of the six starters in Class B made better time over the six-miles course than the winner of Class A.

When the yachts of Class A started at 3:05 o'clock the wind was fluky, and these yachts had made very little headway when the yachts of Class B started, ten minutes later. The wind from the southwest increased in vigor, however, until there was, for about an hour, a good breeze, and it was then that the Class B yachts made good time.

George W. Elder, Jr., won in Class A with his Saturn, E. V. Willis, who won the championship last year with the Altair, being second at the finish. Gordon Curry's Aquilla, which was the winner in Class B, covered the course in 9 minutes and 36 seconds faster time than the Saturn. Arthur Knapp, Jr., who finished in the rear in Class B, covered the course 2 minutes and 5 seconds faster than the Saturn, winner in Class A.

RAYMOND LEADS ON RANGE.

Finishes First in Trials at Le Mans for A. E. F. Pistol Team.

LE MANS, France, Saturday, June 14. (Associated Press.)—Captain D. R. Raymond, Quartermaster Corps, of Crawford, Neb., finished first in the elimination preliminaries completed today for the pistol team to represent the United States in the Inter-Allied small arms competition, which begins June 23. Lieut. Col. Snyder, the team captain, will announce the personnel of the team tomorrow.

Second place in the preliminary finals went to Master Engineer Michael Kelly, 7th Engineers, of New York City, with an aggregate score of twenty-nine less than the honor man. First Lieutenant Griffin, 322d Infantry, Edenton, N. C., finished third, seventeen points under Kelly.

The remainder of the first ten, in order of merit, follows:

Lieut. Col. P. W. Evans, Quartermaster Corps, Laredo, Tex.; Sergeant Melvin Duncan, Sixteenth Infantry, Smithville, Miss.; Second Lieutenant L. T. Harant, Fifth Machine-gun Battalion; First Lieutenant James F. Johnson, 65th Infantry, Florence, Ala.; Lieut. Col. E. B. Cary, Sixth Division, Clarion, Penn.; Sergeant Edward R. Clark, Fifth Marines, Morocco, Ind.; First Lieutenant J. R. Deverly, 353d Field Artillery of Texas.

PLANS FOR RIFLE EVENTS.

Meeting of English and American Officials Held at Caldwell.

CALDWELL, N. J., June 15.—Plans for the small-bore rifle contests that are to be held on the grounds of the Caldwell National Rifle Range in the third week in August were adopted here today by representatives of American and English teams. There were present Lieut. Col. William C. Hallee and Captain E. C. Crossman, who has charge of the small-bore rifle matches; Edward Newitt, representing the Miniature Rifle Clubs of Great Britain; Captain W. H. Richards of the Winchester Arms Company, and F. J. Kahrs of the Remington Arms Company.

During July, here and in England, the Miniature Rifle Clubs will try out the material in the six or seven hundred clubs, and from these will be selected teams of twenty men, who will be entered in a "cable match" for the international championship. On the same day the British team of twenty men shoot in England the American twenty will shoot at the Caldwell range. The various scores will be exchanged by cable as they are made.
are made by cable.

A special range for the miniature rifle contests is now being constructed on the large range here and the announcement was made today that the range is to be open to all civilian clubs for practice and that any American rifle clubs are privileged to enter the contests for the 22 calibre events.

NEW TROPHY AT HARVARD.

Wingate Memorial Cup for Best All-Around Baseball Player.

A silver loving cup has been presented to the Harvard Athletic Association in memory of D. J. P. Wingate, '14, by his wife, to be awarded to the best all-around player on the baseball team. Wingate, who captained the university nine in 1913 and 1914, died last year.

The gift will be known as the Wingate Memorial Cup, and will be kept in the Harvard trophy room. The name of the winner each year will be engraved on the cup.

LEO A TROTS TO VICTORY.

Takes Season's First Four-Heat Race on Harlem Speedway.

The first four-heat harness race of the season was contested yesterday on the Harlem Speedway in the 1:10 class for trotters and pacers, at the fourth Spring matinée of the Road Drivers' Association. The victor was Leo A, J. A. L. Barrington's bay gelding, which trotted past the judges' stand in front in the third and fourth heats. In the first heat Leo A finished second and in the following heat the Barrington gelding was placed fourth. Leo A's time in his winning heats was 1:15 and 1:12.

Nellie Durando, a brown mare pacer, owned and driven by R. Citro, made her first appearance on the speedway in this race and showed promise by taking the first heat by a length from Leo A, Barney, owned by L. Albano, and Squirrel Brook, A. Bruno's bay gelding, which finished in the order named. In the second heat Squirrel Brook and Nellie Durando had a close struggle practically all the way. After a driving finish Bruno just managed to get Squirrel Brook home in front of Citro's pacer by about half a length.

Leo A showed a recovery in the third heat and won by about five lengths from Squirrel Brook. The Barrington gelding was aided to this easy heat success through erratic performances by the remainder of the field. All but Barrington's gelding broke at some stage of the race. Failure to place first in three heats caused the officials to rule out Barney, leaving Leo A, Squirrel Brook, and Nellie Durando for the final dash. Barrington got his trotter off to a good start in the deciding heat and won, after leading over the half-mile stretch, by about two lengths from Squirrel Brook.

Barrington scored another victory in the 1:08 trotting class when he piloted Little Kate, a bay mare, to victory in split heats. A break by Newburn in the third heat gave Little Kate this brush just when it appeared a fourth heat would be necessary.

In the 1:06 class for trotters Gene Carpenter's champion of last Fall, Bessie Baron, trotted to her fourth straight victory of the season by beating Wood Olcott, owned by A. Issaeff and driven by John Manning, in straight heats.

Army Captain Wins Five-Mile Handicap at Walkers' Club Games.

Captain Fred Kieser of the Morningside A. C., discarded his army duties yesterday long enough to win the five-mile sealed handicap walk at the Walkers' Club of America games yesterday at Macombs Dam Park. Captain Kieser was found to have a handicap of 1 minute 30 seconds when the allotments were opened, and took first prize in 38:36 2-5. Eddie Renz, the New York A. C. pedestrian, former national distance walking champion, competed from scratch and finished fourth in 39:51 1-5.

In a sealed handicap three-mile walk for veterans, Hugh Brady of the Pastime A. C., proved the best of the "old boys." Brady admits to 50 years. He had a handicap of three minutes and won in 24:38 2-5 from a field of nine rivals. Brady's time was 41 3-5 seconds faster than the time of Dennis Dunn, a clubmate, who is 49 years old.

The summaries:

Three-Mile Walk; Novice.—Won by M. Fekete, Hungarian-American A. C.; I. Boskin, American Walkers' Association, second. Time—25:06.

Three-Mile Walk, for Veterans, (sealed handicap.)—Won by Hugh J. Brady, Pastime A. C., (3 minutes;) Dennis Dunn, Pastime A. C., (2 minutes 45 seconds,) second; Adolph Arnold, Pastime A. C., (3 minutes,) third. Time—24:38 4-5.

Five-Mile Walk, Sealed Handicap.—Won by Captain Fred Kieser, Morningside A. C., (1 minute 30 seconds;) Alexander Jessup, Morningside A. C., (3 minutes 15 seconds,) second; S. Hill, unattached, (3 minutes 45 seconds,) third; Edward Renz, New York A. C., (scratch,) fourth. Time—38:36 2-5.

BOTAFOGO A FAST HORSE.

Argentine $200,000 Champion Can Carry Weight and Go a Route.

The Argentine $200,000 champion, Botafogo, must be a horse of phenomenal speed. Under high weight he has won over the Buenos Aires Palermo mile in 1:37¼, and in his match with Grey Fox at one mile and seven-eighths Botafogo won by seventy yards in 3:07. This is ten and three-fifths seconds better than Orcagna's American record for the distance—an unusual one, and Orcagna carried only 96 pounds for the record made at Oakland, Cal., March 2, 1909. Botafogo's time works out at a slightly better rate than 3:20 for two miles, or 1:40 for each mile.

The world's records for two miles, which give a fuller comparison for speed purposes, are:

American—Everett, 3, 107, Pimlico (1910), 3:25 3-5.
Canadian—Azo, 3, 90, Windsor, Ont., (1909), 3:29 3-5.
English—Pradella, 7, 116, Ascot, (1906), 3:19 2-5.
Australian—Downfall, 5, 108, Riccarton, (1908), 3:23 2-5.

EIGHT FAST ROUNDS BOXED BY WILLARD

Takes Hardest Workout of His Training Thus Far—Dempsey Boxes Despite Injured Eye.

TOLEDO, Ohio, June 15.—Jess Willard is within three pounds of the weight he expects to make for his heavyweight championship contest with Jack Dempsey here July 4.

The champion hopped on the scales before his workout today and tipped the beam at exactly 248 pounds, which is a pound and one-half lighter than he was when he won the championship from Jack Johnson at Havana four years ago. He figures on entering the ring to box Dempsey weighing about 245 pounds.

The champion went through the most bruising workout he has attempted so far in his training. Between 2,000 and 2,500 persons paid 50 cents apiece to stand in the sun-baked arena, and the spectators smilingly sweltered while the giant Kansan exchanged punches with his sparring partner, tugged at the weights, wrestled, and heaved the medicine ball.

Willard boxed eight full three-minute rounds, stepping three with Jack Hempel, two with Jack Heinen, the Chicago heavyweight, and three with Walter Monahan. The champion wound up in fine trim, and expressed elation over the showing of Heinen, a new acquisition to the staff of sparring partners.

Heinen boxed savagely and earnestly with the champion, although he is about fifteen pounds over his fighting weight. Willard caught him with a righthand uppercut in the first round and Heinen's knees sagged. He clung to the champion until he overcame the effect of the punch.

After Willard finished his workout the crowd walked three-quarters of a mile to Dempsey's camp, where the challenger risked further injury to his eye by boxing three rounds with the Jamaica Kid, heavyweight, who opened the wound a week ago. Dempsey's sparring partner was careful not to shoot his punches too high and the challenger left the ring without further damage. Manager Kearns decided to have Dempsey box only because there were 1,896 persons crowded in the tent inclosure and he did not want to disappoint them.

The challenger probably will not box again until his injured eye is thoroughly healed. His trainers plan to allow him to take only short runs on the road and light exercises until June 20 or 21, when he will resume hard training and work continuously until a day or so before the Independence Day match.

VOSHELL DEFEATS THROCKMORTON, THREE SETS TO ONE, IN FINAL FOR DUAL TENNIS TITLE

TWO TENNIS TITLES TAKEN BY VOSHELL

Throckmorton Beaten in Four-Set Match for Metropolitan and Bronx Laurels.

RICHARDS AND BEHR WIN

Capture Combined Manhattan and Metropolitan Honors in Doubles in Five-Set Battle.

S. Howard Voshell of Brooklyn won permanent possession of the Bronx County Challenge Cup at the New York Tennis Club yesterday afternoon, and incidentally got a leg on the Metropolitan Trophy by defeating Harold A. Throckmorton, 6—0, 6—3, 4—6, 6—1, in the final round of the tournament, which simultaneously offered both these local titles for competition. The combined Manhattan and Metropolitan doubles were won by Vincent Richards and Allen Behr in a five-set victory over H. W. Forster and A. Von Bernuth, at 7—5, 4—6, 7—9, 6—3, 6—2.

The singles final was not quite so one-sided as the scores would seem to indicate. All but one of the games in the first set went to deuce, but Voshell always had the ability to drive the New Jersey champion into errors in the crucial rallies. He took no chances, playing always for the corners and the side lines, with a wholesome respect for Throckmorton's driving powers. The greatest disparity between the two players was in the matter of service. Throughout the match the left-handed delivery of Voshell remained an enigma to his young opponent, who generally had to be satisfied with the mere ability to return the fast spinning ball. On the other hand, the winner usually succeeded in poking Throckmorton's service across the net at sharp angles or straight down the lines, forcing him into the most sensational volleying to keep the ball in play.

Hard on Throckmorton's Muscles.

Throckmorton seemed to have trouble with his legs, his muscles quickly becoming cramped and tired, and to this his habit of landing hard on one foot when volleying probably contributed. Voshell ran him around the court relentlessly and often had him entirely beyond the lines as he finished a point at the net. The inability or unwillingness to lob made things much harder for the Jerseyman in this respect. His one bet was acquired with the aid of a streak of good hitting from his backhand so that for three successive games he was able to pass Voshell at will. But by varying his tactics the winner had no difficulty in taking the fourth set and with it the match.

The doubles final was an in-and-out affair, with flashes of brilliant play alternating with erratic, overcautious and often stupid work. The slowness of the court made it exceedingly difficult to kill the ball, and Richards was the only one of the four players constantly willing to take a chance by using all his strength in addition to trying for accurate placement.

Behr followed his usual system of popping the ball up at every opportunity, and the Columbia team generally proved accommodating in their returns, even when the lobs were painfully short.

Richards was full of errors in critical spots, but the constant aggressiveness of his play had its effect in the end. Both sides grew confused in their team work at times, and easy chances to score were missed without number. With such tactics the match dragged on to far more than the normal length. The losers generally looked like the better team, and might have won if more of their obvious opportunities had been accepted. There was much illegal serving, but with no foot fault judge at hand it was allowed to pass unnoticed. Frederick B. Alexander umpired the singles, and Frank Oliver the doubles, with many other prominent players watching the lines.

The summaries:

Metropolitan—Bronx County Championship.—Singles, final round—S. Howard Voshell defeated Harold A. Throckmorton, 6—0, 6—3, 4—6, 6—1.

Manhattan Doubles.—Final Round—Vincent Richards and Allen Behr defeated H. W. Forster and A. Von Bernuth, 7—5, 4—6, 7—9, 6—3, 6—2.

TILDEN PLAYS FINE TENNIS.

He and Miss Zinderstein Win Play-off of Met. Doubles Final.

Miss Marion Zinderstein of Boston and William T. Tilden of Philadelphia were the victors in the replayed final match of the Metropolitan mixed doubles at the West Side Tennis Club, Forest Hills, yesterday afternoon, defeating Miss Eleanor Goss and Walter Merrill Hall in straight sets, 6—3, 6—4. When interrupted by rain a week ago the score had stood at 4—2 in favor of Miss Zinderstein and Tilden in the deciding set, therefore yesterday's result was practically a vindication of informal history already made.

The superiority of the winning pair, however, was far more in evidence during the replay. Tilden was at the top of his form, fresh from his defeat of R. N. Williams in Boston on Saturday, and ran all over the court in his energy, poaching flagrantly but successfully on his partner's preserves, and constantly encouraging her by the sensational placement shots into which he turned the most difficult chances. Hall, on the other hand, was not quite up to his usual dependable game and had to leave much of the work of his side to Miss Goss.

Both girls, however, stood up splendidly in the face of the fast driving, and there was little to choose between them. Miss Zinderstein was the more accurate, with a good eye for the openings, while Miss Goss displayed her fast, well-controlled service to advantage, and drove and volleyed with scarcely a suggestion of feminine gentleness. Both winners and losers will appear in the National events beginning at Philadelphia today. The summary:

CROLEY AND ILER BEATEN.

Rosenbaum and Binzen Win Quaker Ridge Tennis Final.

Dr. William Rosenbaum and Elliott H. Binzen won the much-postponed Quaker Ridge doubles tournament at the New Rochelle Tennis Club yesterday afternoon, defeating Leon Croley and Alex Iler in the final round, 6—2, 8—6, 7—5. The losers had apparently a winning lead in both the second and third sets, the latter reaching 5—2 and set-point, but Rosenbaum and Binzen pulled out each time, driving hard to their opponents' backhand, and hitting very strongly and steadily overhead. Service was another important factor in the victory, Binzen forcing many an opening with his twisting delivery, while Rosenbaum generally secured a high, deep bound which permitted him to get close to the net for effective volleying and smashing.

For the losers Croley was the steadier, with Iler playing in the brilliant streaks characteristic of his game. The service of the latter was strong, but his volleying was too often of a purely defensive nature. Continued aggressiveness and hard hitting ultimately decided the issue, with the tennis always of the spectacular quality beloved of the gallery.

The summary:

Quaker Ridge Championship.—Doubles—Final Round—Dr. William Rosenbaum and Elliott H. Binzen defeated Leon Croley and Alex Iler, 6—2, 8—6, 7—5.

YALE'S TWO TENNIS TITLES.

Freshman Team Adds Its Clean Slate to 'Varsity's Record.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 15.—For the first time in recent years the Yale Freshman Tennis Team has gone through the season undefeated, and by virtue of decisive victories over Princeton and Harvard can claim the title for freshmen teams. Besides winning its two championship matches, the 1922 team defeated Hill, Taft, and the Columbia Freshmen in its three other contests. Captain Williams, who led the 1918 Hill School team, was the most consistent player and showed the best form of the squad. It was his steady point winning that was largely responsible for the team's string of victories.

The closest match of the season was played against the Princeton Freshmen at Forest Hills, New York. In this contest Captain Williams defeated Kalbenback, the high ranked Princeton player, with comparative ease. The former's cross court and overhead work were largely responsible for his success.

McCord, the second ranking 1922 player, decisively won from Shipway of Princeton. His service and forehand drives were important factors in his victory. In the doubles McCord and Williams played in finished style and won easily.

Moss, playing third on the Freshman team, won all his matches until he reached the Princeton contest. He was at his best in the Harvard and Columbia contests, in both of which he was an easy victor.

Benedict, who was ranked fourth, was also a consistent point winner for the 1922 team. He has a good forehand drive, but his principal weakness is in his service.

Marshall, McLoughlin, and Wheeler have all been valuable to the team, although they have not figured in every match. McLoughlin has shown the most improvement during the season of any of the players on the squad.

Coach Hinchcliffe, commenting on the team as a whole for The Yale News, said:

"The freshman team this year has been one of the best we have ever had. In my memory we have never had two championship teams before in one year. That the 1922 team went through the season undefeated was in no small measure due to the spirit shown by each individual. There is much promising material which may develop some stars for the university team in the next two years."

The season's record follows:

1922, 5; Hill, 1. 1922, 7; Taft, 0. 1922, 9; Harvard Freshmen, 0. 1922, 5; Princeton Freshmen, 4. 1922, 9; Columbia Freshmen, 0.

HANDICAPS DEFEAT SELLERS AND BAKER

Two Crack Runners Finish Fifth and Sixth in 1,000-Yard Race Won by Cunningham.

Liberal handicaps to a large field of middle-distance runners caused the downfall of both Jack Sellers of the New York A. C., national 600 yards champion, and Homer Baker of the Glencoe A. C., in the 1,000 yards handicap run at the Todd Shipyards Athletic Association track and field meet conducted yesterday on Todd Field, Erie Basin, Brooklyn.

Sellers and Baker started from scratch in this race, conceding allowances ranging up to sixty yards to more than fifteen rivals. Neither athlete was up to the task of overcoming the handicaps, and the result was that both went unplaced. Throughout the event, however, the two runners of national reputation furnished an attractive race in their efforts to overhaul the large field. Sellers was the first to cross the finish line, finishing in fifth position, a matter of inches ahead of his fellow scratch man.

Harold Cunningham, the diminutive Paulist A. C. runner, carried off first prize. Cunningham started with an allowance of fifty-five yards, and made the best of this concession. Before the race had progressed half a mile the little Paulist runner flashed out in front, flying as fast as his sturdy little legs would carry him, and he never relinquished the lead thereafter. He continued at a stiff pace and worked up an advantage of fifteen yards on Sam Herzig of the Brooklyn A. A. at the finish. Herzig started with the limit allowance of 60 yards. Eddie Rank, another Paulist A. C. runner, allowed the limit, finished third. Cunningham's winning time was 2:16 4-5.

Sellers and Baker were not the only athletes of national reputation to falter in overcoming handicaps. Loren Murchison, the St. Louis A. A. speed flash, holder of national indoor sprinting titles, was the honor man in the 300-yards handicap run, but failed to get into the final heat. This race resulted in a comparatively easy victory for Edward Berquist of the Bronx Church House. He started off the 11-yard mark and led throughout, breaking the worsted with an advantage of about 4 yards on Thomas Murphy of the Millrose A. A., who had a similar handicap.

Another victory was registered for the Paulist A. C. in the one mile handicap relay race. The West Sixtieth Street club quartet drew an allowance of 63 yards for this event and won by about 10 yards from the New York A. C. team, on which Sellers ran anchor. The Glencoe A. C. quartet, with Baker running the closing leg, finished third.

A number of events closed to employes of the shipyards furnished interesting competition for the spectators. Edward Farrell, a former Knight of St. Antony athlete, who competed for the Robins Dry Dock, was the star in this branch of the program. He gathered in two victories and one second place, and aided his team to victory in the inter-department relay race.

The summaries:

75-Yard Dash, (Closed.)—Won by Edward Farrell, Robins D. D.; J. M. Robertson, Robins D. D., second; A. F. Seaver, Robins D. D., third. Time—0:08 4-5.

300-Yard Run, Handicap, (Open.)—Won by Eddie Berquist, Bronx Church House, (11 yards;) Tom Dempsey, Millrose A. A., (11 yards,) second; I. W. Bergen, Millrose A. A., (11 yards,) third. Time—0:33 3-5.

220-Yard Run, (Closed.)—Won by Edward Farrell, Robins D. D.; Edward Shaw, Robins D. D., second; Walter Stokes, Quintard Iron Works, third. Time—0:26 2-5.

Inter-Department Half-Mile Relay Race.—Won by Office Twin, Fritz McGowan, Shaw, Burns, and Farrell; Boilershakers, with Link, Carroll, Rhode, and Homer Baker, second. Time—1:48 3-5.

1,000-Yard Run, Handicap, (Open.)—Won by Harold Cunningham, Paulist A. C., (55 yards;) Samuel Herzig, Brooklyn A. A., (60 yards,) second; Edward H. Rank, Paulist A. C., (60 yards,) third. Time—2:16 4-5.

One-Mile Relay Race, Handicap, (Open.)—Won by Paulist A. C., (63 yards,) with Griffin, O'Connor, Brundage, and Clowry; New York A. C., (81 yards,) with Georgi, Kuhn, Fuerick, and Sellers, second; Glencoe A. C., (63 yards,) with Fritz McGowan, Hosmer, and Baker, third. Time—3:32 4-5.

Tug of War, (Open.)—Tietjen and Lang D. D. beat Robins D. D. Blacksmiths by 1½ inches after five minutes' pull.

Inter-Yard Half-Mile Relay Race, (Scratch.)—Won by Brooklyn Navy Yard, with La Rose, White, Freak, and Weiner. Time—1:43 4-5.

Putting 12-Pound Shot, (Closed.)—Won by C. Gertisser, White Fuel, with 43 feet 6½ inches; W. Barry, Robins D. D., with 37 feet 6¾ inches, second; A. F. Seavers, Robins D. D., with 36 feet 7½ inches, third.

LARNER IS TRIPLE WINNER.

Captures Three Events in Macomb's A. C. Track and Field Meet.

Individual laurels in the Macomb's A. C. members' handicap track and field meet at Macomb's Dam Park yesterday were garnered by George Larner. He scored three victories in a program of five events, taking the 100-yard dash and 440-yard run, in both of which events he started from scratch, and the running broad jump, which was a scratch competition.

Terry Halpine scored a hard-earned victory in the one-mile run, in which he started from scratch. Halpine's time was 4:33.

The summaries:

100-Yard Dash, Handicap.—Won by George Larner, (scratch;) Henry Stutner, (5 feet,) second; B. J. McNamara, (8 feet,) third. Time—0:10 3-5.

440-Yard Run, Handicap.—Won by George Larner, (scratch;) W. Prock, (12 yards,) second; E. Whitty, (7 yards,) third. Time—0:57.

880-Yard Run, Handicap.—Won by F. Davey, (20 yards;) E. Whitty, (20 yards,) second; A. Windgrado, (20 yards,) third. Time—2:07.

One-Mile Run, Handicap.—Won by Terry Halpine, (scratch;) F. Davey, (25 yards,) second; W. Prock, (50 yards,) third. Time—4:33.

Running Broad Jump, (Scratch.)—Won by George Larner, with 17 feet 6 inches; T. Gorry, 17 feet 2 inches, second; H. Stutner, 17 feet, third.

SWEDISH-AMERICANS WIN.

Take First Place in Scandinavian-American A. L. Games.

Swedish-American A. C. athletes led their rivals yesterday in the annual Spring championship track and field meet of the Scandinavian-American Athletic League at Ulmer Park, scoring thirty-seven points. This was twenty tallies more than were registered by the representatives of the Finnish-American A. C., who finished second, while the Norwegian Turn and A. C. was third with nine markers.

In the program of nine events the Swedish-American A. C.—colors were carried to victory five times. W. Bjork, H. J. Stamberg, and I. Santeson were the leading individual performers for the successful team. Each of this trio scored a victory and subsequently annexed a point place in another event. Bjork won the 100-yard dash and finished second in the quarter-mile run. Stamberg took the 110-yard low hurdles race and gained third in the hop, step and jump. The latter event was won by Santeson, who also finished third in the high jump.

The Swedish American A. C.'s remaining victories were scored by A. Almlew in the quarter-mile run and W. Johnson in the one-mile run. The latter race brought out the keenest competition of the day. Johnson annexed the premier position after a hard race with Hans Schuster, a clubmate.

The deciding half of the championship meet will be held in the Fall.

The summaries:

100-Yard Dash.—Won by W. Bjork, Swedish-American A. C.; B. Sandquist, Swedish A. C., second; H. J. Stamberg, Swedish-American A. C., third. Time—0:11.

Running Hop, Step, and Jump.—Won by I. Santeson, Swedish A. C., with 41 feet 7¼ inches; V. Winsjansen, Norwegian-Turn A. C., with 41 feet 6¾ inches, second; H. J. Stamberg, Swedish-American A. C., with 41 feet 2½ inches, third.

Point Score—Swedish-American A. C., 37; Finnish-American A. C., 17; Norwegian-Turn A. C., 9; Swedish A. C., Bridgeport, 6; Aland A. C., 3.

VANDERBILT'S TCHAD WINS FRENCH DERBY

McKinley, Stable's Election, Runs Fourth—Lazard's Halbardier Is Second.

PARIS, June 15, (Associated Press.)—William K. Vanderbilt's Tchad today won the French Derby at the Longchamps course. Robert Lazard's Halbardier was second and E. K. Nayan's Master Good third. Mr. Vanderbilt's McKinley, which was coupled with Tchad and finished fourth, was the choice of the stable to win the race. The Vanderbilt pair was favorite in the betting.

An immense crowd, including a great number of American officers and soldiers, thronged the stands and inclosures. The betting began on the Derby before the first race of the day was started, and when the flag fell for the big event, the fourth on the card, lines of bettors were still in front of the mutual booths endeavoring to make wagers.

The race was run for the first time at the Longchamps course, the Chantilly track, where it is usually contested, being still under requisition by the army.

VERRI RIDES TO VICTORY.

Italian Cyclist Defeats Kramer and Madden at Newark.

NEWARK, N. J., June 15.—Francisco Verri won the Grand Prize of Newark, the one mile classic at the Velodrome here today from Eddie Madden and Frank Kramer. The Italian star had worlds of speed, and rode around his rivals in both heats, in the first he caught Madden and Kramer asleep, and Madden, who failed to chase him, was fined $50, and second place in the heat was awarded to Kramer.

Kramer and Verri were right on the job in the second heat, but this time Verri rode right around them, while Madden beat Kramer home. Frank was not in the best of condition owing to his recent falls and forfeited second place in the race to Madden rather than ride off the tie.

Alf Goullet won the ten-mile race, and Alf Grenda took the mile handicap. Goullet getting third place in this race. Harry Kaiser, the Bronx lad, won the two-mile invitation from Fred Hill of Boston, by five open lengths. ARMY BEGINS DRIVE FOR 50,000 RECRUITS

Big Inducements Offered Young Men Under New Conditions in Military Establishment.

CHANCE FOR THE AMBITIOUS

Applicant Can Choose Branch and Field of Service and May Learn a Trade.

The Army Recruiting Service is beginning this week an intensive campaign throughout the country to convince at least 50,000 young men that life in the army for a few years will offer them more opportunities and advantages than they would be able to find in civil life. One of the promises is that each recruit will be able to choose his field of foreign service, his own branch of the military service, and become proficient in some trade during his enlistment period.

Two central recruiting stations are to be maintained in Manhattan and one in Brooklyn, so that the army can carry its appeal to every young man who wishes to make the most of the next few years of his life. The stations in Manhattan are at 461 Eighth Avenue, near Thirty-third Street, and at 25 Third Avenue, near St. Mark's Place. In Brooklyn, the main station is at 142 Ashland Place. The station in Jersey City is at 112 Newark Avenue.

One of the efforts of recruiting officers all over the country is to shake the old idea that the regular army is a haven only for men who have been unsuccessful in other businesses and have enlisted that their course of food and clothing would be guaranteed. A statement by Captain Edmund F. Hackett of the Recruiting Service is that such men are not wanted for the army, and that a "fence will be built" to keep them out. Instead, the recruiting officers are to seek young and ambitious men who wish to see some part of the world and to become proficient in a trade, so that they can resume civil life with better training.

In pointing out that most of the men who enlist will have a chance to choose both their branch of the service and their field of foreign service, if they desire foreign service, the recruiting officers say that about 50,000 men are desired for service in France and on the Rhine. It is probable that a recruit who expressed the desire might be able to serve at least part, if not all, of his enlistment in the Canal Zone, the Hawaiian Islands, the Philippines, China, Alaska, or Siberia. He could also have service in army posts in the West or on the Mexican border, if he should so elect.

Vacancies in Every Branch.

Men are needed in virtually every branch of the service, and the list of the branches that need men immediately are listed. Those branches are Infantry, Cavalry, Field Artillery, Ordnance, Coast Artillery, Signal Corps, Medical Department, Veterinary Corps, Motor Transport Corps, Tank Corps, Air Service, Balloon Corps, Quartermaster Corps, Engineers, and the Construction Division. If a man finds that recruits are not needed for his chosen branch in the field of foreign service he prefers, he is not under obligation to enlist after he has questioned the recruiting officers. The officers say they want none but men who will be satisfied.

An effort is being made in the army to train men in the trades they intend to follow in civil life at the end of their service. A few of the trades in which men might be trained in the army are land surveying, automobile repairing, telephone repairing, road construction, wireless telegraphy, drafting, telegraphy, steamfitting, switchboard installation, motor mechanics, baking and cooking, carpentry, photography, electrical work, lithography, bricklaying, blacksmithing, masonry, acetylene and electric welding, airplane mechanics, and plumbing.

"A survey of Army opportunities revealed more than 600 well-paid trades and civilian occupations, each of which requires many skilled men to handle them properly," said the statement issued by Captain Hackett. "In the Air Service, Tank, Signal and Motor Transport Corps, in the Ordnance, Medical and Quartermaster Departments and in the Engineer Corps alone almost every trade in common employment in everyday life is represented.

"In the Air Service, for instance, forty-one trades are prominent at the moment by reason of their immediate needs; in the Coast Artillery, thirty-two trades; in the Engineers, twenty-eight; in the Construction Division, Quartermaster Department, twenty-six; in the Motor Transport Corps, twenty-three, and in the Ordnance, eleven. In the Tank Corps and the Purchase, Storage and Traffic Division there are as many more; in the Signal and Medical Corps there are scores of opportunities for vocational training, while in the Field Artillery, Infantry and Cavalry there are opportunities for specialization equally deserving of note.

New Spirit in the Army.

"As to the value of army training in those trades, it is revealing no great secret to say that honorably discharged soldiers skilled as mechanics and graduates of the Motor Transport Corps, Tank Corps or Air Service are in such demand by motor manufacturers alone that the demand far exceeds the supply."

Educational facilities developed by the Y. M. C. A. during the war have been taken over by the army and will be devoted to making every company and regiment a part of the "University in Khaki," as it is described by the recruiting officer. It is hoped that this offer to improve a man mentally, morally, and physically while he is serving in an important branch of the country's service will appeal to young men.

"The old appeals to the fighting spirit, to the spirit of adventure, to the lust for excitement, if not dead, form merely a by-product of the higher motive of education," continues the appeal of Captain Hackett. "Like the old-time recruiting sergeant who spat tobacco, and with feet on his desk viewed the trembling recruit with scarcely concealed aversion, it is submerged, apparently, never to rise high again while peace prevails. And like the latter's successor—a smart, alert, trimly-garbed overseas veteran, whose pleasant smile and manner would make even a department store floor-walker seem uncouth by comparison, so the new appeal is one of brightness and courtesy, of eagerness to explain, that is always to be found in the good salesman when he has something really good to sell.

"'Building a fence around the army' sounds mysterious, but really it isn't. It is merely what every successful private concern in the country is doing today—building a reputation with the public, based upon public understanding of what it really has to sell, that for all time guards against what army men have labelled 'The popular misconception.'"

One of the exhibits prepared for the campaign is a chart showing the rate of pay in the army as compared to pay in civil life. It is estimated that most young men could save more in the army than they could in civil life at $3 or more a day. In addition to the base pay of $30 a month, the men receive their food, clothing, medical and dental attention and quarters. There is also a bonus, or extra pay, for foreign service, and higher pay with each higher rank. Each man also has the privilege of buying the cheapest insurance in the world. Even amusements are provided free in most posts and stations.

WHITE GETS LEGAL POST.

Delaney Names Counsel for Transit Construction Commission.

John H. Delaney, Transit Construction Commissioner, announced yesterday that he had appointed Louis C. White of 27 East Sixty-second Street counsel for the newly created Rapid Transit Construction Commission, which has taken over all rapid transit construction work from the former Public Service Commission.

For ten years Mr. White has been attached to the Law Department of the City Government, and during most of that time has been engaged in the acquisition of property for rapid transit and water supply purposes and in the trial of suits growing out of rapid transit construction contracts. He was born in Washington, D. C., and has practiced law in New York for fifteen years.

As attorney for the city, he has carried many of the suits, particularly those dealing with rapid transit, real estate, and water supply affairs, to the United States Supreme Court.

Mr. White, who is a Democrat, will take charge of the Legal Bureau of the Transit Construction Commission today, but will continue until July 1 in charge of the city's interests in pending transit litigation, under the direction of Corporation Counsel Burr.

FOREIGN TRADE GROWING.

More Than 350 American Ships Now Sail from Four Ports.

More than 350 American ships are now engaged in foreign trade, sailing from Atlantic and Gulf ports, according to a bulletin of the United States Shipping Board. Out of four Atlantic ports alone 1,172,704 deadweight tons of shipping, embracing 221 ships, are now employed transporting merchandise to and from foreign lands.

Six ships now regularly sail from Boston, New York, Wilmington, and Philadelphia to the west coast of South America, while in the transatlantic, Mediterranean, and South Europe trade thirteen vessels are now engaged. One hundred ships are plying from these four ports to the West Indies and Caribbean ports, with an aggregate tonnage of 319,592, according to the bulletin.

REPORT $180,000 LACKING

Campaign Throughout City Will Be Resumed This Morning—Archbishop Hayes Commends Work.

William H. Edwards, Chairman of the campaign committee that is trying to raise subscriptions for $1,000,000 and to enroll 325,000 adult associate members of the Boy Scouts of America in this city, announced last night that the efforts of the workers would be renewed this morning with such vigor that the goal would be reached before Wednesday night. The campaign was to have ended on Saturday night, but New York's failure to make up its quota caused Mr. Edwards and William G. McAdoo, Chairman of the General Citizens' Committee for the entire country, to give the workers one day of rest and then to extend the drive for four days.

By permission of the Police Commissioner, more than 5,000 Boy Scouts patrolled the city with the regular uniformed police yesterday, soliciting subscriptions from automobile parties and from pedestrians. Orders had been given to the patrolmen to assist the boys as much as possible without neglecting their regular duties, and some of them had as many as four or five Scouts at their heels all day. Unofficial reports reaching the campaign headquarters last night were that this work had added thousands of dollars and members to those obtained in last week's campaign.

Several offers of assistance in the drive were received by Chairman Edwards yesterday from prominent citizens. Among those who commended the purposes of the Boy Scout organization were Archbishop Hayes, Charles M. Schwab, President Butler of Columbia University, and T. Coleman du Pont. This is what the Archbishop said:

"I regard the Boy Scout organization as a most wholesome movement toward aiding the American boy to be reverent, obedient, honorable, helpful and self-reliant, provided the religious ideal be kept to the fore as an impelling motive for the practice of the natural virtues.

"In a world and in an age when reverence for authority and respect for law and order have more than suffered, this nation might wisely welcome and encourage an organization for American youth such as the Boy Scouts.

"While pastor of St. Steven's Church I had attached to the parish a Catholic troop of the Boy Scouts, and I am pleased to say that the results were very gratifying and promising."

Charles M. Schwab said:

"I cannot conceive of a more patriotic or timely appeal than that of the Boy Scouts.

"The world is going through some great changes just now. Much of the work that is being done now by the leading statesmen and educators of the world is for posterity. The eyes of the world for the last four years have been turned on America—they are turned on her now.

"The carrying out of the ideal plans for a better humanity will be in the hands of the boys of today—the men of tomorrow. The entire plan of the Boy Scouts makes for a better citizenship and a better humanity."

A. B. Leach, Chairman of the Manhattan Canvass Committee, said last night that the campaign would be continued in the industrial field partly by writing personal letters to citizens who had always supported every worthy movement in this city. He asserted that the campaign was still about $180,000 short of its goal. Meetings will be continued today in all parts of the city, and the traffic policemen are to help.

Conservative Investments for July Funds

We have issued a special letter explaining why experts are of the opinion that a large volume of securities should be absorbed within the July investment period. We also mention a number of conservative investments which, in our judgment, are to be purchased with entire confidence as to intrinsic security value, combined with every reasonable assurance of ultimate profit. Please ask for Special Letter No. 1237.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION.

Strain on Bank Credits Directs Attention to Demands Now in Sight.

The law of supply and demand has as much application to money and credit as to commodities, a fact which received a rather thorough demonstration in the financial district last week. A result of what amounted to a shortage of bank credit for stock market purposes appeared in a decline of 5 points in the average prices of stocks, a product chiefly of two days of rather severe recessions. Technically, a dearth of loanable funds which caused a rise of the demand loan rate to 12 per cent. was chargeable to a flow of cash from bank deposits into the Federal Treasury on account of income and excess profits tax payments, but there were factors surrounding the whole situation which had a more widespread application than this and carried the suggestion that they might be more lasting. Whether these factors were more sentimental than practical remains to be seen; at any rate, one need but to refer to influences coming from the fount of financial authority at Washington to gather the inference that they were, and probably will continue to be, effective in restraining the use of credit in lines which during the late period of hostilities were described as "less essential." It will be recalled that the publication of advance sheets of the Federal Reserve Board's June letter a fortnight ago aroused much interest among bankers, and a lesser degree of attention among speculators, because of the tacit warning contained therein against overspeculation. Following that by a week, the board asked the twelve banks to report in detail on the purposes behind various classes of loans made from them by member banks, secured by Government paper. This was no idle inquiry, and evidently found reflection in the local Federal Reserve Bank's statement on Saturday. The rediscounts of Government obligations reported that day showed only the moderate increase of $4,500,000, whereas it might have been expected, in view of the preparations which the banks had to make for the tax payment, to have been much greater. The inference to be drawn from the figure was that the banks did not desire to show a substantial expansion in their borrowings of the Government institution at a time when their loans were subject to especial scrutiny. The Reserve Board's previous review of the need for conservation in the face of vast requirements just ahead carried the broad supposition that recourse to the central reservoirs of credit for the purpose of relending in the stock market would not be liked. It is a matter of interesting speculation whether or not the New York Federal Reserve Bank's record of rediscounts the week before showed forth a little pressure upon the banks to reduce their borrowings based on Government paper. That week rediscounts of the sort declined $68,600,000, compared with a reduction of $5,700,000 in the preceding week and an increase of $12,000,000 a fortnight previous to that time. While rediscounts were being reduced $68,600,000 in case of those based on Government obligations, and about $56,000,000 in case of all classes at the New York bank two weeks ago, the decline at all the Reserve banks was in the neighborhood of $180,000,000. It may have been that the banks were thought to be availing themselves of the rediscount privilege somewhat too freely, particularly as the attention of the country was being concentrated at the time upon a headlong speculation in stocks. The Reserve Board has made its opinion clear about the inadvisability of checking credit use through an advance in the discount rate, and it has also gone on record as opposed to excessive speculation. All of which affords something for the stock market to think about, and supplies a signboard for consideration of graver things ahead than the hope of acquiring profits through a rise of security prices. The output of new securities by domestic corporations is increasing space, and there is reason to believe that demands of the sort on investment money will increase rapidly, especially with the railroads likely to come into the market later on. To reimburse the Railroad Administration for equipment purchases, a "car trust" to issue probably $280,000,000 of certificates is under consideration at this time. This is merely one large item of financing which must be put through shortly if the program of returning the roads to their owners at the end of the year is to be completed with satisfaction to all concerned.

The Federal Reserve Board estimates that $3,000,000,000 at least of new money must be supplied to maintain our export trade on its present basis. The credit will be necessary to enable Europe to buy materials and rejuvenate her industries in advance of receipt of reparation payments by the allied nations. Henry P. Davison reiterates the opinion of bankers who have studied at first hand the European situation that only united effort by American financial and industrial interests can bring Europe back to a productive basis. The tremendous nature of the undertaking may be partially visualized through the vast amount of money estimated as essential and also by means of the tentative plan for merging forces of supply and distribution on both sides of the water. But only in outline may the problems involved be scanned for the reason that, as yet, the program is only sketched in a general way. Mr. Davison proposes that debentures be issued against credits established for Europe, secured by all goods shipped under the credit arrangements, and these securities would be guaranteed by the individual countries concerned. In effect, he says, the debentures "would be against the whole of Europe." Billions of capital are involved and a form of investment which will be new to the American investor if Mr. Davison's suggestion carries. Both factors promise fresh experiences for this country and lend additional emphasis on the need for shaping credit facilities to the end that none be dissipated which will aid to reconstruct the European countries and at the same time promote industrial activity here.

The removal of restrictions on gold exports last week was immediately followed by arrangements to send out $20,000,000 or so of the metal. The exchanges of two South American countries, which had previously been against the United States, shifted to a position considerably nearer parity. The Spanish rate began at once to favor the dollar. It is expected that Japan will take a round amount of gold, correcting the trade balance through this medium. As the exchanges of nearly all the nations show the dollar at a premium, it is not clear how the outward flow can become really substantial, and bankers do not consider it advisable to have gold come this way, even though certain of the countries which owe us money should decide to remove their embargoes on exports of metal. It is a question in some quarters whether some sort of a gold allocation will result from the arrangements to finance the reconstruction of Europe. In fact, hints have come from London that such a process may be worked out under the supervision of America and England.

General business continued last week to move forward, and in the steel trade some sizeable orders for future delivery were placed. Had there been greater evidence of this expansion than was supplied by the automobile companies as buyers, the sign of improvement would have been more emphatic. The outlook for the motor car industry has been well presented from time to time. The production of ingots at present is estimated at about 80 per cent. of capacity, somewhat better than in May, but considerably below the output in March. While the betterment appears to be slow, it is significant that many observers of this leading industry believe that the "corner has been passed."

Westinghouse Air Brake

An old-established American corporation whose remarkable record deserves to be more widely known.

Our analysis outlines the consistent dividend record of the past twenty-five years, emphasizes the increasing diversification of products, the importance and scope of European business, and shows the strong financial position of the company as it emerges from a period of successful war business to pursue again normal lines of output.

We are prepared to execute orders in the stock of The Westinghouse Air Brake Company on either the Pittsburgh or New York Stock Exchange.

A British View of Oil

"A necessity, in all probability, to the security of national existence." Mr. Montague Summers so calls an independent supply of petroleum for Great Britain. The great British engineer thus emphasizes the world-wide need for oil in industry and transportation characteristic of today, a guaranty of the sound future attending development of the oil business.

MILLION SHARE DAYS RANGE IN LONG LINE

Not Since 1901 Has There Been Such Large and Long Continued Exchange Activity.

ONE BREAK SINCE APRIL 6

Table Gives Comparisons Between Two Seasons of Long Continued Speculation.

The decline in prices on the New York Stock Exchange which began on Thursday, when a bad break appeared, chiefly in the speculative favorites, which ranged from 2 to more than 8 points, was continued on a smaller scale in the half-holiday session on Saturday. Thursday's decline came as the result of a tightening of the call money rate on the big board, and, while there were reports that this was due to concerted action by the banks in an effort to check wide-spread speculation which has resulted in a sequence of million-share days in the stock market, the real reason became known after the close of Saturday's trading session. It was the deficit shown in reserve credits at the Federal Reserve Bank. This, it was asserted, was due in some measure to the payment of taxes, which absorbed a large amount of money, and it illustrated the actual cause for the advance of call money rates on Thursday.

Since April 6 there have been forty-seven million-share days on the New York Stock Exchange, but they have not been consecutive sessions. Between April 6 and April 17 there were eight five-hour trading days when sales amounted to more than 1,000,000 shares, but on April 17 only 989,530 shares changed hands. Excepting holidays and Saturdays, there have been thirty-nine consecutive million-share full trading days, which is within five days of the record of forty-four days in 1901, when, during that number of consecutive full trading sessions, more than 1,000,000 shares were sold each day.

While the actual sales in 1901 were greater in volume than during the present bull market, the fact is that had it not been for the break on April 17, the number of consecutive million-share days would have been greater. The following table gives a comparison of the 1919 days and sales with the 1901 days and sales:

London Times Says Britain Does Not Expect and Has Not Asked to be Relieved of Obligations.

PARIS, June 15, (Associated Press.)—Suggestions reported recently to have been made in America that the United States should not require the repayment of the war advances made to Europe run counter to the views of the financial specialists on the American Peace Mission.

The financial branch of the American Commission," said one of the specialists, "believes that any surrender of these advances would be bad for Europe, as it would encourage reliance on American taxpayers to pay the debts of Europe, whereas the regeneration of Europe depends largely upon the productive ability and self-reliance of its own people."

It is understood that the American financial experts, when they rejected the suggestion for the redistribution of the war debts of the various nations, told those who made the suggestion that if it involved any waiving of the obligations to repay the advances made by the United States it would be reported to the Secretary of the Treasury with a recommendation that any further advances be discontinued. The proposal thereupon was dropped.

It is stated in this connection that figures gathered on the relative taxation resulting from the war show that France and Italy increased their taxation about 6 per cent., Great Britain about 1,100 per cent., and the United States about 2,000 per cent. The American financial advisers therefore maintain that the repayment of the war advances is not only an obligation, but also naturally falls on those who have borne the smallest percentages of war taxation.

Vanderlip Surprises London.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, June 15.—Financial circles here have been much surprised at the statement made by Frank A. Vanderlip, ex-President of the National City Bank, before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, to the effect that there was a feeling in France and Great Britain that it would be wise and just for the United States to remit the loans she has made to the Allies. The Times this morning appended to a Washington dispatch recording the banker's statement an editorial note which said:

"We believe that no idea of any remission of loans, to be made to Great Britain by the United States, has ever been entertained in this country. Heavy as are our financial war burdens, it is not beyond our strength to bear them. We are grateful for the great financial aid and for the naval and military help given to us and to our allies by the United States, but we neither expect, nor have we asked, to be relieved of our full share of the obligations we incurred in order to insure the triumph of the common cause."

Inquiries made by THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent in financial circles confirm this view and bring the suggestion that Mr. Vanderlip was, perhaps, referring to a suggestion put forward some months ago that, considering all the Associated Powers had been fighting in a common cause and had all used their military and naval resources to the utmost with the single object of defeating the Central Powers, it would be only fair if they now pooled their financial burdens and agreed to distribute them among them all. That proposal, however, did not find favor in Paris, and in all the calculations that since have been made as to the undoubtedly difficult financial position of Great Britain, no hint has ever been thrown out that she might hope for relief by any mere remission of her obligations.

She is, as a result of the war, a creditor as well as a debtor nation. She has lent vast sums to her allies as well as her own Dominions, some of which she cannot hope to receive for many years, and there is a feeling here that it would ill become her, after her willingness to go to the financial aid of others, to look for help by the simple wiping out of obligations she deliberately and advisedly incurred.

INVESTORS

INVESTMENT bankers, underwriters and investors have relied particularly on past performances, together with a simple audit and appraisal, as a basis for estimating the value of an investment, which depends entirely on future operations as to its ability to meet obligations, interest, dividends, etc.

The usual president's letter predicting the future success and earning power of the company represents the opinion of his own organization, publicly expressed for the purpose of raising money and may not always be regarded as the result of disinterested scientific research.

We believe, as a condition precedent, that no security should be listed on the New York Stock Exchange or Curb without the issuing company filing with the proper officials of the Exchange a recognized engineer's complete technical analysis of the adequacy and efficiency of the plant, equipment and management.

In our judgment the securities of a technically reported company should command higher prices, sell more readily and remain permanently distributed.

VAST CORPORATION TO REBUILD WORLD

American Bankers Would Unite with Government in Great Plan of Rehabilitation.

SEE ITS NEED IN CRISIS

Speedy Aid to War-Torn Countries Recognized as Vital in Crushing Bolshevism.

FREE FROM WORLD POLITICS

Say Participation of Private Capital Would Relieve Complications of Strictly Official Action.

A proposal to form a gigantic corporation with Federal co-operation, and with resources second only to those of the Federal Government itself, for the purpose of supplying all Europe with the means of resuming industrial and agricultural work, is under consideration here by the unofficial committee of bankers who are seeking to reduce to practical form the recommendations of Henry P. Davison and Frank A. Vanderlip.

It was said yesterday that thus far discussion had concerned only the general features of a program to organize the financial and industrial power of the United States into a machine which can act quickly to give credit and materials for the general purpose of putting the idle millions in Europe to work full blast, so that they may rehabilitate their own countries, pay the debts they owe here, keep American mines and factories going to capacity, and fight Bolshevism everywhere with the antidote of employment.

Committee Discussing Details.

The problem has been discussed during the last ten days in a series of informal conferences. The personnel of this informal committee has not been announced. Henry P. Davison of J. P. Morgan & Co. and Charles H. Sabin of the Guaranty Trust Company are among those who have attended the conferences, and representatives of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., the National City Bank, and other big banking companies have been present. A similar committee in Chicago has been studying the problem.

"The committee has no definite plan yet," said Mr. Davison yesterday. "We have had several meetings, but are just feeling our way. When we have something definite to propose undoubtedly similar committees will be formed all over the country."

The fact that the formation of a great semi-official corporation was being considered was disclosed by a financier in close touch with the committee, who said that, while there were various opinions among bankers about the details of the plan, opinion was practically unanimous that it would be a mistake to have the task of restoring the productive capacity of Europe undertaken by any strictly Governmental agency, but that the burden should be taken up by the enterprise of the whole country with Governmental co-operation.

"We are practically agreed," this banker said, "that the condition is a great emergency, and that governmental machinery works too slowly to accomplish the results. In my opinion, the efficient and impartial distribution of credit and materials throughout Europe, where they are most needed, can best be accomplished by a combination of all private interests, with governmental aid and co-operation."

Mr. Davison's Outline.

Henry P. Davison, in his address to financiers in Chicago on Friday, impressed on them that the movement was essentially industrial, embracing the interests of the country and of the world, and not merely of a group of bankers. His outline of the plan of European credit machinery was as follows:

"My suggestion is that debentures might be issued against the credits established in Europe, secured by everything given against the shipment. Every country would guarantee the debentures against it. The debentures would really be against the whole of Europe.

"Then the banking interests could place these debentures with the public, distributed as widely as possible. Complete agreement should exist with the Administration and with the Treasury Department, which, we know, will do everything reasonable for American trade."

Would Include All Industries.

The first steps, which will be taken after a tentative plan has been worked out, will be to seek conferences with representatives of the Administration and members of Congress, and with leaders in all American industries, such as cotton, steel, metals, agricultural machinery, and foodstuffs, probably with the view of forming a series of corporations to co-operate with the semi-official parent corporation. The proposal of Mr. Davison is that each industry shall have an agency to direct the furnishing of materials to the different nations of Europe in proportion to their needs, as ascertained by the parent corporation or agencies which it creates.

It was said yesterday that the bankers in this city had been deeply impressed with the arguments of Mr. Vanderlip and Mr. Davison that Europe had to be considered as a whole, except as to the part of Russia under Bolshevist rule, and that credit and raw materials should be apportioned in accordance with the need for them, rather than strictly in proportion to the security to be offered. Both of these men in their talks since their return from Europe have asserted that the failure to provide for any part of Europe meant that it would be left a region of discontent, unemployment, and famine and a nursery for Bolshevism.

One international banker said he believed the plan to make private capital and enterprise predominant in the movement would insure impartiality and freedom from politics. Another argument, which impressed bankers in favor of keeping the colossal enterprise in private hands so far as possible, was Mr. Vanderlip's testimony before the Senate Committee.

Mr. Vanderlip said he had found restiveness in Europe because of the size of the debts owed by the Allies to the United States Government and a growing feeling that these debts should be canceled or modified through an assumption by the country of a greater share of the financial burden of the war. In view of this feeling abroad, it was said that there was a widespread sentiment among bankers that it would be inadvisable to continue the financing of Europe in the form of transactions between Governments.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The William R. Compton Company and the Bankers Trust Company are offering a new issue of $1,000,000 State of Oregon 4 per cent. highway bonds, dated June 1, 1919, and due serially and semi-annually, April and October, from 1924 to April, 1944. The issue is a legal investment for savings banks and Trustees in New York and other Eastern States and may be purchased at any maturity to yield 4.45 per cent.

Bankers who underwrote the issue of 120,000 shares of Invincible Oil Corporation stock state that the offering was heavily oversubscribed and that the stock will be introduced to trading on the curb market today.

Liggett & Drexel have issued a circular letter on Midvale Steel and Ordnance in which earnings are analyzed.

SECOND INSTALLMENT ON TAXES DUE TODAY

Officials Think It Will Approximate $1,100,000,000, Amount of First Payment.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—New millions in revenue will pour into the Government's coffers this week through payment of the second quarterly installment of income, corporation, and excess profits taxes, due tomorrow.

Officials were unable to estimate today what the total payments would be, but the amount is expected to approximate the $1,100,000,000 received on the first installment. Many persons paid their year's tax in full at that time, but they included few of those with really large assessments. Most of those whose taxes run into the thousands take advantage of the deferred payment plan to save interest. Revised returns from corporations which underestimated their taxes in the tentative returns will offset the amounts in full.

The tribute exacted by the Government for prosecution of the war will be returned in part in the payment of $36,000,000 to holders of First Liberty bonds. The semi-annual interest date coincides with the date set for payment of part of the largest tax levy ever made in this country.

Officials of the Treasury believe that the payment of taxes will not operate to make money rates higher, as the cash received will be paid out again almost immediately. About $1,000,000,000 in Treasury certificates becomes due June 17 and July 1, though a large portion of each issue has been redeemed already from payments on the Victory Liberty Loan, which exceeded expectations.

Ordinary disbursements of the Treasury now total about $20,000,000 a day, compared with nearly $50,000,000 at the same time a year ago.

LATIN AMERICA ASKS GOLD.

Applications for $75,000,000 Received by Reserve Board.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Applications for the export of about $75,000,000 in gold, mostly to Latin America, have been received by the Federal Reserve Board since the embargo was removed.

Very little of the metal has left the country yet, but the effect of the removal of shipping restrictions has been gratifying in restoring the exchange rate to a virtually normal basis, where previously it was against the United States. Dollar exchange in Argentina has risen from .99 almost to 1.036, which is par. American money in other South American countries likewise has improved.

BUY VICTORY NOTES.

Large Investments Shown by Federal Reserve Board's Statement.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Large investments in Victory Notes, partly in exchange for Treasury certificates, accompanied by like increases in war paper, also heavy gains and concentration of Government deposits are indicated in the Federal Reserve Board's statement of condition on June 6 of 769 member banks in leading cities.

For the first time the board has been able to secure practically complete segregation of Victory Notes from other United States securities, the total for all reporting banks in eleven districts being $438,600,000, over one-half of which apparently represents investments during the week under review. For the New York City banks the holdings of Victory Notes are given as $161,900,000. Certificates of indebtedness show a decline for the week of $225,300,000, and United States bonds, largely as the result of segregation of Victory Notes, an apparent decline of $206,800,000. The net change for the week in total United States security holdings is an increase of $7,400,000 for all reporting banks and a decrease of $16,100,000 for the New York City members. War paper on hand went up $225,900,000, nearly all of which represents the increase shown for the New York City banks. Of the total increase of $93,900,000 in other loans and investments, the share of the New York City banks is much smaller, viz.: $27,900,000.

Aggregate holdings of United States war securities and war paper increased from $3,787,200,000 to $4,019,800,000 and constitute 26.9 per cent. of the loans and investments of all reporting banks, as against 25.9 per cent. the week before. For the New York City banks an increase in this ratio from 28.3 to 30.6 per cent. is shown.

Following the allotment of Victory Notes and payment therefor by large subscribers, also the concentration of funds thus received, Government deposits show increases of $640,000,000 for all reporting banks and of $331,900,000 for the New York banks alone. Net demand deposits declined $69,200,000, of which $48,400,000 represents the decrease for the New York City banks. Time deposits show a nominal decline. Reserve balances with the Federal Reserve Banks show a gain of $17,800,000 and cash on hand an even larger gain, or $34,200,000.

FISH IN HARLEM STREET.

Boys Catch Perch That Come Out of a Hydrant.

An employe of the Department of Street Cleaning yesterday morning at an early hour turned the cock of the fire hydrant on West 125th Street, near Manhattan Street. Then four perch flowed out into the gutter, where the water already being several inches deep, they proceeded to make themselves perfectly at home, evidently none the worse for their experience.

A crowd gathered, and Patsy Baise, who lives in the neighborhood, got a peach basket, and, using it as a landing net, caught three of the fish. Then he and Tony Moliano made a dive after the fourth fish, with the honors going to Tony.

ADVERTISING IS AN INVESTMENT

Ready-Made or Made-to-Order Advertising

We have no foibles at Federal—
No cut and dried programs—
No rule of thumb routine—
No schemes—

But we do have
Knowledge of markets—
Resource of analysis—
Power of origination—
Skill in selling—combined with an advertising service so exacting in its principles, so broad in its application, that it is a great revelation to the advertiser who thinks he is satisfied and believes he knows all about advertising agencies.

Put it up to men who know your market.

To all Holders of Claims and Demands against
NEW YORK RAILWAYS COMPANY

NOTICE is hereby given that on the 10th day of April, 1919, the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York made an order in the equity suit pending in said Court, No. E 16-29 brought by the American Brake Shoe & Foundry Company, complainant, against the New York Railways Company, defendant, which order among other things provides, that

(1) All claims and demands against the said New York Railways Company shall be presented to Job E. Hedges, as Receiver of said New York Railways Company, at his office, No. 165 Broadway, Borough of Manhattan, City and State of New York, on or before the 16th day of June, 1919.

(2) If any persons having claims and demands against the said New York Railways Company shall fail to present such claims and demands on or before the said 16th day of June, 1919, as provided in said order, each of them so failing shall be barred from sharing in any distribution of the moneys or assets of said New York Railways Company which now or hereafter shall be in the hands of said Receiver and from sharing in any distribution of any of the proceeds arising from the sale of any of the properties of said New York Railways Company.

Nothing in said order requires contingent claims and claims secured by mortgage or other recorded lien to be presented to the Receiver, as above stated.

All holders of claims or demands against New York Railways Company are hereby notified to present their claims in accordance with said order.

Forms for proof of claims or demands may be obtained at the office of the Receiver.

Dated, New York, N. Y., April 10, 1919.
JOB E. HEDGES,
As Receiver of New York Railways Company, 165 Broadway, Borough of Manhattan, City and State of New York.

MARKET PREPARING FOR BUILDING DRIVE

Barge Captains' Strike No Longer Menace to Important Construction Work.

EXPORT CEMENT MERGER

Dealers Readjust Lime Prices to Ohio Base—Wire Cloth Companies to Combine.

Reconstruction progress in the building industries is passing out of the vale of insignificant interference and onto a plane of big business policies.

Notable among the evidences of strong hands in the molding processes are the fact that the brick barge captains' strike is no longer a menace to the progress of building construction beyond the temporary period required to organize a new plan of brick delivery to contractors, the completion of an organization of portland cement manufacturers, with an aggregate annual output of 14,000,000 barrels of cement a year, to cater to the fast-developing export business, the negotiation of the sale and merger of the country's biggest wirecloth manufacturers, action by the local building material dealers in readjusting lime prices to the Ohio base, a conference on the plumbers' earthenware situation to meet new wage contingencies scheduled for tomorrow, the sharp change for the better in steel outlook, and a general feeling in the market that the roughest part of the road to a moderate-sized building era has been passed, according to the Dow Service Daily Building Reports today.

William K. Hammond, Chairman of the committee on the brick barge strikes, said Saturday afternoon that an arrangement among dealers, contractors, and manufacturers had been practically worked out whereby the strike of the brick barge captains and laborers could be almost entirely discounted. The laborers had offered to come back at the old wage rates, he said, provided the captains received the increase in pay they had demanded. In the meantime he authorized the statement that the price of brick would not be raised in this market above the present $15 wholesale level as long as the strike lasted.

To this price, of course, must be added the cost of haulage, handling, and 10 per cent. He said that with the co-operation of contractors it would be possible to get brick delivered on the job. He said that the manufacturers were not reluctant to make the advance in wages that the captains demanded, but that compliance with the demands would result in labor wage readjustments throughout all branches of the brick industry, with the result that the price of brick to the consumer here would be so high as to bar it out of buildings altogether. Brick unloaders at the old rate made from $10 to $12 a day, and in Brooklyn $16 to $18.

Price changes downward are reported this week in Haverstraw hollow brick from $16 to $15 wholesale, with the usual additional charge for haulage, handling, &c. This change is made by distributers to help stabilize the market during the present crisis.

Slight declines in the price of hydrate finishing lime in cloth bring the delivered price in New York and the Bronx to $22.60 and $20.60 a ton in paper bags, with usual rebates for empty bags. Hydrate common lime prices effective this week put the price at $22.50 for material in cloth and $18.50 for material in paper bags. This change puts the Eastern market on a price plane with Ohio lists and makes for greater stability and convenience of builders doing interstate business.

Further indication of the future tightness of building material supply for domestic use is shown in the fact that ten portland cement manufacturers, having an aggregate productive capacity of 14,000,000 barrels a year, have organized the Cement Export Company under the incorporation laws of the State of Delaware, with the principal office in New York. All Eastern cement companies have been invited to join the organization.

The Directors are Emil Loeb, Coplay Cement Manufacturing Company; Frank H. Smith, Lawrence Cement Company; Joseph Brobston, Dexter Portland Cement Company; J. A. Horner, Nazareth Cement Company; L. G. Morton, Phoenix Cement Company; J. W. Fuller, Allentown Portland Cement Company; Charles F. Conn, Giant Portland Cement Company; Morris Kind, Hercules Cement Corporation, and F. W. Kelly, Helderburg Cement Company. The plan involves having in storage here at all times large quantities of cement with a cooperage plant to meet demands for American cement all over the world.

Despite labor difficulties of a more or less desultory nature the building situation is shaping itself for big things in most of the big building centres east of the Ohio. Reconstruction disturbances have been much less than financiers had expected they would be following the signing of the armistice and building money is unquestionably freer in tone today. The feeling is now fairly general that the season is rather too far advanced for anything like a normal building movement this year, regardless of the volume of money for building loans that is made available because most building material manufacturers have under-estimated, rather than over-estimated, the 1919 building season's requirements, and labor scarcity has further discounted those estimates as represented by volumes of finished materials ready for shipment to this market.

The demand for builders' hardware will undoubtedly exceed the supply, and prospective purchasers are being advised to cover their needs now. Export business in this department is becoming heavy. Wire cloth manufacturers of Worcester, Mass., and New York State are negotiating a merger. Another increase may be expected in plumbers' tubular goods, especially in brass flush and supply pipe. Portland cement prices probably will move up after September. Increased demand for lead has forced a $3 jump in one department, but buying is backward. The trade expects a prompt reaction. Sheet copper has been advanced to 25¾ cents, rolled copper to 23¾ cents, copper rods to 22¾ cents, wire to 20 cents, sheet brass to 19¾ cents, and copper tubing 30 cents. All the foregoing are manufacturers' prices to jobbers.

Potters' Association figures show no immediate prospect of price changes even though wage advances are made to employes in the plumbers' earthenware trade. Prices on all printed and inlaid linoleum have been withdrawn because the mills have more business than they can take care of. Concrete reinforcing bars are being rolled in volume to meet unusual construction requirements. Bars rerolled from stock are quoted at $2.25 base and from new billet stock $2.35 base. Another advance in base price of insulated wire has been made. Bare wire will be advanced at an early date.

SALESMEN.
HERE'S THE OPPORTUNITY
YOU'VE BEEN LOOKING FOR.
We have a permanent place in our organization for a few more clean-cut, live-wire salesmen who are accustomed to interviewing men of affairs, and who can prove from past performances that they are capable of earning at least $5,000 a year.
We are one of the largest office appliance corporations in the United States. Our products, which are fully protected by patents, are manufactured for us under contract by the Colt's Patent Fire Arms Company of Hartford, Conn. The Colt's contract for deliveries during 1919 and 1920 aggregates nearly $6,000,000 of merchandise. In order to finance this merchandise we are selling a limited amount of our Preferred Stock, accompanied by a substantial bonus of Common Stock.
If you are a REAL PRODUCER, and that is the only kind of a man we have room for in our organization, you can make more money for the next four months selling our stock on a commission basis than you ever made before, and after that, if your work has been satisfactory you can step into a permanent position as District Manager in our Merchandise Department, which will pay you from $10,000 to $30,000 annually the remainder of your active business life.
Stock selling experience helpful but unnecessary. We instruct you and give you cards of introduction to prospective investors.
If you think you can qualify; if you want to connect with one of the livest and fastest growing sales organizations in New York, call MONDAY ONLY, between 12 and 3:30 P. M., Federal Adding Machine Corporation, 251 Fourth Avenue, (corner 20th Street,) New York, and bring your credentials with you.

SALESMEN, ATTENTION!
I want young, aggressive, high-powered salesmen of character, who are ambitious and full of pep, to sell stock in good dividend-paying company; bank indorsements; attractive commissions; men with stock selling experience preferred, but not necessary; personal co-operation assured, but no advances. REORGANIZATION OF BAY STATE STREET RAILWAY COMPANY AND MASSACHUSETTS ELECTRIC COMPANIES PLAN AND AGREEMENT DATED MARCH 8, 1919, AS AMENDED.

TO CREDITORS OF BAY STATE STREET RAILWAY COMPANY WHO HAVE PRESENTED OR SHALL PRESENT THEIR CLAIMS IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE PROVISIONS OF THE DECREE OF MARCH 11, 1919:

Notice is hereby given that creditors of Bay State Street Railway Company who on the eleventh day of March, 1919, had presented, or who thereafter have presented or shall present, their claims in accordance with the provisions of Article Thirteenth of the decree entered on that date in the District Court of the United States for the District of Massachusetts in the Consolidated Cause, entitled The Archibald McNeil & Sons Company v. Bay State Street Railway Company, in Equity, No. 884, and who have claims subordinate in lien and inferior in equity to the Refunding First Mortgage dated July 1, 1904, from Boston & Northern Street Railway Company to Adams Trust Company (American Trust Company, successor), or to the Refunding First Mortgage dated July 1, 1904, from Old Colony Street Railway Company to Old Colony Trust Company, may, subject to such regulations and requirements not inconsistent with the provisions of said decree as the Reorganization Managers from time to time shall establish, participate in said plan and agreement by filing with Old Colony Trust Company, Boston, Mass., Depositary for that purpose, on or before April 18, 1919, or in case of creditors who shall hereafter present their claims as aforesaid, within seven days after such presentation, a written declaration of their desire to participate in said plan and agreement accompanied by such data, information and assignments of their claims as shall be required by the Reorganization Managers all in such form as shall be required by the Reorganization Managers, and upon the filing of such written declaration and other papers shall receive therefor certificates of deposit of said Depositary in form approved by the Reorganization Managers, upon the acceptance of which they shall be entitled to participate in and shall be bound by the provisions of such plan and agreement, subject, however, to the right of the Reorganization Managers in their discretion at any time, either before or after the acceptance of the assignment of any such claim or the issue of certificates of deposit in respect thereof, to require that such claim be judicially established or determined by arbitration as a condition precedent to participation or to further participation in said plan and agreement. No rights under such plan and agreement shall accrue in respect of any such claims unless so deposited. If any such claim is non-assignable, the holder thereof may, nevertheless, participate in said plan and agreement in the manner aforesaid, substituting for an assignment of the claim such other documents in respect thereof as the Reorganization Managers shall require.

For further information reference is made to said plan and agreement, particularly at pages 15 and 21. A copy of said plan and agreement will be sent upon application to the Old Colony Trust Company, Boston, Mass., Depositary.

THE WEATHER.

Pressure is low west of the Rocky Mountains with fair weather and high temperatures, excepting in the Pacific States. East of the mountains pressure is slightly above normal, as a rule, although with quite high temperatures and with numerous local thunderstorms in the Ohio and Upper Mississippi Valleys, the north upper Lake region, North and West New England, the Middle Atlantic States, and North Carolina. There were also rains in Southern Texas, with a heavy fall at Galveston.

There is a moderate disturbance about two hundred miles off the North Carolina Coast moving slowly northward, but as yet unattended by strong winds.

There will be showers Monday in the New England and Middle Atlantic States, North Carolina, and the North and West Upper Lake region, but, with these exceptions, moderately fair weather will prevail Monday and Tuesday east of the Mississippi River. It will be cooler Monday in Southern New England and warmer Tuesday in the North Upper Lake region. Elsewhere temperatures will change but little.

Winds for Monday and Tuesday: North Atlantic, moderate variable, becoming northeast, cloudy, probably showers and cooler.

Middle Atlantic, moderate shifting, probably becoming fresh over south portion, showers.

South Atlantic—Fresh north off North Carolina coast, moderate and shifting to southward, except east off South Florida coast; generally fair.

East Gulf—Gentle to moderate and shifting, partly cloudy to cloudy.

West Gulf—Moderate variable winds, showers Monday; fair Tues.

Moderate disturbance about 200 miles off North Carolina coast, apparently moving northward.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

BULK OF TASK FACES A. F. L. CONVENTION

Sessions May Be Extended to Complete Mass of Work That Has Accumulated.

WANT BURLESON OUSTED

Move to Free Ireland—Reconstruction Program Covers a Wide Range of Subjects.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 15.—The bulk of the work of the American Federation of Labor convention remains to be done this week. There has been some talk among the delegates today of the possibility of the convention remaining here for ten days instead of adjourning next Friday or Saturday. The date of adjournment will depend largely on the time consumed in the debates on the large number of controversial resolutions to be reported.

There are three resolutions calling for the federation to express its sympathy with the desires of the Irish people for independence from Great Britain, and it is expected that the arguments on the Irish question will be the occasion of much oratory. Heretofore the opponents of Irish claims to independence have always fought resolutions calling for the independence of Ireland by advancing the argument that the majority of the Irish people have apparently been willing to accept home rule. On this occasion, however, it will be set forth by the supporters of Irish independence that in the recent elections the people of Ireland have conclusively demonstrated their desire for complete independence of England, and their desire for self-determination.

The reconstruction program of the Executive Council deals with democracy in industry, unemployment, wages, hours of labor, women as wage earners, child labor, status of public employes, cooperation, the political policy of labor, Government ownership, waterways and water power, regulation of land ownership, Federal and State regulation of corporations, immigration, taxation, education, housing, and militarism. Many of these subjects have been referred to the Committee on Executive Committees for report and it is expected that reports on some of the topics will be made tomorrow.

The leaders in the convention express keen interest in the social welfare measures designed to protect women and children in industry. The reconstruction program says that women should receive the same pay as men for equal work performed. As for children, it is urged that effective legislation be put through to put an end to the exploitation of children under sixteen.

The leaders of the forces among the radicals are making plans for action in support of the resolutions they have introduced. These include amnesty for political prisoners, recognition of Soviet Russia, repeal of the Esplonage act, and a demand for a six-hour day. The name of Eugene V. Debs will be linked with the resolution on amnesty for political prisoners and undoubtedly this will serve as the focusing point in the debate.

The resolution calling for a six-hour day is likely to be displaced by the demand for the forty-four-hour week. A caucus will be held tomorrow night by the radicals to consolidate their ranks.

Wilfred Humphreys, who recently returned from Russia, where he had been for eleven months working for the Y. M. C. A., the Committee on Public Information, and the Red Cross, arrived here today. He will tell of his experiences in Russia at a public meeting to be arranged principally for the benefit of the delegates to the convention. Mr. Humphreys said today, that conditions in Soviet Russia had been exaggerated and that food conditions, except in a few places, were not bad. He said he was not a propagandist in the employ of the Soviet Government.

The indications now are that Samuel Gompers will be returned to the Presidency of the federation. Nothing short of an upheaval could unseat him and this is not looked for. However, nobody can forecast what may happen. There appear to be a larger number of radical delegates than have attended previous conventions. Their choice for President would probably be Andrew Furuseth of the International Seamen's Union or John Fitzpatrick of the Chicago Federation of Labor.

A committee including New York City Alderman B. C. Vladek and Morris Rothenberg have paid a visit to Mr. Gompers to urge him to give his support to the resolution introduced by the garment workers protesting against the pogroms in Poland. It was said that Mr. Gompers had promised his aid for the resolution.

The victory of the electrical workers for the right to bargain collectively has not served to diminish the desire of the delegates to ask, through a resolution, that President Wilson dismiss Postmaster General Burleson. On receipt of the news here Julia O'Connor of the telephone operators' organization, who had sent out word for a strike of the 9,000 operators on the Pacific Coast on Wednesday, cancelled the order. She has already begun to plan for the unionization of the entire telephone industry so far as the operators are concerned.

Machinery is being set up which would do away with strikes in the building trades. The building trades department of the federation has entered into an agreement with several large building trades employers' associations by means of which disputes regarding jurisdiction of union work will be referred to a mediation board, the men to remain at work pending the decisions of the board. Individuals or organizations on either side which refuse to abide by the decision will be suspended by their respective organizations. The new conciliation board will be known as the National Board of Jurisdictional Awards in the Building Industry, with headquarters in Washington.

BOAT CAPSIZES IN RIVER.

Occupants Carried to Safety by Strong Flood Tide.

John Mitchell and John McCormack of 1,341 Second Avenue were proceeding up the East River in a motorboat last night, when, off the foot of Jay Street, Brooklyn, the boat was capsized by a swell from a passing tug, with a barge in tow. They clung to the boat, and were carried across the river to the foot of East Eighth Street, Manhattan, by a strong flood tide.

The Captain and crew of the tug and barge apparently were unaware of the accident, and no attempt was made to rescue the men. Mitchell and McCormack left the boat in care of the watchman at the pier and were able to return to their homes.

Y. M. C. A. GETS $256,000.

First Payment from Butterfield Bequest After Four Years' Litigation.

Special to The New York Times.

CARMEL, June 15.—After four years of bitter legal fighting to get some of its bequest, as residuary legatee of the will of the late Mrs. Julia L. Butterfield of Cold Spring, the International Committee of the Y. M. C. A., it was announced today, has just received a check for $256,000.

The payment was made to Judge Mortimer Patterson of Nyack, counsel for the Y. M. C. A., who is himself a Surrogate, by Albert Francis Hagar, executor of the Butterfield estate, who was given until 12:01 this morning, by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, to make a payment. Hagar appealed from the order of Surrogate J. Bennett Southard, directing him to pay the Y. M. C. A. a little over $500,000. Judge Patterson, whom the organization retained after other lawyers had been balked by Mr. Hagar for four years, moved to dismiss this appeal. The higher court directed Hagar to pay by today one-half the amount the Surrogate's order called for or else his appeal would be thrown out of court. Hagar paid before the time limit expired.

POULTRY RIOTERS FINED.

Magistrate Says Bronx Butcher Shop Disturbances Must Stop.

Magistrate Bernard Dourass, in the Morrisania Court yesterday morning, imposed fines on four women who were found guilty of disorderly conduct in connection with disturbances at Bronx poultry butcher shops recently. The defendants were Mrs. Eva Walter of 636 Wales Avenue, and Mrs. Becky Perlinfruh of Tremont Avenue, fined $25; Mrs. Dora Rofkind of 637 Tinton Avenue, fined $25, and Mrs. Lottie Setterman of 632 Wales Avenue, fined $10.

The women were arrested Saturday night in front of 665 Wales Avenue, where, according to the police, at least a thousand women participated in a riot. Reserves were summoned to quell the disturbance, and policeman in civilian attire made numerous arrests. All of the other cases were adjourned for later hearings.

At the conclusion of the hearings the fines were paid and Magistrate Dourass spoke to Morris Gimet, a lawyer who has been defending all of the prisoners in the recent kosher butcher riots. The Magistrate said:

"This has got to stop, and the Board of Magistrates has held a conference and has determined to suppress these riots. Certain people come into this court and pay the fines of these women. That indicates, to my mind, that they are organized. Riot and insurrection will not be tolerated, and the police are going to be upheld."

Quakers Going to Aid Germans.

A small group of Quakers, who have asked to be permitted to go into Germany to distribute a $50,000 relief fund now being raised in this country, have received the authority to do so, according to cable advices from Mr. Hoover, just received at the offices of the American Relief Administration, 42 Broadway. The expedition, however, cannot go in until peace has been signed. Mr. Hoover has promised to assist the American Friends' Service Committee of Philadelphia in securing transportation and passports into Germany.

HOW ROBINS WOULD DOWN BOLSHEVISM

Tells Public Forum He Has Faith in America, But Evils Must Be Eradicated.

NO DANGER OF SOVIETS

Declares Any Effort to Overturn Government Would Be Met by Overwhelming Force.

Colonel Raymond Robins, head of the Red Cross Mission to Russia, speaking at the Public Forum of the Church of the Ascension last night, told an audience what the menace of the Soviet was to America. At the end of a three hours talk, during which not more than a dozen people left the densely packed church, the speaker pronounced his faith in American institutions, and asserted that they were the best in the world. The audience cheered him to the echo.

Those people who wished to overturn the Government by violence and force, Colonel Robins pointed out, would be met by enough force to quell them, and behind that force would be an overwhelming majority of the people of the United States, but the peril of Bolshevism, he said, would arise from the policy, of trying to meet the desire for a better human life with the rifle and the bayonet. The Russian revolution, he asserted, was a genuine thing, arising out of an imperialist State, a class Church, and economic misery, and that if America was to meet the menace of the Soviet, it would have to be done through a serving State, a serving Church, and a serving economic order, which would remove from the workingman's table the spectres of unemployment, disease, and a miserable old age.

The earlier part of Colonel Robins address was concerned with his dealings with the provisional Government of Kerensky, and the attempts which he and Colonel William B. Thompson had made to prevent Lenin and Trotsky from coming into power, and he then told of his dealings with these two men. "My dealings with them were such," he said, "and it is an extremely costly statement for me to make at this time, that I took their word when they offered to continue the war if the Allies would help, and what is more, I would take their word now."

In urging that America avoid the fate of Russia, Colonel Robins said that there was no need of slandering Lenine and Trotzky in the attempt to steer a different course. "The Russian people," he continued, "had been betrayed by their State, their Church, and their economic order, and they took the bit in their teeth. But I find it impossible to slander the revolution. The only answer to a desire for a better human life is a better human life and not suppression. America is still sound, and I know America at its worst, and that worst is evil. I know the twelve-hour day, the sweatshops, the anti-social lumber camps, and other left-over economic sorespots. If you want to know where Bolshevism breeds, look there. Some seek to answer it with bayonets, but that is an old, old failure.

"But that does not obviate the necessity for knowing the truth, no matter how disagreeable it is. I believe that an overwhelming majority will suffer, and fight, and die, if need be, for our Government. There is yet a sanction behind a serving State, a serving Church, and a serving economic order, but it may not last too long. England tonight trembles on the edge of an abyss. Lloyd George does not enforce the plain law against the Belfast Soviets and the Liverpool strikes because he knows his support is uncertain. And the reason for this is that a class Church, a class State, and a class industry have been doing in part what they did overwhelmingly in Russia, so that many people believe more in Karl Marx than they do in Jesus Christ. I regard it as a supreme cause for regret that that is so, but I refuse to blind myself to the facts.

"The cause of Clemenceau is as dead in France today as yesterday's 7,000 years for the same reason as in England. Italy is a Government masquerading over a volcano. America is standing in this supreme moment able yet to support her individualist, capitalist system, if you will, and a Christian conscience is yet valid in the lives of men. I believe that America is adequate, but only as a serving State. Force, bayonets will not do against ideas. Bismarck tried it. The Czar tried it, and the answer was Lenin and Trotsky. The blood of the martyrs has been the seed of the church from time immemorial. If our institutions are sound, they will survive; if they are not, they are already dead.

"A land that could spend nineteen billions for war can spend millions for peace. The only sure bulwark of the State is justice. We need the freedom of the press and freedom of speech. Let us get rid of our miserable sedition acts, which, whatever they were in war, are merely panicky cowardice in peace. Let us have faith in America and in America's institutions."

GIRL KILLED BY AUTO.

Companion Run Down and Injured in Brooklyn Street.

Returning from work in Manhattan, where they are employed as telephone operators, Daisy Forrest of 651 Fifty-fifth Street and Mary Keogh of 451 Seventy-fourth Street, Brooklyn, were turning into Sixty-first Street from Fifth Avenue, Brooklyn, just before midnight last night when an automobile also tried to make the turn. The car was operated by Otto Baunach, a photo-engraver, of 457 Sixty-second Street, and in it were his wife and two children.

Becoming confused, the girls stopped, then tried to make the crossing. The machine hit them and they were thrown to the curb. An ambulance was called from the Army Base Hospital at Fourth Avenue and Forty-sixth Street. Miss Forrest died a short time after entering the institution. She had sustained a fractured skull. The other girl was found to be only slightly injured.

Policeman Abraham Nelson of the Fourth Avenue Station arrested Baunach on a charge of homicide. Baunach declared that the accident was unavoidable.

Mrs. Blair Undergoes Operation.

Mrs. John Blair, who has been prominent for some time in the woman's suffrage movement, underwent an operation for appendicitis Thursday at the French Hospital, 450 West Thirty-fourth Street, performed by Dr. Percy R. Turnure of 55 West Forty-ninth Street. Mr. Turnure said last night that Mrs. Blair had rallied from the operation, and was getting along well. Mrs. Blair's home is at 138 East Seventy-eighth Street.

Applying Merchandising Principles to Real Estate

TWO men became retail merchants in a certain city at the same time. One sold clothing, let us assume, and the other sold meat. Both enterprises were blessed with initial success with the result that two bank accounts developed restive yearning for new worlds to conquer.

The clothier, blind to the opportunities in his own line, opened a garage and then a restaurant. For a time these prospered, but when competition became keen, the divided attention of their owner was not sufficient to keep them from disaster. The clothing venture nearly suffered the same fate and is hanging on from day to day living on the crumbs dropped by those who grasped the opportunities it overlooked.

The butcher put his money back in his meat market; he enlarged his store and advertised. As customers kept coming and his profits increased, he improved his equipment and his service. Today he has the most successful retail meat market in the city, a constantly growing business.

Which of these examples are you, as a property owner, following? Are you investing the rent from your holdings in enterprises much less lucrative? Are you neglecting to make any improvements which will increase the real estate value of your property and the income it brings you?

Electric service is the greatest improvement. It makes a dwelling more comfortable, reduces maintenance cost and improves the tone of the building. And it has the very tangible effect of making it easier to rent.

A postal-card or telephone request (Stuyvesant 4980) will bring our representative to you. He will tell you how inexpensively and easily your property can be electrified. And if the investment involves a greater immediate expenditure than is convenient, we may perhaps be able to arrange terms.

AMERICAN TROOPS BACK OVER BORDER; REBELS DISPERSED

INFANTRY IN SHARP BRUSH

Defeat Rebels in Night Attack—Washington Expects No Break with Carranza.

EL PASO, Texas, June 16.—All the American troops that participated in the punitive expedition against the Villa rebels in and near Juarez last night and today were billeted in barracks and camps on the American side tonight after twenty-four hours of campaigning.

Seven ragged Mexican prisoners were herded toward the Fort Bliss stockade by a detachment of the 5th Cavalry, while another cavalry detachment drove a herd of 100 captured Mexican ponies to the remount station.

It was officially stated tonight at Fort Bliss that approximately fifty Villa followers were killed. One American of the 7th Cavalry, Corporal Chigas, was shot through the lung by a Mexican rebel.

After crossing the Rio Grande during the night, the cavalry column, supported by a battalion of the 82d Artillery, advanced and at daybreak began a scouting tour. Capturing the seven prisoners before reaching the Villa camp, the cavalry was enabled to proceed, dismounted, to within a short distance of the adobe headquarters, when fighting was begun by the Americans, standing in water up to their knees.

Four Villa men were killed in the first assault. The rest of the rebel force, numbering approximately 200 men, mounted and fled toward the southwest, with the American cavalry troops in pursuit. The rebels scattered into small bands, the 5th Cavalry pursuing one band thirty-five miles.

Mounted Pistol Charge.

The Seventh Cavalry deployed to the southeast and pursued another band. Troops A and C executed a mounted pistol charge from the saddle and killed a number of the rebels.

The artillery placed shrapnel directly over the heads of the fleeing Villa force, and many were killed. After the pursuit the cavalry forces formed a junction and returned to the American side of the river, accompanied by the artillery and 7th Engineers.

The seven Mexican prisoners professed to be either farmers in the valley or Carranza soldiers, none admitting having been with Villa.

On the return the cavalry brigade and artillery crossed near Ysleta, Texas, twelve miles southeast of here.

After the rebels had been defeated by the American troops in a sharp engagement at the Juarez race track in the early morning, the Villistas took flight, American cavalrymen pursuing.

Reports from Running Fight.

Fragmentary reports of the fighting came in from time to time. A report was received at military headquarters at 10:20 A. M. that fighting was in progress between United States cavalry under the command of Colonel S. R. H. Tompkins and a Villa detachment in the vicinity of San Lorenzo, opposite Ysleta.

Artillery fire against the Villa rebel forces southeast of Juarez was opened at 10:25 A. M. with the 2d Battalion of the 82d Field Artillery firing shrapnel bursts, which could be seen plainly from the river. The artillery fire was six miles from Juarez in the vicinity of the cavalry fighting near San Lorenzo.

At 11 o'clock the entire 2d Cavalry Brigade, composed of the 7th and 5th Cavalry Regiments, could be seen plainly about eight miles south and west of Juarez, in hot pursuit of the Villa forces which were engaged at San Lorenzo.

At 11:20 the American cavalry appeared to be gaining rapidly on the Villa band, which was making a desperate effort to reach the mountains to the southwest of Juarez. The pursuit, which started east of Juarez, swung to the west, and the columns could be seen in a cloud of dust to the southwest beyond Juarez.

By noon the two columns were only faintly visible in the dust screen, and it was impossible to tell whether the American troops were in contact with the fleeing Villa riders.

A subsequent report said the American cavalry had abandoned the chase and President Exonerates Lamont in Peace Treaty "Leak"

By RICHARD V. OULAHAN.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, June 15.—President Wilson has written a note to Thomas Lamont exonerating him of any wrongdoing or breach of faith in giving a copy of the peace treaty to Henry P. Davison.

Mr. Lamont is now in London.

The contents of the President's note have not been disclosed.

DUBLIN LIONIZES ALCOCK AND BROWN

Cheering Crowds Besiege Car at Station and Carry Them to Automobiles.

THEY GO TO LONDON TODAY

Alcock Very Positive Now That Flying Boats Are the Thing for Ocean Flights.

DUBLIN, June 16, (Associated Press.)—A tumultuous welcome was given to Captain Alcock and Lieutenant Brown on their arrival here tonight. When the train entered the Broadstone Station cheering crowds fairly mobbed the fliers' car, dragging them out and carrying them on sturdy shoulders to waiting automobiles.

American soldiers on leave, waving the Stars and Stripes, were a feature of the demonstration. A procession was formed and marched up the main streets to a hotel where Alcock and Brown spent the night preparatory to their start for London tomorrow.

On the train late today Captain Alcock looked remarkably well and was in buoyant spirits.

"If I am due for a reaction from the strain and excitement of the flight, it is a long time coming," he laughed in a matter-of-fact way. Then he scribbled an autograph for a girl.

On the other hand Lieutenant Brown seemed greatly fatigued, and frankly admitted it.

The biggest reception the aviators got along the road before Dublin was reached was at Mullingar, where the soldiers from the garrison with a band swelled the crowd of townspeople.

The outstanding conviction of the flight impressed upon Captain Alcock, as he remarked to the correspondent, is that the airplane in its present state of development is not the type of machine for a transatlantic voyage.

"The next time I cross the ocean," he said, "it will be in a flying boat. I foresee for the flying boat a great future, both as a passenger and commerce carrier."

On his side Lieutenant Brown remarked that the lesson gained was that marine navigation is entirely applicable to airplanes.

"There is little element of luck either in the success of the NC-4 or our flight," he declared. So far as weather was concerned, it could not have been worse in our case, for after the first hour we were smothered in fog until we landed in Ireland. Nevertheless, with only a sextant and compass, and a special device for determining the machine's speed and drift, we came through. And I am sure we could do it again.

"Occasional glimpses of the ocean through rifts in the fog enabled me to ascertain how fast we were traveling and how far we were drifting, and, by combining the two, to get a dead reckoning. At first I thus used glimpses of ice, which was easier to make out in the mist than the water.

"I was absolutely right until early yesterday, when I had to descend to within fifty feet of the water before being able to see it distinctly. After I got the drift and had made observations it was easy by calculation from the last position to get back on the course."

London Prepares to Welcome Fliers.

LONDON, June 16, (Associated Press.)—London celebrated today the achievement of the two British airmen who yesterday completed the first non-stop transatlantic flight, meanwhile preparing for a formal reception to the air victors, Captain John Alcock and Lieutenant Arthur W. Brown.

Meanwhile the aviators, tired but happy, are on their way to London and may reach here tomorrow. Both are well, but Lieutenant Brown, the navigator of the plane, suffered bruises on the nose and face when the machine landed in a bog. The biplane was badly damaged and may have to be dismantled.

The Aero Club is making plans for a reception and banquet for Captain John Alcock on his arrival in London. It is expected that he may participate in the Victory Aerial Derby around London

WOMAN SUFFRAGE AMENDMENT WINS IN LEGISLATURE

Unanimous Vote Is Given For It in Senate and Assembly.

SIXTH STATE TO RATIFY

Session, Called for Special Purpose, Began Early in the Evening.

SMITH WIDENS PROGRAM

Housing Problem Is Also Laid Before Legislators by Governor.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, June 16.—Without a dissenting vote, the Legislature, in extraordinary session, late tonight adopted a concurrent resolution ratifying the Federal woman suffrage amendment. The vote in the Senate was 44 to 0 and in the Assembly 137 to 0.

The Assembly passed the suffrage amendment before the Senate acted.

Mrs. Ida B. Sammis, one of the two women members, was the first speaker. Mrs. Sammis, who represents Suffolk, is a Republican. She outlined the history of the struggle women have made for the ballot.

All parties united in favoring the measure, and Mrs. Mary Lilly, Democratic member from New York City, joined with the minority leader, Donohue, in support of the amendment.

"I am proud of the men of both dominant parties in this State," said Mrs. Lilly, "but more particularly proud of the Democrats. It was in a Democratic year that suffrage was granted to the women."

Republican speakers took issue with this statement, but it remained for the Socialist leader, August Claessens, to criticise both parties for not having given the vote to women years ago.

"Political suffrage is only a makeshift," he said. "Women all over the world want a larger suffrage. They want a voice in the industrial life of this nation, and you won't have a democracy until that right is granted them."

Speeds Vote in the Senate.

The amendment was carried on a quick roll call. It was sent over to the Senate from the Assembly, immediately after its adoption there, which was effected under an emergency message from Governor Smith to counteract the constitutional proviso requiring legislative measures to remain three days on the desks of members before being taken up for final action.

President Pro Tem. Walters of the Senate immediately moved the adoption of the resolution to ratify, and the Senate clerk prepared for what is known as a quick roll call.

Senator Henry M. Sage of Albany, a consistent opponent of woman suffrage, demanded, however, that his name be called, as he desired to explain his action.

Senator Sage took the Governor to task for calling the Legislature into extraordinary session at considerable expense to the taxpayers when nothing really was gained by doing so.

He assailed the statement made by the Governor in his proclamation calling the extra session which had declared that ratification was essential in order that women in some other States might be able to vote in the Presidential primaries next Spring.

Senator Sage said that this could be accomplished by adoption of the ratification resolution early next January.

Senator Sage Excused from Voting.

At the conclusion of his remarks Senator Sage later asked to be relieved from voting on the resolution, as he said he did not care to vote against it, and could not possibly vote to ratify. This request was granted.

"This is merely another instance of a certain number of people in the State of New York trying to force their will on a good many other people in other States who have not accepted woman suffrage, just as we had not accepted prohibition when the Federal amendment came before us," Senator Sage declared.

"The purpose of calling an extraordinary session was merely to curry favor with the women, who now have the ballot in this State.

"Some day the legislators of States will find out that women are thinking human beings, who do not want to be treated like children, and who do not want gallantry brought into play for their special benefit, but want merely equality."

Senator John J. Boylan and Senator

CONGRESS MOVES TO RETURN WIRES

House Interstate Commerce Committee Reports Bill, Which May Be Taken Up Today.

RATES TO GO ON SIX MONTHS

Senate to Investigate Charge That Government Money Is Being Used to Fight Strike.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Post Office Department officials appeared today to believe that tension in the telegraphers' strike had been greatly lessened by the Saturday night order of the Postmaster General, conceding the demands of telephone workers for the right to organize and bargain collectively. But at the Capitol preparations were continued to remove the land wires from the control of the Postmaster General, and a move was made to investigate the charge by the Commercial Telegraphers' Union that Government funds were being used to fight their strike.

The bill to restore the telegraphs and telephones to their owners was reported by the House Interstate Commerce Committee and may be taken up tomorrow. The bill, which is virtually the Kellogg Bill, provides that the wires shall be returned at the end of the month in which the President signs the bill, but was amended to extend the present increased rates six months instead of ninety days as in the original Kellogg bill.

Senator Watson of Indiana gave assurances to F. H. McDowell, of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union, that as soon as possible the charge that Government money was being employed in the strike would be investigated.

Postmaster General Burleson today issued an order supplemental to the order of Saturday night. This new order, No. 2310, directed telephone companies to designate officials to whom complaints may be presented by employes. The order reads:

"Representations have been made to the Wire Board that employes having grievances are often left in doubt to whom they should be presented. Each telephone company, therefore, shall at once designate an officer or officers of such company to whom complaints may be presented and shall make such selection known by placing a notice on its bulletin board, giving the name or names of the officer or officers so selected. Such officer or officers so appointed by the company shall carefully make a notation of all complaints presented and the hour and date when received, and also the action taken on each complaint. This is necessary in order to avoid any controversy as to questions of fact.

"Order No. 3209 will be strictly enforced.

"A. S. BURLESON,
"Postmaster General."

The assertion was made today that the Postmaster General had said his order of Saturday night would include telegraph company employes. At the Post Office Department no confirmation of this statement could be had. The Publicity Bureau of the Department flatly denied that it had authorized such a statement. Nothing was announced at the Post Office Department regarding further orders, which Frank Morrison, Vice President of the American Federation of Labor, predicted would be issued.

O. R. T. Men Not to Be Penalized.

At the Railroad Administration denial was made that any request had been made by the Postmaster General to Director General Hines to dismiss railroad telegraphers who refused to handle commercial messages. No such request had been made, it was said.

The report made by the House Interstate Commerce Committee upon the bill to return the telegraph and telephones said:

"There seemed to be little or no difference of opinion on the part of the committee that Congress has full authority to project the Federal rates for a reasonable period not exceeding six months into the future, even though this period terminated beyond the proclamation of peace. Congress in legislation enacted during the war and ever since the armistice has frequently exercised such authority.

"Your committee believed that the period of ninety days as contained in the Senate act was too short to permit the commissions or regulatory bodies to pass on the hundreds of applications

DELIVERY QUITE INFORMAL

An Original Treaty With Red Ink Revisions Handed Over.

NO TIME TO PRINT NEW ONE

Germans Must Make Their Own Copies from the Sole Revised Version Given Them.

FOCH AT COUNCIL MEETING

Hears Germans Protest Over Shortness of Time Limit—Printing Will Take a Day.

PARIS, June 16, (Associated Press.)—The reply of the Allied and Associated Governments to Germany's counterproposals to the Peace Treaty and a revised copy of the Peace Treaty are tonight in the hands of Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau, who is on his way to Weimar, there to present to the German National Assembly the final word of the victors in the war.

Few changes have been made in the revised Peace Treaty. The original contentions of the allied and associated powers have virtually been maintained intact.

With the revised treaty, containing interlineations in red ink, where changes had been made in it, was a covering note, written by Premier Clemenceau, President of the Peace Conference. It had been impossible to reprint the treaty in time for its presentation today.

The covering note severely castigates Germany for protesting against the treaty on the ground that it conflicts with the terms of the armistice. M. Clemenceau says Germany fails to understand the position she occupies today in the estimation of the world for being responsible for a war which was "the greatest crime against humanity and the freedom of the people that any nation calling itself civilized has ever consciously committed."

No Formalities in the Presentation.

Without ostentation Paul Dutasta, General Secretary of the Peace Conference, at 6:40 o'clock this evening placed the revised draft of the treaty and the note in the hands of Secretary Simon and Baron von Loersner, of the German delegation, with whom M. Dutasta held a conversation lasting for several minutes, explaining the nature of the instrument and the length of time allotted for the Germans to reply. Herr Simon protested against the short time given Germany to make known her intentions.

M. Dutasta arrived in Versailles by automobile from Paris at 6:20 o'clock, carrying the momentous documents in two parcels wrapped in prosaic brown paper. He was received by Colonel Henry, Master of Ceremonies at Versailles, and officers of the allied missions and conducted to the reading room of the Hotel des Reservoirs, the German headquarters.

Here the party was grouped along one side of the room. In front of M. Dutasta was a large marble-topped table, upon which the documents were placed in two piles. There was a considerable wait before Secretary Simon and Baron von Loersner arrived, escorted by two French officers. The Germans took their places on the other side of the table.

At 6:40 o'clock Herr Simon informally reached across the table and took the documents and handed them to Baron von Loersner, this actually constituting the formal receipt of the treaty and the ultimatum. A receipt from the Germans for the document was required by M. Dutasta.

The intercourse between the two groups was rather confused. No provision for an interpreter had been made. Secretary Dutasta spoke in French, and Herr Simon replied in German. Neither of the principals apparently was aware of just what the other said. So it seemed fortunate that the details as to the period allowed and the nature of the reply expected were indicated clearly in the covering letter.

The Germans plainly intimated their intention to demand an extension of time. On receiving the treaty, Herr Simon said:

"I must observe, on behalf of my

"Stern Peace" Only Alternative to More War, Says Bonar Law, Adding: "It is Not All Over."

LONDON, June 16.—The peace terms presented to Germany today are the final reply of the Allies, Andrew Bonar Law, Government spokesman in the House of Commons, declared in opening the Victory Loan campaign at the Guildhall today. The speaker said he hoped earnestly the Germans would sign the terms.

"It is for them to choose within five days," Mr. Bonar Law added. "They must sign or the armistice is at an end. There must be a just peace, but a just peace must be a stern peace."

The speaker said that the chief of the British Staff had declared twenty-three different wars were now going on, and added:

"It is not all over. It is quite possible by want of wisdom, by absence of restraint, by disunion among the Allies, and by want of unity at home to lose, not the victory, but the full fruits of the victory which has been bought so dearly."

WILSON WILL TOUR NATION FOR LEAGUE

Announcement Almost Coincident with Notice That He Cannot Transmit Treaty.

OPPONENTS ALSO TO STUMP

Talk on Knox Resolution Begins Today—Renewed Rumors of "Round Robin."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—President Wilson is perfecting plans for a tour of the United States, soon after his return from Paris, so that he may present the case of the League of Nations to the American people. A tentative itinerary has already been prepared and submitted to him.

There have been many demands for an address by the President on July 4, and the most insistent call, it was intimated in official circles, has come from St. Louis.

Whether he will be able to go there on the 4th or not, he expects to visit St. Louis, as well as the homes of many Republican leaders who have been strong in their opposition to the League of Nations, and are now trying to force a vote on the Knox resolution to separate the covenant from the Peace Treaty.

He is expected to appear in several of the more important cities, and will carry his message as far as the Pacific Coast. He is especially anxious, it is reported, to speak in California, the home of Senator Johnson, in Washington, which sent Senator Poindexter, another opponent of the League, to the Senate, and in Idaho, Senator Borah's State.

Uncertainty as to President Wilson's plans was ended today when a cablegram was received at the White House in reply to an invitation extended by Senator Swanson of Virginia to attend the tercentenary celebration at Richmond on July 30. In effect the President said that he did not know how the date of that celebration would work out in connection with the tentative itinerary now being prepared for his tour to the Coast.

The President indicated that he could not let attendance at the tercentenary celebration interfere with the opportunity of seeing that the American people obtained a proper understanding of the Peace Treaty and the League covenant.

The invitation to the President to speak in St. Louis was extended through Senator Spencer, who lives in that city.

A cable which reached the White House today stated that the President would leave for Belgium tomorrow evening and return to Paris Friday.

The cable advices concerning the President's purpose to make a nation-wide speaking tour served to stir the Republican leaders in the Senate to action today. They decided upon two plans: A determined effort will be made to obtain a vote on the Knox resolution within ten days, and in the event of failure, it is planned to draft a round robin, subscribing to the proposals set forth in the Knox resolution to separate the treaty and the League covenant.

Second, arrangements will be made to send before the people speakers, possibly including Senators Lodge, Knox, Borah, Johnson, and Poindexter, who will attack the covenant.

A conference of the opponents of the League will be held as soon as definite word as to the plans for the President's speaking tour is obtained.

Debate on the Knox resolution will begin in the Senate tomorrow, and the program discussed at a secret conference of seventeen Senators, held at the home of Senator Brandegee yesterday, will be developed. The details of this conference are not made known.

It is stated, however, that Senator Knox will address the Senate tomorrow. Administration supporters will be represented in the debate by Senator Shepperd. Senator McCumber, Republican, who is backing the League, also has announced that he will speak. Opponents of the League will employ every

GERMAN CABINET TO ACT QUICKLY

Awaits Treaty at Weimar, with Economic and Financial Advisers at Hand.

TO REFER IT TO ASSEMBLY

Latter Expected to Get Cabinet's Decision Saturday—Berlin Predicts Rejection.

BERLIN, June 16, (Associated Press.)—Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau has informed the Berlin Government that immediately after receiving the allied reply to the German counterproposals he will start for Weimar, arriving Tuesday afternoon. This information has been received from official sources.

Immediately after the Count's arrival at Weimar the Cabinet will hold a meeting and the terms will be sent to shipping, financial, and economic experts, who will report to the Cabinet. The situation will be laid before the National Assembly on Wednesday and will be discussed, so that the Cabinet will be able to ascertain the state of public sentiment.

With the experts' opinions and the Assembly's attitude before it, the Cabinet will hold a final meeting probably on Friday, and will submit the German answer to the National Assembly on Saturday for ratification.

A canvass of those qualified to speak for absent Government officials adduces the blunt, positive statement that unless the revised proposals of the Entente nations contain most radical modifications in spirit and in letter, Germany will not sign the peace treaty.

Alleged modifications in the draft of the treaty, as reported to Berlin through neutral news sources, are rejected in official quarters here as wholly insufficient to warrant the prediction that the Government will be inclined to subject them to closer scrutiny. Emphasis is also placed on the statement that the Cabinet, which is now fully represented at Weimar, is absolutely united in its attitude, and that there is no prospect of an internal division which might break up the present Government and produce a new Ministry. The latter declaration appears to have been prompted by recurring reports that Mathias Erzberger, Chairman of the German Armistice Commission, was willing to take over the job of concluding peace.

It is also pointed out that the Peace Commission of the National Assembly, which took an active part in the formulation of the German counterproposals, is solidly backing up the Cabinet in its determination to refuse to sign any compact not representing the greatest possible divergence from the original proposals.

In view of this alleged solidarity, political onlookers here are unable to figure out how Erzberger can possibly create an unexpectedly new situation. Erzberger has been brushing aside these rumors, disposing of them by referring to the fact that the present coalition Government is not only intact, but holds an undisputed mandate from the German people and from the National Assembly which is thoroughly representative of the people's will. On the other hand, he has not as yet made an unequivocal denial of the rumor that he is contemplating quitting the Cabinet, nor has he definitely declared that he is in complete harmony with the Cabinet's peace policies.

Scheidemann Peace Propaganda.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERNE, June 15.—The Scheidemann Government is conducting a frantic propaganda among the German people, explaining that owing to the hatred against Germany in the allied countries there is no hope of obtaining less stringent peace conditions, and that Germany must wait until the time has disposed the rest of mankind better toward her.

If Germany does not accept the terms, the Government spokesman insists, the horrors of hunger will surpass anything yet experienced. Moreover, the Poles will seize the opportunity of occupying Danzig.

This propaganda is almost entirely oral and is being carried on now in all the German constituencies. The feeling in Germany, therefore, is that Brockdorff-Rantzau has been instructed to accept the terms.

In Swiss Government and financial circles the impression also prevails that Germany will sign.

BLAME FOR INHUMAN WAR

Covering Letter by Clemenceau Recites Foe's Wrongs to World.

TERMS DEFENDED AS JUST

Wilson Utterances Quoted to Show Basis of the Allies' Conditions.

TIME LIMIT IS EXTENDED

Berlin Government Will Have Until Monday to Decide on Signature.

Germans Get Two Days More to Answer "Yes" or "No"

PARIS, June 16 (Associated Press.)—Five days was the allotted period originally fixed for the Germans to answer "Yes" or "No" to the demands of the Allies. But two additional days have been granted because of the insistence of the German delegation that not sufficient time had been allotted for proper consideration of the drafted terms. This will extend the time limitation to Monday, June 23.

If Germany's reply is acquiescence, the treaty will be immediately signed. If Germany declines to accede to the demands the armistice will be automatically terminated, and the allied armed forces will take whatever steps they deem requisite to the occasion.

PARIS, June 16.—The final reply of the allied and associated powers on the conditions of peace handed to the Germans at Versailles May 7 was delivered to the German delegation today and made public soon afterward.

The principles of the original conditions have been vigorously upheld as establishing a peace of justice, but certain modifications in detail and many explanations of the effect of the execution of the terms are made. The reply is in two parts, a general covering letter of about 4,500 words, and seriatim discussions of the general counterproposals.

The changes include:

A plebiscite for Upper Silesia, with guarantees of coal from that region.

Frontier rectifications in West Prussia.

The omission of the third zone from the Schleswig plebiscite.

A temporary increase of the permitted strength of the Germany army from 100,000 to 200,000.

A declaration of intention to submit within a month of the treaty's signature a list of those accused of violation of the laws and customs of war.

An offer to co-operate with a German Commission on Reparations and to receive suggestions for discharging the obligation.

Certain detailed modifications in the financial, economic, and ports and waterways clauses, including the abolition of the proposed Kiel Canal Commission.

Assurance to Germany of membership in the League of Nations in the early future if she fulfills her obligations.

Text of Covering Letter.

The covering letter from M. Clemenceau, President of the Peace Conference, to Count Von Brockdorff-Rantzau, President of the German delegation, reads:

"Mr. President:

"The allied and associated powers have given the most earnest consideration to the observations of the German delegation on the draft of the treaty of peace.

"The reply protests against the peace on the grounds that it conflicts with the terms upon which the armistice of the 11th of November, 1918, was signed, and that it is a peace of violence and not of justice. The protest of the German delegation shows that they fail to understand the position in which Germany stands today. They seem to think that Germany has only to make sacrifices in order to obtain peace, as if this were but the end of some mere struggle for territory and power. The allied and associated powers therefore feel it necessary to begin their reply by a clear statement of the judgment of the world, which has been forged by practically the whole of civilized mankind.

"In the view of the allied and associated powers the war which began on the 1st of August, 1914, was the greatest crime against humanity and the freedom of the peoples that any nation calling itself civilized has ever consciously committed. For many years the rulers of Germany, true to the Prussian tradition, strove for a position of dominance in Europe. They were not satisfied with that growing prosperity and influence to which Germany was entitled, and which all other nations were willing to accord her, or the society of free and equal peoples.

"They required that they should be many. In order to attain their ends they used every channel through which to educate their own subjects in the doctrine that might was right in international affairs. They never ceased to expand German armaments by land and sea, and to propagate the falsehood that it was necessary because Germany's neighbors were jealous of her prosperity and power. She sought to sow hostility and suspicion instead of friendship between nations.

"They developed a system of espionage and intrigue through which they were enabled to stir up international rebellion and unrest, and even to make secret offensive preparations within the territory of their neighbors, whereby they might, when the moment came, strike them down with greater certainty and ease. They kept Europe in a ferment by threats of violence, and when they found that their neighbors were resolved to resist their arrogant will they determined to assert their predominance in Europe by force.

"As soon as their preparations were complete, they encouraged a subservient ally to declare war on Serbia at forty-eight hours' notice, a war involving the control of the Balkans, which they knew could not be localized and which was bound to unchain a general war. In order to make doubly sure, they refused every attempt at conciliation and conference until it was too late to avert the world war inevitable for which they had plotted and for which alone among the nations they were adequately equipped and prepared.

Indicted for Inhuman Methods.

"Germany's responsibility, however, is not confined to having planned and started the war. She is no less responsible for the savage and inhuman manner in which it was conducted. Though Germany was herself a guarantor of Belgium, the rulers of Germany violated their solemn promise to respect the neutrality of this unoffending people. Not content with this, they deliberately carried out a series of promiscuous shootings and burnings with the sole object of terrifying the inhabitants into submission by the very frightfulness of their action.

"They were the first to use poisonous gas, notwithstanding the appalling suffering it entailed. They began the bombing and long distance shelling of towns for no military object, but solely for the purpose of reducing the morale of their opponents by striking at their women and children. They commenced the submarine campaign, with its piratical challenge to international law and its destruction of great numbers of innocent passengers and sailors in mid-ocean, far from succor, at the mercy of the winds and waves, and the yet more ruthless submarine crews.

"They drove thousands of men and women and children with brutal savagry into slavery in foreign lands. They allowed barbarities to be practiced against their prisoners of war from which the most uncivilized people would have recoiled.

"The conduct of Germany is almost unexampled in human history. The terrible responsibility which lies at her doors can be seen in the fact that not less than 7,000,000 dead lie buried in Europe, while more than 20,000,000 others carry upon them the evidence of wounds and suffering, because Germany saw fit to gratify her lust for tyranny by a resort to war.

"The allied and associated powers believe that they will be false to those who have given their all to save the freedom of the world if they consent to treat the war on any other basis than as a crime against humanity and right.

Quotes 'Force to Utmost' Speech.

"This attitude of the allied and associated powers was made perfectly (ommission) to Germany during the war by their principal statesmen. It was defined by President Wilson in his speech of April 6, 1918, and explicitly and categorically accepted by the German people as a principle governing the peace:

Let everything that we say, my fellow countrymen, everything that we henceforth plan and accomplish, ring true to this response till the majesty and might of our concerted power fill all the thoughts and utterly defeat the force of these who flout and misprize what we honor and hold dear. Germany has once more said that force alone shall decide whether justice and peace shall reign in the affairs of men, whether right, as America conceives it, or dominion, as she conceives it, shall determine the destinies of mankind. There is, therefore, no possible response to us from us: force, force to the utmost, force without stint or limit, the righteous and triumphant force which shall make the law of the world, and cast every selfish dominion down in the dust.

"It was set forth clearly in a speech of the Prime Minister of Great Britain, dated Dec. 14, 1917:

There is no security in any land without the certainty of punishment. There is no protection for life, property or morals in a State where the criminal is more powerful than the law. The law of nations is no exception, and until it has been vindicated the peace of the world will always be at the mercy of any nation whose professors have assiduously taught it to believe that no crime is wrong so long as it leads to the aggrandizement and enrichment of the country to which they owe allegiance. There have been many times in the story of the world, criminal States. We are dealing with one of them now. There will always be criminal States until the reward of international crime becomes too precarious to make it profitable, and the punishment of international crime becomes too sure to make it attractive.

"It was made clear also in an address of M. Clemenceau in September, 1918:

What do they (the French soldiers) want? What do we ourselves want? To fight, to fight victoriously and unceasingly, until the hour when the enemy shall understand that no compromise is possible between such crime and justice.

"Similarly, Signor Orlando, speaking on Oct. 5, 1918, declared:

We shall obtain peace when our enemies recognize that humanity has the right and duty to safeguard itself against a continuance of such causes as have brought about this terrible slaughter, and that the blood of millions of men calls not for vengeance, but for the realization of those high ideals for which it has been so generously shed. Nobody thinks of employing, even by way of legitimate retaliation, methods of brutal violence or of overbearing domination or of suffocation of the freedom of any people—methods and policies which made the world rise against the Central Powers. But nobody will contend that the moral order can be restored simply because he who awaits in his iniquitous endeavor declares that he has renounced his aim. Questions intimately affecting the peaceful life of nations, once raised, must obtain the solution which justice requires.

Demands Justice for All.

"Justice, therefore, is the only possible basis for the settlement of the accounts of this terrible war. Justice is what the German delegation asks for, and says that Germany has been promised. But it must be justice for all.

"There must be justice for the dead and wounded, and for those who have been orphaned and bereaved, that Europe might be free from Prussian despotism. There must be justice for the peoples who now stagger under war debts which exceed 30,000,000,000 that liberty might be saved. There must be justice for those millions whose homes and lands and property German savagery has spoliated and destroyed.

"This is why the allied and associated powers have insisted as a cardinal feature of the treaty that Germany must undertake to make reparation to the very uttermost of her power, for reparation for wrongs inflicted is of the essence of justice. That is why they insist that those individuals who are most clearly responsible for German aggression and for those acts of barbarism and inhumanity which have disgraced the German conduct of the war must be handed over to justice, which has not been meted out to them at home. That, too, is why Germany must submit for a few years to certain special disabilities and arrangements.

"Germany has ruined the industries, the mines, and the machinery of neighboring countries, not during battle, but

"The provision for the presence of representatives of important nonrpartisan States on the commissions is security that the commissions will consider the interests of all. A number of modifications, however, have been made in the original proposals, the details of which will be found in the attached memorandum.

"IV.—Under the heading of economic and financial clauses the German delegation appears to have seriously misinterpreted the proposals of the allied and associated powers. There is no intention on the part of the allied and associated powers to strangle Germany or to prevent her from taking her proper place in international trade and commerce.

"Provided that she abides by the treaty of peace, and provided also that she abandons those aggressive and destructive traditions which have been apparent in her business no less than her political methods, the allied and associated powers intend that Germany shall have fair treatment in the purchase of raw materials and in the disposal of goods, subject to those temporary provisions already mentioned in the interests of the nations ravaged and artificially weakened by Germany's action.

"It is [illegible] that the passions engendered by the war should die as soon as possible, and that all nations should share in the prosperity which comes from the honest supply of mutual needs. They wish that Germany shall enjoy this prosperity like the rest, though most of the fruit of it must necessarily go for many years to come in making reparation to her neighbors for the damage she has done.

"In order to make their intentions clear, a number of modifications have been made in the financial and economic clauses of the treaty period, but the principles upon which the treaty is drawn must stand.

"V.—The German delegation have greatly misinterpreted the reparation proposals of the treaty. These proposals confine the amounts payable by Germany to what is clearly justifiable under the terms of the armistice in respect of damage caused to the civilian population of the Allies by the aggression of Germany. They do not provide for that interference in the internal life of Germany by the Reparation Commission which is alleged. They are designated to make the payment of that reparation which Germany must make as easy and convenient to her as may be possible, and they will be so interpreted in that sense. The allied and associated powers, therefore, are not prepared to modify them.

"But they recognize, with the German delegation, the advantage of arriving as soon as possible at the total which shall be the sum which shall be payable by Germany and accepted by the Allies. It is not possible to fix this sum today, for the extent of damage and the cost of repair have not yet been ascertained. They are, therefore, willing to accord to Germany all necessary and reasonable facilities to enable her to survey the devastated and damaged regions and to make proposals thereafter within four months of the signing of the treaty or a settlement of the claims under each of the categories of damage for which she is liable. If within the following two months an agreement can be reached the facilities of Germany will have been ascertained. If agreement has not been reached by then, the arrangement as provided in the treaty will be executed.

Must Show Fitness for League.

"VI.—The allied and associated powers have given careful consideration to the request of the German delegation that Germany should be admitted to the League of Nations as one of the conditions of peace. They are unable to accede to this request. The German revolution has supervened but a few moment of the war, and there is as yet no guarantee that it represents a permanent change.

"In the present temper of international feeling it is impossible to expect the free nations of the world to sit down immediately in equal association with those by whom they have been so grievously wronged. To attempt this too soon would delay and not hasten that process of appeasement which all desire. But the allied and associated powers believe that if the German people prove by their acts that they intend to fulfill the conditions of the peace, and that they have abandoned forever those aggressive and estranging policies which caused the war, and have now become a people with whom it is possible to live in neighborly good fellowship, the memories of these past years will speedily fade, and it will be possible at an early date to complete the League of Nations by the admission of Germany thereto.

"This is their earnest hope, and this may be the case. They believe that the prospects of the world depend upon the close and friendly co-operation of all nations in adjusting international questions and promoting the welfare and progress of mankind, but that early entry of Germany into the League must depend principally upon the action of the German people themselves.

"VII.—In the course of its discussion of the economic terms and clauses where the German delegation has repeated its denunciation of the blockade instituted by the allied and associated powers. The blockade is and always has been a legal and recognized method of war, and its operation has been from time to time adapted to changes in international communications. If the allied and associated powers have imposed upon Germany a blockade of exceptional severity, which throughout they have consistently sought to conform to the principles of international law, it is because of the criminal character of the war initiated by Germany and of the barbarous methods adopted by her in prosecuting it.

"The allied and associated powers have not attempted to make a specific answer to all the observations made in the German note. The fact of their omission does not, however, indicate that they are either admitted or open to discussion.

Last Word of the Allies.

"VIII.—In conclusion, the allied and associated powers must make it clear that this letter and the memorandum attached constitute their last word. They have examined the German observations and counterproposals with earnest attention and care. They have in consequence, made important modifications in the draft treaty, but in its principles they stand by it.

"They believe that it is not only a just a settlement of the great war, but that it provides the basis upon which the peoples of Europe can live together in friendship and equality. At the same time it creates the machinery for the peaceful adjustment of all international problems by discussion and consent, and whereby the settlement of 1919 itself can be modified from time to time to suit new facts and new conditions as they arise.

"It is frankly not based upon a general condemnation of the events of the 1914-1918 period. It would not be a peace of justice if it were. But it represents a sincere and deliberate attempt to establish that 'reign of law based upon the consent of the governed, and sustained by the organized opinion of mankind' which was the agreed basis of the peace.

"As such, the treaty in its present form must be accepted or rejected. The allied and associated powers therefore require a declaration from the German delegation within five days that they are prepared to sign the treaty as now amended. If they declare within the period that they are prepared to sign the treaty, as it stands, arrangements will be made for the immediate signature of the peace at Versailles.

"In default of such a declaration, this communication constitutes the notification provided for in Article 11 of the convention of the 16th of February, 1919, prolonging the armistice signed on the 11th of November, 1918, and again prolonged by the agreement of the 13th of December, 1918, and the 16th of January, 1919. The said armistice will then terminate and the allied and associated powers will take such steps as they think needful to force their terms."

Apparently this is the end of Premier Clemenceau's covering letter.]

The detailed reply follows exactly the scheme of the original conditions of peace, which was in turn followed by the Germans in the counter proposals.

Summary of Detailed Reply.

As to the legal basis of peace, the allied and associated powers are in complete accord with the German delegation at the basis of negotiations lies in the correspondence immediately preceding the armistice period. In an attempt to prove a breach of this agreement the latter, it is set forth, have quoted from a number of speeches, most of them antedating this correspondence and many made by allied statesmen when not at war with Germany or not in office. It is held to be sufficient to refer to the reply of the allied powers [illegible] statement have never appeared possible for any other peace than one which should undo the wrongs of 1914, vindicate justice and international rights and reconstruct the political and territorial [illegible] Europe on lines which would give liberty to all its peoples and therefore the prospect of a lasting peace."

The German claim of a contradiction between the terms of the treaty and President Wilson's promise of justice to the German people is met by the quotation demanding "the destruction of every arbitrary power anywhere that can separately, secretly and of its single choice disturb the peace of the world." If similarly the Germans claim contradiction in the territorial terms, it is set forth, it must be borne in mind that this is the result of sag purposes to act unjustly toward Germany, but rather of the fact that an appreciable amount of German territory consisted of districts unjustly appropriated by her in the past.

The economic objections are answered by the statement that Germany's economic condition is intact, and in no wise crippled by a devastation like that brought upon the allied peoples.

The German contension that peoples have been bartered about is declared to be similarly unfounded, as every territorial settlement has been reached after careful and laborod consideration of all the racial, religious and linguistic factors, and the legitimate hopes of peoples long under alien rule.

Germany's complaint that she has not been invited into the League of Nations cannot find justification, in any of President Wilson's declarations, it is set forth, for indeed he carefully laid down that such admission was possible only after Germany has proved her character.

PART I.

The League of Nations.

The allied and associated powers, regarding the League of Nations as the basis of the treaty of peace and as bringing into the relations of people an element of progress, which the future will confirm and develop, have never had the intention of indefinitely excluding Germany or any other power from membership. Every country whose Government has proved its stability and its desire to observe its international obligations, particularly those of the Peace Treaty, will be supported in its demand for admission.

In Germany's case the events of the past five years prove the need of a definite test, the length of which will depend on the acts of the German Government, especially toward the treaty. No reason is seen, however, provided these necessary conditions are assured, why Germany should not become a member in the early future.

Inclusion in the covenant of the German proposals regarding economic questions is considered unnecessary. The allied and associated powers will guarantee protection, under the League, of German minorities in ceded territories, and intend to open negotiations immediately for a general reduction of armaments, as provided in the Covenant, in the expectation that Germany carries out her engagements in this regard.

PART III.

European Political Clauses.

BELGIUM.

The territories of Eupen and Malmedy, separated from Belgian territories in 1814, without consideration of the people, have continued in close relations with Belgium, despite a century of Prussianization, and at the same time have have made a basis for German militarism by construction of the great camp at Elsenborn, and various strategic railroads directed against Belgium.

The reunion of these territories with Belgium seems justified if petitions to this effect are sufficiently supported by the population under the League of Nations. The German claim for neutralized Moresnet is wholly justified, while the communal woods in Prussian Moresnet are awarded to Belgium in partial compensation for the destruction of Belgian forests.

SCHLESWIG.

The plebiscite in Northern Schleswig, promised by Prussia by treaty after its seizure, in 1866, but never granted, is now provided for at the request of Denmark and the people concerned. Territory as far as the Eider and the Schiei is to be evacuated by the Germans and administered by residents on the spot, without occupation but their own welfare, and at the end of fifteen years will be free to choose the sovereignty under which they prefer to continue.

ALSACE-LORRAINE.

A plebiscite for Alsace Lorraine cannot be admitted, because the whole purpose of the provisions in regard to these provinces has been so far as possible to repair the injustice committed in 1871, as agreed on by Germany, and to restore the situation then prevailing, so far as it is possible after fifty years of suffering.

The will of the inhabitants has been amply attested by the unanimous protests against annexation, voiced by their representatives at Bordeaux and repeated many other times since, even at the cost of their own tranquillity and interests.

There is no intention of applying the general principle of the treaty that States taking over ceded territory should bear part of the public dept of the ceding State and pay for the public property, as it is intended France should recover these provinces without prejudice.

THE EASTERN FRONTIERS.

Two cardinal principles have been followed in determining the eastern frontiers of Germany. The first is the special obligation to re-establish the Polish nation in the independence of which it was unjustly deprived more than a century ago. This was one of the greatest wrongs of which history has a record, the memory and the result of which has for long poisoned the political life of a large part of Europe and which was one of the essentials steps by which the military power of Prussia was built up and the whole political life, first of Prussia and then of Germany, perverted.

The second principle is that there shall be included in the restored Poland those districts inhabited by an indisputably Polish population.

LUXEMBURG.

The German observations on Luxemburg require no answer because of two incontrovertible facts: Germany's violation of her neutrality and Luxemburg's denunciation of the eastern union.

AUSTRIA.

Germany's declaration that she "has never had and will never have the intention of changing by violence the frontier between Germany and Austria" is noted.

RUSSIA.

None of the German observations as to Russia require change in the treaty.

THE SARRE.

No alteration is permissible in the Sarre terms. The allied and associated powers have sought to impose for the destruction of the mines of Northern France a form of reparation which by its exceptional nature will for a limited period be a definite and visible symbol. At the same time they intend, by assuring these mines to immediate possession of actual security, to escape the risks to which the German memoir itself has drawn attention. The interests of the inhabitants have, however, been most scrupulously safeguarded; they will live for the first time since their forcible annexation to Prussia and Bavaria.

POSEN AND WEST PRUSSIA.

These two provinces, which were predominantly Polish when the partition took place, might have been restored to Poland almost in their entirety, according to the strict law of historic retribution; but instead there have been left to Germany, in an effort to avoid even the appearance of injustice and despite Germany's brutal colonisation policy, all those districts on the west in which there is an undisputed German predominance contiguous to Germany.

Nevertheless, the frontiers have been carefully reconsidered, and certain modifications made in detail. In particular the historical frontier between Pomerania and West Prussia is to be reestablished.

EAST PRUSSIA.

Germany's refusal to accept the separation of East Prussia from the rest of Germany is met by the statement that East Prussia was so separated for many hundreds of years, has been always recognised in Germany as a German colony and not as an original German land. It was not actually included in the political frontiers of Germany until 1866, it is said. It is pointed out that Germany's objection to the holding of a

DANZIG.

The provisions as to Danzig stipulate that the city is to remain the character-be held in the position of a free city, as a humeatic city, at its own outside the frontiers of Germany. As the population is predominantly German, the city will not be incorporated in Poland, but it is essential that the relations between it and Poland should have the sole seaport available for her kept free from all foreign domination.

MEMEL.

The reply states that the cession of Memel does not conflict with the principle of nationalism, for while the city itself is in large part German, the district as a whole has always been Lithuanian.

UPPER SILESIA.

While Upper Silesia was not formerly part of the Kingdom of Poland, the majority of its population are Polish in origin and speech.

In deference to the German claims, however, the territory shall be immediately ceded to Poland, but a plebiscite shall be held in order to give the people of the territory a voice. The liquidation of German property there is to be safeguarded and Germany will be allowed to purchase mineral products, including coal, on the same terms as the Poles. German transferred to Poland are to be protected as to language, religion and education.

HELIGOLAND.

Provision is made for the protection of the interests of the people of Heligoland and of peaceful navigation and the fishing industry there, in accordance with Germany's demand. The harbor that is to be declared does not include that which is used by fishing vessels. The destruction will be solely to prevent the refortification of the island.

PART IV.

German Rights and Interests Outside Germany.

The reply states that no concessions can be made as to former German colonies and German rights outside of Europe. It is declared that the allied and associated Governments cannot "again abandon 12,000,000 or 14,000,000 persons to a fate from which the war has delivered them." Abuses which have attended German colonial civilization are said to have been admitted by German leaders, and it is felt necessary to guard the security of the colonies and the peace of the world against a military imperialism which sought to establish a basis for interference and intimidation in Europe by overseas powers.

The loss of the colonies will not hinder Germany's normal economic development, it is declared, it being asserted that in 1915 but one-half per cent. of Germany's Imports and one-half per cent. of her exports were with her own colonies. It is shown by experience, the reply says, that but a very small proportion of the excess German population would go to the German colonies. The principles of private right will apply to railroads and mines if Germany can prove their private ownership, with the exception of the case of Kiao-Chau.

The natives of the colonies, which will be administered under mandatories, will not bear any part of the German debt, and the Allies reserve full liberty to determine the conditions under which Germans may establish themselves in colonial regions. They ask that Germany agree in advance to humanitarian conventions as to the traffic in arms, spirits and the like.

PART V.

Military, Naval and Aerial Clauses.

The military terms were not drawn solely with a view of making it impossible for Germany to resume her policy of military aggression, but also as the first step toward the general limitation of armaments.

As the colossal growth in armaments in the past few decades was, it is asserted, forced upon Europe by Germany, it is regarded in the reply declared, that the process of limitation should begin with her. The Allies are willing, in the interest of general peace and the welfare of the German people, to allow Germany to keep her army on a reduced basis than stipulated in the original draft of the treaty.

Within three months she must have reduced her army to a maximum of 200,000 men, and at the end of that time months and every three months thereafter allow allied military experts to fix her military strength for the succeeding three months, the object being to reach the 100,000 stipulated in the original treaty as soon as possible and at least by March 31, 1920.

Fortresses situated in the neutral zone east of the Rhine, not occupied by the powers, will be dismantled in six months, and those in occupied territory will be dismantled when ordered by the allied high command.

The naval terms, while leaving Germany adequate naval forces for protection and police duty, must, the reply states, be accepted unconditionally, the details to be worked out by the Naval Commission after the Peace Treaty is signed. No financial measures are contemplated as regards the surrender of the warships, which must be unconditional.

SOCIALISTS AT WEIMAR CRUSH SOVIET PROPOSAL

Only One Vote Cast for Plan—Pensions to ex-Royalties Refused—Clash in Cabinet.

WEIMAR, June 16.—The majority Socialist Congress here has rejected a proposal for a Soviet constitution for Germany. The proposal received only one vote.

The Congress adopted a resolution declining to give pensions to members of former royal families.

BERLIN, June 14, (Associated Press.)—Food Minister Schmidt took issue with Herr Wissell, Minister for Social Policy, on the socialisation question at today's session of the Majority Socialist Party conference at Weimar. He said that it had not gone far or fast enough and termed coal socialisation a "very modest beginning and only a price regulation scheme."

In discussing Herr Wissell's plan to give industry in Germany 5,000,000,000 marks to support it, Herr Schmidt said that industry should be self-supporting and that a state monopoly should be the first of many acts of socialization. He scored Herr Wissell for the latter's criticism of the buying of foreign food and said sarcastically:

"Herr Wissell is afraid he is buying too much food. The problem is very sad."

The address of Herr Schmidt was an indication of disagreement in the Cabinet and of the existence of sentiment against Herr Wissell, who recently quarrelled with Bernhard Dernburg, Minister of Finance.

KUN NOT INVITED TO PARIS.

Blunder of British "Scribe" Blamed for Wrong Impression.

PARIS, June 16.—Inclusion in the telegram to Bela Kun, Foreign Minister of the Hungarian Soviet Government, ordering him to stop hostilities against the Czechs, of an announcement that the Council of Four was going to summon delegates of the Soviet Government to Paris, was due, says "Pertinax" in L'Echo de Paris, to a mistake. He says of the telegram, the full text of which has just been published, that the error was made by a "scribe" attached to the British Mission.

"The Council of Four never had any intention of inviting the Bela Kun adherents to Paris," he says, "but the person to question misunderstood the sense of the council's decision and caused all the trouble."

TO BE DELIVERED TOMORROW

Demand That New Nations Taken from Former Empire Share Reparation Burden.

PARIS, June 16, (Associated Press.)—The Council of Four will complete the missing clauses of the Austrian treaty tomorrow. These relate to military and naval conditions and finance.

They will be handed to Dr. Karl Renner on Wednesday.

A delegation of fourteen Austrians arrived at St. Germain today from Vienna to join the Peace Mission. The arrivals were Herr Muller-Martini, Herren Prazy, Bertiner, Werner, Krasiney, and Hammerseling, composing a financial mission, and several Ministerial Councilors and Secretaries.

PARIS, June 11.—The answer of Austria on the Peace Treaty with that power, it is anticipated by the French Foreign Office, will complain chiefly of the economic conditions and will make only one special objection so far as the boundary limits are concerned.

The feeling of the Austrian delegates is that they have been subjected to about the same treatment as that accorded Germany, when different conditions called for different treatment. In other words, they think that the Council of the four allied powers, pressed for time and worn out by the long efforts on the German treaty, contented itself with giving Austria not much more than a copy of the German treaty, regardless of the sharp differences in the situation of the two enemy countries.

So far as Continental Europe is concerned, Germany is still practically intact territorially, for the clipping off of the eastern and western boundaries takes only a small percentage of her square miles from her. It is far different with Austria. In her case the Allies are dealing with what is only the smallest remnant of what was the Austro-Hungarian Empire. The remnant must have economic power to live, and such power, according to her delegation, is not granted in the partial treaty already presented, and there is no assurance that it will be in the completed document.

The answer of the Allies to this will be that Austria, although greatly reduced in territory, will have no barrier to her economic development by means of relations with her neighbors. Austria does not see much comfort in that suggestion, as her neighbors for the most part are now States populated by races long subjected to the Hapsburg rule and now gloating over the downfall of that dynasty.

As for these very neighbors, Austria will also demand of the Conference that they be compelled to share her war indemnity payment, inasmuch as they were formerly part of the Dual Monarchy. Of course, Czechoslovakia, Jugoslavia, Italy, and Poland are all on the alert to fight that demand.

Perhaps the most embarrassing test of the Peace Conference's consistency will come with Austria's inevitable protest against the fact that she has been cut off altogether from an outlet to the sea. In view of the fact that all the allied statesmen at the Peace Conference are insistent that Poland could not exist without a seaport, and that they spent many weeks on the problem of giving her one, Austria may succeed in making a point of insisting that there be the same solicitude for her welfare that there was for that of Poland.

A request from Austria that is expected with reference to the frontier changes is that she receive Klagenfurt and the small strip of territory south of it instead of having her frontier run north of that city. She probably will ask that the River Drave be made her southern boundary.

REPLY TO GERMANS SATISFIES ENGLISH

Concessions Are Regarded as Not Sacrificing Any Essential Point in the Treaty.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, June 16.—The Allies' reply to the German counter-proposals is on the whole satisfactory to British opinion, excluding, of course, those extreme sections which for different reasons found fault with the peace terms as originally drawn up. The concessions which are made to Germany are regarded as not sacrificing any essential point, while at the same time they meet certain reasonable objections raised by the German delegates.

Stipulations regarding the future admission of the Germans to the League of Nations meet the views of most of the liberal minded Englishmen, who have faith in the infant league growing to potent maturity. Changes in the original terms regarding the eastern frontier are considered justified, on the ground invoked by the Allies' covering letter, namely, "To eliminate any possible injustice," and while the decision regarding Silesia is likely to revive the old controversy it is in the main believed to be the best possible solution of the difficult problem.

Much satisfaction is expressed that the Allies' reply should have emphasized the different relative positions of Germany and the Allies. The German reply to the peace proposals was held to be a clear indication that "post-war, post-revolution new Germany" was really the same old Germany with a thin veneer of democracy. It was an attempt to justify the old régime in every particular.

The reply of the associated powers, coupled with the arraignment of the Kaiser, clearly establishes the Allies' position that it is impossible to act as if Germany had recognized the error of its past ways, and at the same time, according to moderate views held here, does not go beyond the limits of a just though severe peace.

Government, that the time allowed in which to answer is rather short."

Secretary Dutasta replied that he would transmit this observation to the allied Governments.

After the brief conversation between M. Dutasta and Herr Simon the Germans returned to their apartment in the hotel, von Loersner carrying the documents under his arm in a green portfolio. Later Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau boarded a train for Weimar, taking the documents with him.

The provision for civil control of the territory on the left bank of the Rhine, which had been tentatively agreed upon, was eliminated from the final draft of the treaty. This omission, it is explained, was due to the fact that the provision in question is considered a supplementary convention between Germany and the allied and associated powers. It was not regarded as necessary, therefore, to include it in the treaty.

No Time for Printing Revised Treaty.

It was found that there was not time to complete the printing of the revised document. Therefore the Germans received one copy of the original treaty with the changes written in red ink. With this were handed the German plenipotentiaries ninety-nine other copies of the treaty upon which they can make the corrections themselves from the first.

It is generally believed that the Germans will ask for an extension of time in which to reply to the final peace conditions. The request, it is believed, will be based on the fact that they received only one revised copy of the treaty.

The copy received by the Germans was in French and English and must be translated and printed before it is placed before the German National Assembly at Weimar. It is expected that the translation and printing will take at least twenty-four hours.

At this morning's session of the Council of Five the documents to be handed the Germans were gone over in detail. The session was attended by the Revision Commission, which had completed its work earlier.

Foch and Bliss at Council Meeting.

Marshal Foch, General Bliss, and other military leaders attended the meeting of the Council of Five today. The meeting developed the nature of a general windup of the German situation, various phases of last-hour moves and possibilities being discussed. Some members of the Reparation Commission also met with the Council.

The Allies have promised Germany to deliver within one month a list of persons whom they intend to try for the responsibility for the war and violation of the laws of war.

Premier Clemenceau, at the meeting of the Cabinet today, informed it concerning the revised terms of the Allies' reply to the German counterproposals.

SAYS THE ALLIES HAVE YIELDED VITAL POINTS

Le Matin Predicts Grave Consequences from Admission of Germany to the League.

By CHARLES A. SELDEN.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, June 16.—The official notion that there are no vital changes in the revised treaty, with its long supplementary note of explanation, which is to be handed to the Germans tomorrow, is not accepted by Le Matin. It is not a simple reaction, says this now strongly anti-Clemenceau journal, that Germany is to be admitted to the League of Nations in the near future, thus gaining an equal footing with the Allies on moral, military, and economic grounds. Neither is it a slight modification, in the opinion of Le Matin, to allow Germany to decide the methods by which she will pay her debts, nor a slight concession to permit a plebiscite in Upper Silesia.

"We shall see in the future," continues the writer, "the consequences of this policy, by which the Allies stultify themselves and encourage German resistance. If the treaty in its new form is what we fear, Germany will no doubt sign it within the five days allowed, and the Council of Five now expects this as a matter of course.

"But signing is a small matter if a diplomatic instrument, already feeble, is weakened still more to such a point that our enemies may by various methods escape the consequences of their defeat. When they see that after several weeks of deplorable intrigue the Allies—even those who had sworn to be firm—have yielded, who can doubt that they will continue tenaciously to follow up their revenge upon us by all means?

"If they can score a success on the left bank of the Rhine, if they can by discussions which we invite raise the question as to the payment of their debts, if they can under cover of the League of Nations resume their world commerce without any restrictions; if they finally can nourish the hope of crushing Poland, even before that State is established; if they can do all these things, we fear that the months to come will bring with them a terrible accusation against the work of the council."

P. B. NOYES FOR TREATY POST.

Named on Temporary Economic Commission for Occupied Area.

By RICHARD V. OULAHAN.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, June 15.—P. B. Noyes of New York and Oneida, formerly assistant to Dr. Harry Garfield, Fuel Administrator, has been selected as American member of the allied temporary Economic Commission which will carry out the terms of the treaty in the occupied area of Germany. It is expected that Mr. Noyes will retain his membership when the commission is made permanent.

Bernard Baruch is being urged by the American Peace Commission to become the American member of the Allied Reparations Commission, which is empowered by the treaty to fix the amount of German pecuniary indemnity and supervise the German observance of the financial terms of the treaty. If he accepts, Mr. Baruch will be obliged to reside in Europe. His work on the various economic and financial bodies connected with the peace negotiations has been highly gratifying to the American Commission.

EXTRA PRECAUTIONS TAKEN

Strike of Carters and Carriers Ties Up Newspapers in Berlin and Other Large Cities.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, June 15, (via Copenhagen.)—Today not a single newspaper was sold or delivered in all Berlin, although some had prepared a Sunday edition as usual. The carters and carriers absolutely refused unless paid an extra bonus of 500 to 1,000 marks, on account of the high cost of living, to grant which would ruin many and cripple all newspapers.

In Munich and several other cities similar strikes are in progress, but neither there nor in Berlin have the stereotypers and compositors joined, though in most cases they are compelled to suspend work for obvious reasons. On the contrary, the more intelligent class of workmen in the newspaper industry dislike everything to prevent the strike and now are honestly endeavoring to bring about some compromise, though so far they have been unsuccessful.

The striking employes nearly all belong to the Independent Socialists and Communist parties, among the rank and file of which unrest is daily increasing and growing beyond the control of the leaders, who refused to consent to the present strike.

All day yesterday strike delegates went to the large factories and other industrial establishments to induce employes to join, but with a few insignificant exceptions were unsuccessful. Efforts to have a general strike declared are being renewed today, but as yet the regular Socialists have the upper hand. The question is, will they withstand the fanatical minority long enough till the present spirit of revolt has vanished.

The authorities have reliable information that though Rosa Luxemburg's funeral passed without riots the masses can hardly be held down by the leaders and a revolutionary outbreak may be expected at any time. All necessary military precautions have been taken, which was all the more difficult as many other cities are confronted with the same menace, it having become quite clear that this time a rising is planned all over Germany simultaneously.

It is difficult to understand this revolutionary fever, which originally was hatched by the official leaders of the Independent Socialists, and was to mature the moment the present Government should reject the Versailles treaty. But it has since dawned on Haase, Dittmann, and their friends that to form a new Government to sign the treaty will not only be foolish, but impossible, because a few hundred thousand fanatics in Berlin and other large cities who would support such action cannot be expected to prevail against the overwhelming majority of the German people and the voluntary army, whose sworn enemy are the Independents. Still the ball has been set rolling and Haase and Dittmann are powerless to call off their dogs. So another sanguinary upheaval must be expected when the treaty is rejected, or at any time.

The military measures taken by the Entente occupation forces and the turn of events on the eastern frontier will then probably decide whether Germany shall be delivered to chaos.

According to the latest information from Weimar, the hope of an acceptance is slighter than ever, and indeed most business men here are prepared for a rejection. The Independent leaders are growing extremely nervous the nearer the day of the decision approaches. They are constantly distributing handbills warning strikers and their sympathizers not to commit any violent acts, and not to permit themselves to be provoked, as that would only please the militarists.

Nevertheless there were some slight shooting affrays in various districts last night, any one of which in this electrically charged atmosphere might lead to a general explosion. Ledebour, whose trial is still continuing, has asked sympathizers not to make any attempt at liberation for fear they might hasten that fatal explosion. But where there is so much explosive material hived as in Berlin the most precautions measures may fail.

That is why—so at least say the reactionaries and independents—the Government has retired to Weimar, where their decision of acceptance or rejection cannot be influenced by bombs and hand-grenades.

BRITAIN TO GET MOST OF SURRENDERED SHIPS

Vessels Seized in Our Ports to be Retained by United States, It Is Said.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—It was stated in official circles here today that as a result of the agreement reached on shipping in Europe, Great Britain would get the bulk of the German tonnage which was laid in German ports and surrendered when the armistice was signed. These vessels include the Imperator, which has been in use in bringing back American troops. France will get from 300,000 to 400,000 tons of this shipping. Italy will get Austrian tonnage.

The United States, it is stated on high authority, will, as its share, retain the 700,000 tons of German shipping, including the Leviathan, which were interned in American ports during the war and were seized by this country when the United States declared war on Germany.

SUBWAY LINE OPENS FEB. 1.

Branch to Operate from Atlantic Avenue to Utica Avenue.

That part of the final system of rapid transit between the Atlantic Avenue terminal in Brooklyn, and Utica Avenue on the Eastern Parkway subway will be ready for operation about Feb. 1. This announcement was made yesterday by Frank Hedley, Vice President and General Manager of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, during a hearing before Public Service Commissioner Lewis Nixon.

During the hearing there was some discussion about the proposed construction of a passageway at the Atlantic Avenue station for the accommodation of those using the trains of the Long Island Railroad Company. This matter went over for future consideration.

ALLIES CHAGRINED BY POLITICS HERE

"Mystified Despair" Said to Possess Average Englishman Over Recent Developments.

FRENCH EQUALLY PUZZLED

Paris Writer Says Efforts Here to Diminish President's Prestige Weakens That of Nation.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, June 15.—"Mystified despair" is the mood in which, according to The Observer, the average Englishman has been watching recent developments in Anglo-American relations.

He is quite unconscious of having given offense and is anxious from the bottom of his heart to continue full and friendly co-operation with the people and Government of the United States. But he has seen his country caught up, he knows not how or why, in manoeuvres of American politics. However, The Observer refuses to take a gloomy view of the situation. It says:

"It is not so much Great Britain that is being struck at as Great Britain which to strike at Wilson. One must remember that the war and the scheme of the League of Nations have propounded questions that probe the very foundations of American policy, that the President has not, perhaps, done all that was possible to prepare the atmosphere for their discussion, and that nothing like a unanimous answer can be expected to them."

So it argues:

"Nine-tenths of what seems to be hostility toward Great Britain is in reality the repercussion of American party politics upon the international situation and of the international situation upon American party politics. It signifies nothing deep or permanent. But the remaining one-tenth is serious. Ireland again blocks the way, and until the Irish question is settled it will be hopeless to expect that completeness of association between Great Britain and the United States which the great majority of people in both countries desire."

The Sunday Times also declares that unless it regards it as a purely political manoeuvre it is at a loss to fathom how and why American resentment has arisen. It emphasizes the fact that a "compl. . Anglo-Saxon understanding and bond of union" is our essential of world peace," and says:

"It is lamentably unfortunate for both countries that there is no Bryce or Reading at Washington to inform us as to the source of misunderstandings or misconceptions.

"The Sunday Times political correspondent, however, suggests an explanation as to why the appointment to the Washington embassy is long delayed. He says:

"'Lloyd George's view is that with President Wilson and Lansing in direct association with him and Balfour in Paris there is no actual need that we should be represented for the time being in Washington, and that the appointment can, therefore, wait. Unfortunately, that view does not take full account of the services that an Ambassador can render to his country, nor of the danger of offending the amour-propre of the American people.'

"The latter is a very real consideration, for we cannot expect the average politician on either side to understand the inwardness of the delay. He only notes its length and puts a sinister interpretation on it."

French Grieved at Our Senators.

By RICHARD V. OULAHAN.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, June 15.—In the Journal des Débats this evening, Georges le Chartier, who resided in America for years as Washington correspondent of the Petit Parisien, expresses amazement over the Republican Senators' attitude toward the Peace Treaty, and indulges in a scathing arraignment of their course. The article covers several columns.

Le Chartier, who evidently has great admiration for Senator Lodge, expresses sorrow that he and other Republican leaders are walking the path which leads away from the aspirations of France and the Allies. He asserts that the Republican aim is obvious—it is to diminish or efface President Wilson's prestige and to assure the defeat of the Democrats at the next election.

"To achieve this end," he says, "means not always praiseworthy were brought to bear. But it was overlooked—for we cannot believe the fact was discounted—that the person of the President for us foreigners must represent the American people, and to diminish his prestige is to weaken in our eyes the prestige of America."

"Good use was also made of the embarrassment of relations and cooling of friendship between our two nations, which resulted, temporarily at least, from evil propaganda. We witnessed with sorrow the singular campaign conducted from Washington in our own too hospitable press by a correspondent notoriously allied with the Republican Party. It is with a certain shame that we have heard in our drawing rooms Frenchmen echoing the proposals they claimed to have received from their American Republican friends, which attacked the President in his person, his habits and the individuals surrounding him."

Le Chartier asks:

"If the Republican Party of America, with Germany, refuses to sign the Allies' Peace Treaty, is that party determined henceforth to sacrifice all the interests of the Allies and those of the whole world to its own interests?"

The reference to the correspondent allied with the Republican Party is evidently meant to apply to Judson Welliver, Washington representative of the Echo de Paris.

Le Chartier accuses the Republican Party of taking up the Irish question because the President seemed to show indifference to it, and because Ireland is a political force in the United States. The writer enumerates what he understands to be the basic features of the Republican campaign against the President, mentioning the paralysis of American internal affairs, on account of the President's long absence, as one allegation. Le Chartier concludes that the adoption by the Senate of the Knox resolution would compel the United States to make a separate peace with Germany.

Comment on Knox Resolution Meagre.

French comment on the Knox resolution is exceedingly meagre, the editorial writers evidently feeling themselves insufficiently familiar with internal American politics to criticise the subject properly. Such comment as has appeared has reflected French anxiety that anything might retard peace.

Even the Echo de Paris, which opposed the combination of the League of Nations with the Peace Treaty, and indeed would have preferred the substitution of an old-fashioned alliance to the whole scheme of the League, has until today confined its remarks to European matters, although its cables from Washington have throughout the conference been more detailed and informative than the best of the French newspapers, and have often—especially in the early days of the conference—provided materials for Pertinax's slashing criticisms.

Today, however, that writer does discuss the Knox resolution, being careful—after a short exposé of the resolutions points—to preface his own remarks with the statement: "It is difficult for us at this distance to realise exactly what the Senate Republicans want." He decides that some Republican leaders evidently wish America to withdraw from European affairs, while others appear to support the Echo's own idea of preferring an alliance to the League of Nations. He continues:

"The Republican Senators seem to think their vote can lead the conference to put all its work back again on the table. But as the treaty project will be in the hands of the Germans by the time the vote is taken they will be confronted by fact accomplished. It is therefore only over ratification that the real battle will begin. The dissatisfaction of the Senate if expressed then could only precipitate the abstention of America—and indirectly of England—from the affairs of our continent."

Pertinax then concludes with somewhat ambiguous criticism, presumably addressed to the conference—in view of his own previous statements on the subject—rather than to the Republican Senators. He says simply:

"A bad direction has been taken. It will need changes of persons and much time and patience to correct the initial error."

POLISH TROOP TRAINS START HOMEWARD AGAIN

Germany Obeys Foch's Order Against Detaining Them—Soldiers Angered by Delay.

COBLENZ, June 15, (Associated Press.)—The Polish troops which were halted recently on their way across Germany by an order from Berlin, began moving eastward again today, in accordance with the demands made upon the German Government on Friday by Marshal Foch on behalf of the Allies.

Reports received here last night said that a threatened food shortage among eight troop trains, halted at various points in Germany, had been causing trouble in the ranks of the traveling soldiers. Each of the trains carries about 500 soldiers and sufficient food for a ten-day trip. Up to last night the trains had been held up three days.

At Giessen, east of Coblenz, where one train halted, it is reported, a number of desertions already had taken place and the Polish and allied officers with the train were compelled to take extreme measures to prevent further desertions. The soldiers were disgruntled over the delay and the possibility of soon being without food. Trains held at Treves and Coblenz, in the American area, were sent last night to Ems, in the French area of occupation.

The reason for the holding up of the trains as given by Mathias Erzberger of the German Armistice Commission, was that the Poles intended distributing two divisions of General Haller's troops along the German-Polish frontier, which, he continued, was in violation of the terms of the armistice.

LONDON, June 16.—The transportation of American foodstuffs to Poland by way of Danzig is at a standstill, according to a wireless dispatch from Berlin today, because the Danzig Railway Administration refuses to supply additional cars on the ground that the Polish Railway Administration has not fulfilled treaty conditions regarding the return of empty cars.

Eight large steamers with cargoes of flour and corn, it is said, are waiting at Danzig to be unloaded.

JUGOSLAVIA MENACED BY ITALIAN TROOPS

March Toward Frontier to Counteract Jugoslav Operations in Klagenfurt Region.

ROME, June 16.—Italian forces are advancing on the Villach-Sanvito line, on the frontier between Italy and Jugoslavia, it is announced.

This movement is intended to counteract the operations of the Jugoslavs in the Klagenfurt region, in the Austrian province of Carinthia, where they attacked the German-Austrians, it is said, without "plausible reasons," and only because they "wished to take possession of Klagenfurt despite the decision of the Peace Conference."

The region of Klagenfurt was, according to a decision reached at Paris, to be a neutral zone and the population was to decide its own fate by a plebiscite. The semi-official explanation of the Italian advance says:

"The Jugoslavs wished to occupy Klagenfurt to influence by force the self-determination of the people, and, besides, intended to control all railway communications between Trieste and the hinterland. They succeeded in this last design, with the exception of the line to Villach, which is now in the hands of the Italians."

available parliamentary practice to obtain a vote on the resolution. Administration followers, while denying that they will filibuster, hope to talk the resolution to death. If the League opponents find the way blocked by such tactics, they may attempt to invoke the closure rule to shut off debate, but there seems little chance of success, as a two-thirds vote is required. As a last step, the League opponents are discussing the signing of a round robin protesting against the union of the Peace Treaty and the covenant. They are confident that they can obtain the signatures of more than a third of the Senators.

No attempt to obtain a vote or circulate a petition will be made before Friday, it is understood, as Senator Lodge is to speak at Harvard Thursday.

Senator John Sharp Williams, Democrat, during a debate in the Senate today, interrupted proceedings long enough to challenge the Republicans to submit the League covenant to a vote of the people. He charged that the Republicans had been making a partisan issue of the League. There was no reply. The Republicans assert that they are willing to submit the League of Nations to the people, but cannot see how such a vote could be taken at this time.

As an aftermath of the publication of the text of the treaty of peace in defiance of the President, Frank L. Polk, acting Secretary of State, sent this message to the Secretary of the Senate today:

"Department of State, June 14, 1919.

"In the absence of the President and the Secretary of State, and by the President's direction, the undersigned, acting Secretary of State, presents his compliments to the Honorable Secretary of the Senate, and in response to Senate resolution of June 6 advises that the President states that he would, of course, be very glad to communicate to the Senate the full text of the treaty if that text were complete, which is not the case. The acting Secretary of State advises further that the President states that the treaty is now in process of negotiation; that many points of great moment are under consideration; that the text will, of course, not be complete until it is finally ready for signature, and he, (the President,) feels that it would not be in the public interest to communicate officially to the Senate a text which is provisional and not definite, and he finds no precedent for such a procedure.

"(Signed) FRANK L. POLK."

Senate May Take Recesses.

WASHINGTON, June 16, (Associated Press.)—Announcement today that the President would tour the country served to revive rumors at the Capitol that opponents of the League of Nations might force the Senate into three-day recesses, so that they could go to the country at the same time that the President is speaking. It was said the subject might be considered formally at a conference after Senator Lodge, the Republican leader, returned to Washington late this week.

A tentative itinerary for the President's speaking trip has been completed by Secretary Tumulty, but will not be made public until Mr. Wilson has approved it. It is expected that the tour will carry him into the Far West and that he will devote most attention to Western States where League opposition has gained the greatest headway.

As nearly as officials here can predict, Mr. Wilson will reach Washington about July 1, will lay the treaty formally before the Senate, and then, possibly on Independence Day, will begin a swing around the circle that will eclipse in extent and in spirit all his previous direct appeals to the people.

The new chapter of the fight to be written around the Knox resolution occupied leaders most of the day while the Senate was working on appropriations. There were many conferences and several Senators were absent preparing addresses.

Senator Knox was uncertain tonight whether he would attempt to bring the resolution technically before the Senate tomorrow, but he expects to speak at length in its favor, regardless of the parliamentary situation.

Opposition Senators generally declined today to make any comment on the Executive's plan of campaign. The message, declining to send the treaty text, also was received in silence when read to the Senate, but Senator Johnson, Republican, of California, who introduced the resolution making the request, is expected to make the President's action the subject of a Senate speech within a few days.

The President today cabled his appreciation of recent addresses of Senator Walsh of Montana and Robinson of Arkansas, supporting the League of Nations. His message, sent to Secretary Tumulty, said:

"Please say to Senators Walsh of Montana and Robinson of Arkansas how much I appreciate their recent speeches and how fairly I believe that they have rendered the country a great service in supporting the policies which are absolutely necessary to give the United States its proper standing and influence in the world."

Can your family run your business?

"Do the members of my family now know enough about handling my affairs to warrant my stepping aside and leaving everything in their hands?"

"Will they know any better when I am gone, and cannot advise them?"

THESE direct questions make many men uncomfortable. The average successful man believes that if he lost his fortune today, he could, within reasonable time, make another. He is very far from sure, however, that, if his family lose the fortune he leaves them, they would be equally able to make another.

In most cases he knows that they could not. The family which is best provided for by its active head during his lifetime, is often least fitted to provide for itself, if the family estate becomes depleted in value.

Suppose you check the possible pitfalls for your heirs by considering the following list of everyday business errors common to the average household and serious when applied to larger affairs. Then see if the solution below does not interest you.

everyday business errors

1. Neglecting to get receipts when bills are paid in cash.
2. Neglecting to keep receipts where they can be located.
3. Neglecting to check up items in current bills.
4. Inability to keep checkbook balanced.
5. Too easy optimism in starting credit accounts.
6. Careless handling of valuable business papers.
7. Signing documents without knowing their contents.
8. Tendency to establish living expenses which would exceed income and eat into savings.
9. Tendency to invest money on dangerous hearsay—without proper knowledge of facts.

A sound solution to the problem is the appointment of the Mercantile Trust Company as your executor and trustee—now, during your lifetime, if you so desire.

A portion of your estate, only, can be entrusted to the Mercantile if you prefer, so that you can watch its management and terminate the arrangement at will during your life.

Remember that in every case a Mercantile trusteeship has the benefit of the services of the TRUST COMMITTEE. This Committee consists of three members of the Board of Directors, elected by the Board acting as a whole. They are chosen for their special knowledge of, and active connection with, investment matters. With them the President also serves in an ex-officio capacity. Every transaction involving trust investments is passed upon by the TRUST COMMITTEE.

We will be glad to explain the details of a Mercantile trusteeship to you.

HYDROGEN PEROXIDE, LIME-WATER AND OXYGEN

And what they will do for your teeth

Everyone knows that peroxide of hydrogen is a valuable aid in whitening and helping preserve the tooth-enamel.

Everyone knows that lime-water is valuable as a preventive of acid-stomach and acid-mouth conditions.

Everyone knows that OXYGEN is the harmless and beneficial gas in Nature, and that without oxygen in the air we would die.

But everyone does not know that these three valuable substances are a part of McK & R Calox Tooth Powder.

In contact with water or the mouth-fluids McK & R Calox forms fresh, active peroxide of hydrogen, in just sufficient quantities to gradually whiten the teeth. This peroxide, in contact with decaying matter, releases pure, refreshing oxygen gas. Oxygen, which is so beneficial to the teeth and so refreshing to human beings, is a sure finish to the dangerous germs of tooth decay.

Part of McK & R Calox Tooth Powder turns to lime-water in the mouth and counteracts local acid conditions which cause much of tooth-decline.

McK & R Calox tastes better than any dentifrice you ever tried—no "druggy" flavor. Being a powder it "takes hold" in a pleasing way. Try it for ten days and watch your teeth whiten. Twice a year at your dentist's and twice a day with McK & R Calox spells safety.

ARRANGEMENT WITH CARRANZA

Administration Explains That Routing Villistas Is Not an Unfriendly Act.

HAS BEEN DONE BEFORE

No Contingency Neglected, However, and Airplanes Ordered to Border for Observation.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—The American troops sent across the Mexican border operated under instructions to disperse the Villistas but on no account to undertake an invasion of Mexico. That this was the attitude of the Government was definitely asserted in formal statements issued late this afternoon by the ranking officials of the State and War Departments.

Secretary Baker made two statements. In the first he declared his belief that "there is no possibility of a misunderstanding," between Mexico and the United States. Later he declared that the American Army force had been sent across the border "to disperse" the Villista "bandits" and that the force "will be immediately withdrawn to the American side as soon as this object is accomplished."

William Phillips, Acting Secretary of State, declared the use of American troops "should not be considered as unfriendly to the Mexican Government"; that the American commander sent his troops across to "drive the rebels away" and that they would be withdrawn after this object had been accomplished.

The position of the Government was explained to General Candido Aguilar, now in Washington on a special mission from President Carranza, and to Chargé d'Affaires Rojo of the Mexican Embassy. Information as to the attitude of President Carranza is being awaited. In the past he has protested any crossing of this character. It is believed in some well-informed diplomatic circles here that he will lodge a protest with the United States Government against this entrance by American troops into Mexico, although it is considered probable that General Aguilar had some knowledge in advance of the action this Government would take in such a contingency as that at Juarez.

Prepared for Contingencies.

While it is not anticipated, according to high officials, that there will be any disturbance of relations between the American and Carranza Governments the War Department has been very active and is ready to meet any contingency. It will be prepared to back up General Cabell with any reinforcements he may consider necessary.

Orders have been given by the War Department for trebling the army air force on the Mexican border. On the heels of these instructions from the Chief of Staff, Major General Charles T. Menoher, Director of the Air Service, late this afternoon issued orders to send three flights of six planes each, a total of eighten planes, to Fort Bliss.

These flights probably will not be formed into a squadron on account of the large area to be patrolled, as it will require separate bases for operation. The flights were ordered to move from Kelly Field, (San Antonio,) and Ellington Field, (Houston,) Texas at the earliest possible moment. They will be equipped with De Haviland Liberty planes.

In the matter of personnel it developed that the 12th Aero Squadron would arrive at New York tomorrow from Brest, Brig. Gen. William Mitchell, Chief of Training and Operations of the Air Service, requested orders from Major Gen. Charles T. Menoher, Director of Air Service, to have the 12th Aero Squadron ordered intact, upon arrival, to El Paso. The personnel served throughout the Château-Thierry-St. Mihiel and Argonne offensives.

Owing to the demobilization order having been issued, preparations were under way at the Southern flying fields to release most of their men by June 25. This made it impossible, it was learned, to provide sufficient personnel for the border flight service. It was at first thought to call for volunteers to make up the required number—about 150 men. Then it was learned that the 12th Observation Squadron was due to arrive at Mineola, L. I., Tuesday, and orders were issued to have the 12th Squadron dispersed at once to the Mexican border for duty. Colonel L. H. Brereton, who commanded the 12th Squadron in France, will command on the border.

President Fully Informed.

President Wilson has been fully advised regarding developments in the Mexican situation, and the use of troops was under general orders to Major Gen. Cabell, commanding the Southern Department, which had the sanction of the President. Authority was given to General Cabell by the War Department on June 12 to order troops across the border to disperse Villistas, in certain contingencies, but it was made plain that he was not to undertake any invasion of Mexico. The contingencies covered by his orders having arisen, Brig. Gen. Erwin acted promptly in sending American forces into Juarez and in ordering cavalry regiments to go beyond Juarez in pursuit of the Villistas.

Fear is expressed in some quarters that the Villistas, grasping the significance of this situation, may resort to attacks on American lives and property in sections of Northern Mexico, and that the situation may, in this respect, duplicate that which followed the decision of the American Government several years ago to permit Carranza's troops to travel through the United States, armed, to reinforce the garrison of an Arizona border town which was being attacked by Villistas. The raid on Columbus, N. M., followed very soon.

State Department Statements.

This formal statement was given out at the State Department late in the afternoon:

"The Acting Secretary of State, Mr. Phillips, stated this afternoon that the dispatch of troops across the border into the City of Juarez should not be considered in any manner as unfriendly to the Mexican Government, but was made necessary solely by the fact that the rebel forces had occupied such positions in and about Juarez that their shots crossed the border into American territory and endangered the lives of American citizens. After suffering the effects of this fire, in which several persons on the American side of the border were wounded, the American commander moved his troops across the line in order to drive the rebels away, and for no other purpose, whatsoever.

"Mr. Phillips further said the American troops would be withdrawn immediately after this object had been obtained and that this had been explained to General Aguilar, now in Washington on special mission from President Carranza, and to Mr. Rojo, the Charge d'Affaires of the Mexican Embassy."

The State Department had previously given out this statement:

"In the fighting at Juarez the Carranza forces, according to one of their leaders, killed Villa's secretary, Jesus Trillo, and secured some Villa correspondence, according to an El Paso dispatch to the State Department today. This dispatch, made public by Acting Secretary Phillips, reporting on the resumption of the fighting yesterday morning, quoted a Carranza leader as claiming that the Federal forces killed 87 Villistas, wounded 4, and took 40 prisoners, the Carranzista losses being 7 killed and 23 wounded. The dispatch

Study German Telescoping Tower.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—A German military observation tower of unique design has been sent to Frankfort Arsenal for study by experts. Composed principally of steel tubing about 18 inches in diameter, the tower has a height of 90 feet when fully extended, but telescopes into a section which is easily carried on an army truck. The observer, protected by a shield, sits comfortably at the base and views the terrain through a series of lenses and mirrors.

Secretary Baker's Statements.

The first of the two statements issued by Secretary Baker read:

"There is no possibility of a misunderstanding between the Republic of Mexico and the United States with regard to the protection of life on the American side. In many instances previously it has been necessary for the American forces very briefly to cross the border to disperse bandit forces. The sole purpose of the American soldier is to protect life on the American side."

Later in the afternoon Mr. Baker issued this supplementary statement:

"Our dispatches from Mexico show that as the result of the fight between the Federal forces and the Villistas wounded soldiers of the Republic of Mexico were brought to the American side, and are being cared for in our military hospitals. Refugees from Juarez are being received and cared for. When firing from the Villistas wounded persons in El Paso an American force crossed the border to disperse these bandits. The force will be immediately withdrawn to the American side of the border as soon as this object is accomplished. This does not mean any invasion or occupation of Mexico, but merely the protection of lives and property of persons on the American side of the line. The matter has, of course, been fully explained to the authorities, civil and military, of the Republic of Mexico."

UNEASY IN SENATE OVER INTERVENTION

Fall Fears Villistas in Revenge Will Murder Americans in Mexico.

SUGGESTS POLICING POLICY

King to Press for Settlement of American Claims—Gould in House Attacks Administration.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Discussion of Mexican affairs was evoked today in both Houses of Congress by the crossing of the Rio Grande by American troops.

The subject was brought up in the Senate by Senator Watson, Republican, of Indiana, who asked whether the sending of troops into Mexico amounted to an invasion of that country, and whether it was ordered by the President or by the War Department.

"If our troops were sent in to protect American citizens and property, I thank God and welcome it," said Senator Fall. "If that was the purpose of invading Mexico, I congratulate the War Department. If the purpose was to protect the Carranza garrison in Juarez, then there is no defense for the War Department."

Senator Pomerene interrupted to state that he was advised by Secretary Baker that the American objective was protection of Americans from firing by the Villistas.

Americans in Jeopardy.

Senator Fall read a telegram from R. M. Dudley, State Senator of El Paso, Texas, stating that the American movement was in aid of Carranza and placed in jeopardy every American in Mexico.

President Carranza was unable to protect Americans in Mexico and charged that Secretary Lansing's statement had been suppressed at the American press at the request of Secretary Lansing.

Senator King of Utah announced tonight that he would offer again in the Senate a resolution he introduced some time ago calling upon the State Department for information as to the number of Americans killed in Mexico since the Diaz regime and the damage to American property. Under his resolution a joint commission comprising Representatives of the United States and Mexico would be created to adjust claims of Americans whose property had been destroyed or confiscated.

Senator King said he understood that approximately $1,000,000,000 of property of American citizens had been confiscated by Mexicans, while of this property approximately $200,000,000 in value had been destroyed. Since the passing of the Diaz regime, he said, he understood that between 3,000 and 4,000 foreigners, many of them Americans, had been killed in Mexico.

In debate in the Senate Senator Fall said:

"If we have gone across the river to protect the Carranza Government against the attacks of Villista forces, or if such action has the effect of protecting the Carranza garrison of Juarez against the attacks of the Villista forces, just as surely as the sun rises in the east, American property and American lives will suffer in Mexico unless our troops proceed to police Mexico and protect our citizens and our property.

"If we have finally sent our troops into Mexico to protect the lives and property of American citizens, it is exactly what we should do. I welcome it, if that is the reason for which our troops are sent there."

Approval of Intervention.

House Republicans generally approved the course of the Administration in sending troops across the Mexican border at Juarez. Very few of them wished to comment upon the move, which was accepted as a proper military measure. There was no excitement occasioned by the sudden march of American soldiers across the border into Juarez, and the hope was expressed by several members that the present expedition was the forerunner of a determined effort on the part of the Administration to compel the Mexican Government to respect American lives and American capital invested in that republic.

In the House Representative N. J. Gould of New York, who has been giving special attention to Mexican matters, attacked the Administration's policy in Mexico and declared that the Carranza Government was being permitted to "loot and murder" Americans with impunity.

"Our people have been killed in Mexico from 1910 to September, 1916. Not a single effective protest has been made by the Administration calling upon the State Department for facts as to the Mexican policy and what course of action is being pursued toward forcing Mexico to pay indemnities, but at the request of Republican leader Mondell did not present.

After calling attention to the fact that the military move to protect El Paso had been made "without the advice or consent of the constitutional war-making authority, the Congress of the United States," Mr. Gould said in part:

"Such activities constitute a taste of offensive military alliance between the United States and Mexico of which I, as one member of the Congress of the United States, have not been apprised."

were returning toward the river near Ysleta, preparatory to recrossing to the United Sttes. Colonel S. R. H. Tompkins, commanding the 2d Cavalry Brigade, sent a wireless to military headquarters at 2 o'clock this afternoon saying he was reassembling his columns.

Withdrawal of Americans.

Major Gen. De Rosey C. Cabell, commander of the Southern Department, arrived here from Fort Sam Houston early in the day and immediately went into conference with Brig. Gen. James Erwin, commander of the El Paso border. General Cabell later crossed the International Bridge for a conference with General Francisco Gonzales, supreme commander of the Juarez troops.

As a result of this conference General Cabell agreed to withdrew the American troops as soon as he could get them together. General Gonzales asked the American commander if he could not have the infantry withdrawn by 10:30 A. M., which request was granted, and orders were given by General Cabell for the immediate withdrawal of the colored infantry then in the town.

At 10:45 A. M., the 24th Infantry started marching across the international bridge from Juarez, and by 11 o'clock the entire command was back on American soil after having spent exactly eleven hours on Mexican soil.

General Gonzales requested General Cabell to make it known through The Associated Press to the people of the United States that General Gonzales had not requested assistance from the United States in handling the situation.

"I told General Gonzales that there was no idea of invading Mexican sovereignty and that the infantry would withdraw as soon as possible," General Cabell announced, following the interview.

Orders issued at the district headquarters for the operation of American troops in Mexico read as follows:

"In the absence of any important reasons to the contrary you will withdraw your entire command and recross the border to the United States at noon today."

Upon his return to military headquarters here, General Cabell announced that he had ordered one battalion of four mountain cannon to El Paso from Camp Stanley, Texas, for the use of the American artillery commander at Fort Bliss, should these mountain guns be needed against the Villa forces. He also confirmed the ordering of six companies of the 19th Infantry from Douglas, Ariz., to El Paso.

The American troops, 3,600 strong, including infantry, cavalry, and artillery, crossed the border to Juarez at 11 o'clock last night. Brig. Gen. Erwin announced that he took this action in order to prevent the indiscriminate firing into El Paso by rebel soldiers, endangering the lives of Americans.

"But on no account were they to undertake an invasion into Mexico," General Erwin continued. "As soon as the Villistas have been dispersed and the safety of the citizens of El Paso has been assured, the troops of my command will be withdrawn to the American side of the border."

The Early Morning Battle.

The American troops engaged the rebel forces at the Juarez race track shortly after 2 o'clock in the morning and were victorious. Villa's troops were driven from the race track by rifle and machine gun fire. Many prisoners were reported taken by the United States Cavalry, which took up positions east and southeast of the race track.

After the Mexican Federals had retired into Juarez, Colonel Hadsell's colored infantry opened a terrific rifle fire on the trenches flanking the race track. They advanced in open order and dislodged the Villa forces, who held the stronger position, as the colored troops were forced to advance across a comparatively open plain. The first volleys from the riflemen were answered, shot for shot, by the Villa troops, who seemed to realize they were trapped by the cavalry in the rear and the infantry in front.

American machine guns stacked sputtering from adobe houses near the race-track. The preponderance of rifle fire was soon with the American forces. The preliminary artillery preparation having been completed, the shrapnel guns became silent as the rifles took up the work. The explosion of Mauser and American cartridges could be plainly distinguished from military headquarters in the Mills Building in El Paso, where General Erwin was an interested spectator from his tenth-story window.

As the American cavalry manoeuvred over the Juarez plain their positions were marked by green rocket flares and were answered by similar star shells from the top of the Mills Building. At 2:30 the rifle firing had died down, indicating that the Villa forces were defeated and were being pursued by the United States cavalry.

Assurances to Gonzales.

General Gonzales was assured by Lieutenant Cox, aid de camp to General Erwin, that he would have every consideration and was handed a sealed communication from General Erwin, believed to express these same sentiments.

"This is a matter for my superior officers and for my President to consider," General Gonzales said at Fort Hidalgo. "I am not in position to impose my own views upon the situation, although I did not and do not yet think the crossing of the American forces was necessary for the defeat of the Villa forces, as my forces defended the town most bravely."

At the fort it was announced that the seventy Villa prisoners had been taken south with General Gonzales's column and that eight of the officers of Villa's command made prisoners had been executed. It was also stated by Major Hernandes that the body of Manuel Castro, a Villa general, had been found in the trenches east of town.

The number of Villa rebels killed during the engagement was placed at 200 by the Federals, while seventy were wounded, they said. They said they had no estimate of their own losses.

One American officer in command of a colored infantry company told of his experience during the fighting with the rebels last night. He said one band of rebels held up their hands in token of surrender, then opened fire on the Americans at close range. All the rebel band were killed.

Sniping in El Paso.

Private Sam Tusco, Headquarters Company, 82d Field Artillery, was the first fatality in the American expeditionary force. He was killed by a sniper, while on the American side. Private Burchard Casey of the same unit was shot through the chest.

One Sergeant of the 7th Cavalry was seriously wounded by rebel rifle fire after the American cavalry crossed and two members of the 24th (colored) Infantry, were less seriously wounded.

After Private Tusco was killed and Private Casey wounded, a detachment of cavalry charged a small adobe pillbox fortress and machine-gun nest on the south bank of the Rio Grande, opposite the stockyards, where rebel snipers had found concealment. The rebels were killed or driven out.

There was sniping in the lower part of El Paso last night, but it was soon under control. A number of suspected snipers were arrested. A sniper was killed by an American soldier at Ninth and Stanton Streets. The man was alleged to have been firing at civilians.

An American army officer who made an inspection trip from the International Bridge to the racetrack southeast of Juarez this morning reported seeing the bodies of thirty Villa dead. He believed many had been killed with shrapnel bullets fired from the American artillery.

Mayor Charles Davis of El Paso issued a statement this afternoon saying he regretted the expedition to Juarez because of the bad effect it would have upon the situation in Mexico, where Americans owned large interests in districts frequented by Villa.

ANGELES-VILLA MANIFESTO.

Text of Document in Which Aims of Revolution Are Set Forth.

DALLAS, Texas, June 16.—Twenty Generals and nearly 175 other persons signed the revolutionary manifesto issued at Pagral, Chihuahua, May 22, according to information received by Colonel Dario W. Silva, formerly of Villa's staff, but now in business here. The names of General Felipe Angeles and Francisco Villa were the first signed to the document, the former being termed provisional President and the latter Minister of War, although Angeles is reported as signing himself "The Supreme Chief of the Division of the North."

The complete text of the manifesto has been received by Colonel Silva, translated by him, and made available for publication. It follows:

"To the sons of Mexico, those of the north and south, lovers of law and order, peace and justice to all: to the ashes and sacred memory of all those fallen for this, our worthy cause, greetings:

"We are under the mantle of an institution conceived in chivalry, law-abiding humanity and patriotism; embodying within its innermost principles all the glorious traditions everlastingly alive as to conduct, noble in sentiment, generous in might and patriotic in its purpose.

"We have met here today, reunited by destiny, in order to send broadcast the program for enforcement of which we have been watering with the blood of our brothers, fathers and sons the lands of our most beloved and bleeding mother country for the last nine years, its object being:

"First—The reinstatement at the earliest possible time of the constitution of the great Don Benito Juarez, proclaimed in 1857.

"Second—To protect and inforce the protection by all means of the lives and interests of all the foreigners who will devote their time and energies to minding their interests and business, keeping out of factional support direct or indirect; making it emphatic that the Americans will be given the protection to which they are entitled, regardless of all mistakes of those who thought to have made the right choice in their decisions about the affairs of Mexico.

"Third—To protect the weak, the innocent, and the defenseless from indignities, wrong, and outrages from the lawless, the professional criminals and brutal; to alleviate to the utmost of our capacity the injured and oppressed; to extend immediate practical aid to the suffering and unfortunate, and above all to the widows and orphans of friends and foe alike, bringing the miseries of both to a minimum.

"Fourth—To inforce the faithful execution of the constitutional laws of 1857, and to protect the property legally acquired from unlawful seizures and confiscation; avoiding drumhead court-martial trials as has been customary heretofore, unless caught red-handed and with the weapons in action. Judgments are to be given only by the civil or military authorities in absolute conformity with the laws of the republic, as per the constitution of 1857.

"Transitory—Death penalty will be abolished from this date on, unless deeds for treason, murder or espionage, in places which are temporarily or indefinitely occupied by the forces of our different armies.

"In the name of supreme justice, law, and final victory."

Shonts Tells of Rise in Coal.

The current issue of The Subway Sun, which is edited by Theodore P. Shonts, contains a statement that coal needed for operating the company's system will cost for the year ending Aug. 31 $3,197,326, an increase of 56 per cent. over 1916, when the cost was $1,736,935.

CHARITIES BOARD MEETS.

Hears Applications for Incorporation of Institutions.

The State Board of Charities held a public hearing yesterday afternoon at the Charities Building, 287 Fourth Avenue, on the applications of the Recreation Home and Camp Gerard of Rockland Lake, Inc.; the King Solomon Hospital, Inc., and the Zion Sisters' Home for the Poor and Crippled, for approval of their certificates of incorporation. The Commissioners present were William R. Stewart, Lee K. Frankel, and Victor F. Ridder.

Opposition developed against the application of the King Solomon Hospital, the object of which is "to erect, maintain, and establish one or more hospitals for the care and treatment for medical and surgical aid of persons suffering from mental diseases." Dr. I. L. Van de Mark and Dr. Kirby, Superintendent of the Manhattan State Hospital on Ward's Island, contended that as the hospital was to care for persons suffering from mental diseases it should be licensed by the State Hospital Commission, formerly the State Commission in Lunacy. The King Solomon Hospital plans to establish one institution at 14 Mount Morris Park West and another in Westchester.

The Commission reserved decision in all the cases until a meeting to be held Thursday.

Blue air—the glorious ozone of river, mountain, and sea—is yours for the breathing.

Angling for bass with a camouflaged frog or a wonderful wooden wiggler—teaching a debutante how to swim—riding a surf horse or splashing through a game of water polo.

Prepare for your vacation with Abercrombie & Fitch clothes, sporting paraphernalia and travel goods.

Whether You Swim, Bathe or Merely Dip

Every article of water-sport dress, from a woman's smart bathing suit to swimming tights which will help her win a race.

Silk and merverized suits in desirable colors; Jersey swimming suits with tights attached; silk bathing stockings; bathing shoes for every outfit; rubber diving caps.

Men's swimming apparel in most approved form.

Waterproof bags for bathing suits. Beach tents, sunshades and chairs. Balls for beach play and water polo. Canoes in which to ride the surf.

Abercrombie & Fitch Bass Bait

Aside from rods, reels and tackle boxes, bait pails and landing nets, here is every artificial bait the great bass artists have evolved.

Bugs, frogs, phantom minnows—things to rouse the oldest bass.

With due attention to lunge, pickerel, and all the wonderful salt water fishing now opening up.

Travel Goods Which Help on the Way

The smartest kit and Gladstone bags, in choicest leathers; fitted suit cases for men and women; large port cases and small overnight bags.

Leather toilet cases, shaving kits, flasks and bottle sets.

Luncheon kits for motoring and motor boating—America's largest assortment.

Crew Is Determined to Beat Vimy Distance Record and Will Await Good Weather.

TEN-DAY DELAY PROBABLE

Plans Are Contingent on Success of New Radiators—Flight to Chicago Instead Is Possible.

Special to The New York Times.

HARBOR GRACE, June 16.—It will probably be a week or ten days, and possibly even much longer, before the Handley-Page makes an effort to fly across the Atlantic unless the present plans are altered. Now that the honor of being first across in a non-stop flight is the Vimy's, the Handley-Page crew recognize that nothing remains for them but to better, if possible, Alcock and Brown's remarkable record. Their hearts are now set upon a non-stop flight to England, and if they accomplish this they will have gained the world's distance record for a non-stop flight in a heavier-than-air machine.

Admiral Kerr, Major Gran, and Major Bracley all are set upon going the greater distance now, rather than starting with Ireland as their objective, as was their intention while they were competitors for The Daily Mail prize. Because of the big Atlantic's limited cruising radius they realize that to accomplish this greater journey they must have absolutely ideal weather, with westerly winds from coast to coast.

The splendid winds which blew under the Vimy's tail are already gone, and over the mid-Atlantic there is a wide area of depression. This means, according to the meteorological experts, that it will certainly be days before there are again such conditions as made the Vimy's record flight possible.

Though they frankly are chafing at the delay, the Atlantic's crew express themselves as quite firm in the determination not to get off the ground in less than just such ideal weather, pointing out that now that the Vimy has won the race it would be foolhardy of them to leave under other than the very best circumstances, particularly since a distance record now is the principal object for which they are striving.

In the meantime they may prove to have rather serious radiator difficulties. The original radiators on the four engines were of a type developed hurriedly during the war for military needs, and on the trials they proved inadequate. The radiation surface was not sufficiently great, and the water boiled shortly after they got into the air. They were determined to risk those radiators after such tinkering as they were able to do with them, and were quite set upon getting away on Saturday. However, it was 5 o'clock before they were ready, and as already told once, they learned that the faster Vickers plane was off, they abandoned the plan on account of the useless risk involved.

Plans Depend on Radiators.

Four new radiators are now here, and since the water tubes in them are slightly larger, all the members of the expedition are hopeful they will prove satisfactory. The weather today continues rainy and foggy, and hence no effort to install these new coolers has been made.

It is probable they will be put in tomorrow or Wednesday, and after that there is to be another extended trial flight. This is because with a full load it will be necessary to fly with the engines at "full cock" for from two to three hours at the start of the long flight in order to attain the desired cruising height, and only a two or three hour test at full speed with a heavy load will tell whether the new radiators will keep the engines cool under these conditions.

Every bit of engineering skill that can be brought to bear is to be used to make them a success, for should they fail too the expedition will be up against the necessity of waiting weeks for a third set to be sent from England.

There exists just now a possibility that anything short of the complete success of these radiators may bring a radical change in the Handley-Page flight plans. Except for the sporting feeling among the members of the expedition that once having entered for the transatlantic flight they cannot "funk" the job, some of those who are to fly in this four-engined giant feel that now that the transatlantic flight has been done they might well essay another journey.

They are quite firm in the intention not to suggest to their headquarters in England that such an alteration be made, but it is a fact that at least some members of the crew, and very probably all, would be immensely pleased if they should receive orders to fly to America. Though they have not made plans for such a trip, it is probable they would choose Chicago for their objective, and would in any event keep going just as long as the petrol held out and engines kept working.

Crew Favor Flight to Chicago.

An argument in favor of this flight, should the radiators not prove perfectly satisfactory, is that a comparatively short leg would be over the water, and that at any time that the circulation went bad a landing could be effected. The impression is not intended to be conveyed by this that as yet anything like a probability exists that this trip will be attempted, but should the idea prove attractive to the Handley-Page headquarters, and should instructions be received here to alter the destination and give the American people a chance to look at this big fellow in the air, there will be no tears here.

Only fragmentary details of Alcock and Brown's achievement have thus far been received here, and the fliers at Harbor Grace eagerly are awaiting more details, particularly with regard to navigation.

As told in these dispatches yesterday, a phase of the Handley-Page project that is being strongly emphasized is the possibility that their attempt, if it does finally take the direction of another ocean flight, may be used to make a distinct contribution to the science of aerial navigation. This is particularly true because of the direction-finding wireless installation, which never yet has proved entirely successful under conditions such as it would be called upon to meet on this journey. The Marconi concern not only has furnished the equipment without charge, but has at its own expense contributed experts to look after the installation and has furnished an operator for the trip. Arthur Pritchard, the company's principal engineer, has devoted weeks of meticulous care to make the installation the best that modern science can devise, and it is hoped that very real results will be attained during the flight.

The helplessness in a fog of a navigator equipped with but the ordinary instruments, coupled with the limited radius of airplanes thus far built, makes it vital, if much ocean flying is to be done, that, regardless of weather conditions, the flying liners shall be able to keep on their course. For this reason the Handley-Page men feel that a successful demonstration of the use of the direction-finding apparatus would be a real and valuable contribution.

Other Planes Intend to Start.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., June 16, (Associated Press.)—St. John's newspapers, which today published articles praising the Vickers-Vimy crew for making the first successful non-stop transatlantic flight, carried statements from the other four aviation camps here to the effect that these planes would all "hop off" at the first moment possible.

Frederick P. Raynham said tonight he expected the new engine with which his Martinsyde is being equipped will be ready for a trial flight the end of this week.

The Alliance crew has begun construction of a hangar at Popewalk, while the Boulton and Paul outfits expect to complete its selection of an aviation field tomorrow.

NAVY CONGRATULATES FLIERS.

Resolution in the House to Give Them the Congressional Medal.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Secretary Daniels today sent a message of congratulation to Captain John Alcock and Lieutenant Arthur W. Brown, on their successful completion of the first non-stop transatlantic flight. The message follows:

Heartiest congratulations from the American Navy on your splendid achievement.

(Signed) JOSEPHUS DANIELS.

WASHINGTON, June 16, (Associated Press.)—A resolution authorizing the President to give the Congressional Medal of Honor to Captain Alcock and Lieutenant Brown, and expressing the admiration of Congress at their feat was introduced today by Representative La Guardia of New York.

MAJOR MURRY SENDS MESSAGE

Our Representative in London Congratulates Alcock and Brown.

LONDON, June 16.—Major Murry of the United States Army Air Service has telegraphed the following message to Captain John Alcock at Clifden, Ireland:

"As the representative of the United States Army Air Service in Great Britain, I take great pleasure in extending to you and your splendid crew heartiest congratulations on your brilliant achievement."

R-34 TRIES OUT HER RADIO.

Establishes Communication with the Azores in Trial Flight.

LONDON, June 15.—The trial flight of the British dirigible R-34, which will soon attempt to cross the Atlantic, had to be abandoned at 2 o'clock this morning, owing to a change in the weather. She was ordered to return to the aerodrome at Haddington, and landed successfully at 4 o'clock.

During her flight, which was over the Haddingtonshire coast and the Firth of Forth, she tried out her wireless apparatus and established communication with the Azores.

LLOYD GEORGE SENDS TRIBUTE

Premier Tells Alcock He Is Pleased British Were First to Cross.

LONDON, June 16.—David Lloyd George, the British Prime Minister, has sent from Paris the following telegram to Captain Alcock:

"Heartiest congratulations to you and Lieutenant Brown on your audacious and successful flight. It is a splendid achievement.

"I am especially delighted that two British officers who fought in the war should have been the first to link Europe and America in a single non-stop flight."

SEES AIR NAVIGATION NOW NEAR SOLUTION

Henry Woodhouse Outlines Facts Demonstrated by Vimy Bomber's Flight.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, June 16.—The following outstanding features of the transatlantic flight made by Captain Alcock and Lieutenant Brown are pointed out by Henry Woodhouse, Vice President of the Aerial League of America:

First, the world will soon find a compensation for the extensive outlay of money and effort made during the war in the development of better and larger and safer aircraft.

Second, there are huge plans to be announced for the employment of aircraft for transportation and other utilitarian purposes, which are expected to go into effect this Summer, and the performances which will result will astonish the world. Some of these plans have been under consideration in the United States, others in England, France, and Italy, and aim to establish aerial lines throughout the world. The successful flight of Captain Alcock and Lieutenant Brown will hasten their realization.

Third, Captain Alcock, Lieutenant Brown, and Commander Read and the gallant crews of the NC's have opened the transatlantic airways, doing in fifteen hours more than the world's engineers did in years in opening a way from the Atlantic to the Pacific through the Isthmus or by the building of the world's greatest canals, tunnels, or bridges.

Fourth, one of the main factors which made for the success of this flight and which makes this flight conclusive evidence that aerial transportation is possible between the two continents commercially as well as scientifically is the fact that, owing to the great speed of the airplane, the flight was completed within the time representing the limit of human endurance. In subsequent flights pilots can probably cut down the time required to fly over the same route to twelve hours, thereby making it possible to use aircraft of the single-crew class for transatlantic air lines.

Fifth, the flight of Captain Alcock and Lieutenant Brown and the flight of Commander Read and his gallant crew have opened the way for flights direct from the United States to Europe, but to make these flights without stop it will be necessary to have airplanes at least twice as large as the largest airplane at present under construction.

Sixth, Ireland is destined to become one of the world's greatest airports, where transatlantic air lines will land to refuel before continuing their journey.

Seventh, too much cannot be said of the reliability of the motors used in this flight, which, combined with the skill and daring of the aviators and the reliable instruments for navigation, opened an entirely new epoch in aeronautics and permit planning the use of airplanes for transportation over long distances, where the tremendous speed of airplanes can solve difficult problems of transportation.

AMERICAN FLIERS LAUD ALCOCK'S ACHIEVEMENT

Lieut. Commander Read Praises His Courage, and Says It Was One Great Stunt.

BREST, June 16, (Associated Press.)—"One great stunt," was the comment of Lieut. Commander Albert C. Read of the American seaplane NC-4, the first to cross the Atlantic, today on the successful flight of Captain Alcock and Lieutnant Brown.

"While there is nothing which will add much information to the art of aviation as a result of the flight," he continued, "it was a wonderfully nervy thing to attempt and a magnificent achievement. I have much admiration and respect for the men who attempted the great feat in face of such odds. It required a machine built of the best material, but, above all, stanch determination and unflinching courage. They also made the attempt at the right time."

Commander John H. Towers of the NC-3 said:

"It was a splendid feat."

Commander Towers, Commander Read, and Lieut. Commanders Little and Richardson will leave here for the United States tomorrow on the transport Zeppelin. All of the American aviators expressed the greatest admiration for the achievement of Captain Alcock.

AIR CODE IS DRAFTED AT PEACE CONFERENCE

Aeronautical Commission Has Also Drawn Up a Convention on Air Navigation.

PARIS, June 16.—An international convention on aerial navigation and the draft of an air code are among the most important accomplishments of the Peace Conference Aeronautical Commission, which concluded its work recently. British and Belgian delegates already have signed the aerial convention, and others of the allied representatives now are affixing their signatures.

The air code, it is believed, can be drafted into its final form within a few months, now that the German Peace Treaty has been completed.

Captain Roberts of the French Aviation Service, and Secretary of the Peace Conference Aviation Committee, recently flew to Brussels and London to have the aerial agreement signed by delegates who had returned to the capitals of their countries.

next Saturday, and, if possible, may drive the machine in which he crossed the Atlantic.

Major Mayo of the Aero Club has inspected the Vickers-Vimy machine and has found the seals on the marked parts of the biplane intact, according to a wireless dispatch received here from Clifden, Ireland. In landing, the pylons of the centre section, as well as the main spar of the lower plane, were broken, but the steel construction of the fuselage saved the machine from further damage.

The two engines ran smoothly throughout the flight and when the airplane landed there were still 250 gallons of petrol left in the tank, sufficient for a further flight of ten hours.

Captain Alcock said the Vickers Company was sending two men to salvage the damaged biplane, but he gave it as his opinion that the job would require several men and that they would have to lay a track to get the machine out of the bog.

The aviators said they did not feel hungry during the flight, but were extremely thirsty.

"For a time," Captain Alcock said, "we spoke to each other through the communication telephones, but these broke down after four hours and we had to discard them. Then I had to shout to Lieutenant Brown. Most of our 'conversation' consisted of tapping one another on the shoulder and going through the motions of drinking."

Carried a Dog and a Cat.

Features of the trip were the carrying of the first aerial mail across the Atlantic and the transportation of two mascots, a dog and a cat.

Enthusiasm over the success of the trip, it is commented, has not been accompanied by any minimising of the great dangers the aviators encountered. Once, the airman said, they barely escaped being plunged into the sea when the machine went into a flat spin. Early in the flight the half-gale in which they took off from St. Johns tore off the propeller that drove the wireless dynamo and made radio communication impossible. At the same time, Lieutenant Brown said, a stay wire had broken, but of this he did not speak to his companion until they landed. Captain Alcock said he would have turned back had he known this.

Bad weather, accompanied by fog, permitted only three observations for laying the course, while sleet stopped the working of the petrol indicator.

Amid the chorus of editorial congratulations to Captain John Alcock and Lieutenant Arthur W. Brown on the successful completion of their airplane trip across the Atlantic, the note of national triumph, although it is sounded, is not struck excessively. Gratification is generally expressed that the first non-stop crossing of the Atlantic was made by a British machine, driven by British airmen, and there are one or two satisfied references made to the fact that the flight was accomplished "without adventitious aid," but, on the whole, the American crossing is recalled with due recognition. Thus, The Chronicle says:

"The honor of the first crossing belongs to the gallant Americans, but Alcock and Brown were the first to cross in less time than would be taken by a sea voyage. The Atlantic honors are now fairly divided between the United States and Great Britain."

The Telegraph says of the flight:

"It does not eclipse the glory of the American achievement, but that is because there is no question of an eclipse in these matters, as there is no question of jealousy."

The Mail also refers to the "supremely planned organisation of the NC-4's record passage."

Some papers deprecate the assumption of the early establishment of transatlantic passenger service. They point to the long delays encountered in Newfoundland and the hazards that Alcock and Brown ran, and believe it will be long before sea travel is superseded.

The Manchester home of John Alcock, pilot of the Vickers-Vimy biplane, was besieged by visitors yesterday, the callers standing in line to shake hands with Captain Alcock's mother. She said, during the day:

"I had faith in my son. He told me he would make the flight safely."

Captain Sexton, Chief of the United States Naval Staff in London, commenting on Captain Alcock's flight today, said:

"It was a very fine performance. The United States Navy will be only too pleased to extend congratulations."

Get Hearty Welcome in Galway.

GALWAY, Ireland, June 16, (Associated Press.)—Captain Alcock and Lieutenant Brown were given a reception by the citizens, presented with complimentary addresses, and entertained at luncheon here today. A great gathering at the station cheered them heartily as they took the train for Dublin.

Captain Alcock looked quite fit. He said the only inconvenience he felt was soreness of the face, which was swollen, owing to the prolonged drive through the fog. He expressed himself as surprised at how little actual inconvenience the flight caused him.

He believed, he said, that within the next twelve months airplanes will be traveling between England and America with passengers.

BROWN A BORN MECHANIC.

Aunt Tells of Navigator's Tastes When He Was a Boy.

Special to The New York Times.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., June 16.—Lieutenant Arthur W. Brown, Jr., self-named "Ted," navigator of the Vimy plane that flew from Newfoundland to Ireland, is the son of a native Schenectadian and has a fairly wide acquaintance here, the result of many visits.

Mrs. Frank Williamson, an aunt whom "Ted" visited in 1914, shortly before he answered the British call for volunteers, says he is American through and through and anxious to come here with his bride, an English girl.

Ted, she explains, is a nickname chosen by Lieutenant Brown himself as a youngster. He got it from a book in which the hero was called "Ted." It was a narrative of mechanical romance.

From childhood he inclined toward mechanical things, and his father told upon arriving here on a visit in 1906 of an incident that occurred on the way from New York. The conductor came through and after having taken half-fare for the boy, remarked:

"I ought to charge full fare for him. Look at what he's reading?"

The father looked. His son had seized upon some highly technical engineering volumes that had been lying in an open travelling bag and was feasting on mechanical lore.

FINDS AIRPLANES A PEST.

Newfoundlander Complains That They Interfere with Supply of Eggs.

Special to The New York Times.

CARBONEAR, N. F., June 16.—The St. John's Daily News today carries the following letter:

Editor Daily News:

Sir—As one who protested against the bicycle nuisance twenty years ago, I desire to join in the present agitation to prevent motor cars from using the public roads, covering pedestrians with dust and interfering with their comfort generally, and I also wish to voice a protest against airplanes being allowed to fly over the city frightening our poultry, and thereby interfering with the supply of eggs, so important during the present shortage of food.

This nuisance is only just beginning, and now is the time to stop it before the airplane becomes as great a pest as the bicycle and the motor car.

PRO BONO PUBLICO.

MORE GEM THEFT ARRESTS.

Two Woman Are Taken in Connection with Littauer Robbery.

Two additional arrests were made last night in connection with the theft of jewels valued at $15,000 from the home of Lucius N. Littauer, at Premium Point, New Rochelle, on the night of June 7. The arrests, according to the detectives, resulted from the finding of a note book when Otto Kovas was arrested on June 13, which, the police say, contains a complete floor plan of the Littauer home, as well as the addresses of two women.

Acting on this information detectives went to 552 East Eighty-second Street last night, where Kovas had occupied a room, and arrested Mrs. Leucia Hubrich and Emily Carlson, of 466 East Seventy-sixth Street. The detectives say that until three weeks ago the Carlson woman was employed as a housekeeper in the Littauer home. Both women were charged with complicity in the burglary and were turned over to the New Rochelle authorities.

District Attorney Swann Tells of Aid to be Given by Federal Agencies.

SEEK "SENATOR" REYNOLDS

Convicted Gambler Listed as President of Oil Company That Is Now Being Investigated.

Several bankers and brokers called at the District Attorney's Office yesterday to urge a complete investigation of alleged swindling operations in the financial district, due in large part to manipulation of worthless stock shares by promoters. They told District Attorney Swann that they were anxious to co-operate in the work of driving out the crooks.

While the police continued their search yesterday for suspects in the recent stock frauds that caused a loss of $50,000 to bankers and brokers, Assistant District Attorneys J. T. Dooling and E. P. Kilroe continued their investigation. They received new complaints from investors in mining and oil shares that had been boomed by advertising and activity on the curb markets.

Nurses Bought Stock.

Two of the complainants yesterday were nurses, who told Mr. Dooling that they had paid $500 and $350 for shares of an oil company, but had not received the certificates. Their demand for return of the money had not been complied with. They said the salesman had told them that he had lost $50,000 through one of his partners and that their money would be returned, though they would have to wait until he could straighten out his affairs. The stocks were said to be those of the Panuco and Gulf Oil Company.

Frank D. Ryan, whom the nurses alleged, sold them the stocks, is out on $25,000 bail, following his arrest on the charge of suspicion of grand larceny made by W. J. Bissell, of the banking house of B. Warren Corcoran & Co. of Baltimore. Mr. Dooling said that Thomas L. Reynolds, who was found guilty of maintaining a gambling house in West Sixty-eighth Street in June, 1918, and was sentenced to three months in the City Prison, was listed as President of the Panuco and Gulf Oil Company.

In the safe in the Criminal Courts Building were found 100,000 shares of the Panuco and Gulf Oil Company, all of which were signed with the name "Thomas L. Reynolds, President." Assistant District Attorney Smith told of seizing them in the raid. Mr. Dooling said he had seized books and papers in the office of the Panuco and Gulf Oil Company at Forty-third Street and Broadway, but had not been able to find Reynolds, whom he wished to question upon Ryan's reported connection with the concern.

Reynolds in Europe.

"I was told that Reynolds was in Europe," said Mr. Dooling. "Reynolds used to seek the acquaintance of rich men and invite them to his home for dinner, after which the talk drifted to stocks or to taking a chance on the private roulette wheel. The visitors heard Reynolds tell stories of his 'hobnobbing with royalty' in his frequent trips abroad, and Smith found cards in Reynolds's home reading, 'His Excellency the Hon. Thomas L. Reynolds.'"

It was disclosed yesterday that the Federal authorities were co-operating with the District Attorney in reaching questionable stock promoting schemes. Howard B. Wood, a proomter at 111 Broadway, doing business in the name of Wood & Co., was arraigned before Commissioner Hitchcock on the charge of using the mails to defraud. The complaint was made by Postal Inspector Oliver C. Williamson.

Williamson alleged that Wood had sent circulars through the mails setting forth that his company owned outright oil producing properties, whereas the company's interest in the properties consisted only of thirty-day leases. Williamson said Wood had an option on 1,000,000 shares of the company's stock and had sold 354,000 shares at prices ranging from 60 cents to $1, and had paid into the treasury of the company at the rate of 10 cents a share.

It was charged also that Wood had represented that the company had two flowing wells producing 100 barrels of oil daily, a third producing fifty barrels; that the company had a pipe line, were marketing the product and paying 12 per cent. dividends and that a meeting of the company's officers at Shreveport, Ind., had declared a dividend. Williamson asserted that an officer of the company had denied that such a meeting had been held and that no dividend had been authorized. According to Williamson, Wood had paid $7,000 or $8,000 in dividends to some investors to boom the stock. Wood was released in $5,000 bail pending a hearing.

SAYS IRISH PROBLEM IS A BRITISH AFFAIR

London Times Resents Senate Resolution as Interference in Empire's Domestic Relations.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, June 16.—The Times in an editorial this morning says:

"There have been determined attempts during the last few months to make the question of Ireland an international issue, and to place Great Britain in the position of a mere party to the dispute in which foreign States would act as advisers and intermediaries, if not as judges. It is well to say at once that attempts of this kind are bound to fail. They will be wrecked upon the firm purpose of the British people to exercise for themselves the right of self-determination.

"As well might the British Parliament suggest that the United States, for instance, should welcome British recommendations in regard to the relations between the Federal authorities and a State of the Union as that any foreign Legislature should expect Great Britain to take account of its resolutions in regard to the position of Ireland.

"It is because we have regarded, and regard, the recent resolution of the United Sttaes Senate as an episode in American domestic politics that we have hitherto refrained from alluding to it.

"With American domestic politics as such, people of this country have no concern. They follow them with interest and good will, just as they follow the course of the home affairs of any other friendly State. But they decline, and rightly decline, to take sides in regard to them, for they are convinced that this would be the surest means of arresting the process of inter-comprehension and positive co-operation between the British Empire and the United States, which the comradeship in arms has done so much to further.

"Just as the British people desire that their Government shall spare no effort to satisfy the legitimate aspirations of the Irish people, so they are determined that no attempt to interfere, even by suggestion, with the home affairs of the United States shall give a handle to those who would fain stay the growth of mutual respect, and even affection, between the two chief English-speaking peoples, which the war has fostered."

DAY'S CLEAN-UP BOUNDARIES

Five Rules to be Observed in "Spotless Town" Campaign.

This is the second day of the householders' clean-up week, during which it is designed to make the city a "spotless town." There are five rules to be observed:

1. Put out all refuse by 7 o'clock in the morning.
2. Tie up all papers.
3. Put all other household refuse into boxes and barrels.
4. Trade waste, such as brick, lime, building material, &c., will not be removed by D. S. C. carts from dwellings.
5. No refuse, except garbage, will be removed from factories, loft buildings, hotels or other places not used jointly for business and domestic occupancy. Owners of such buildings must remove all refuse at their own expense.

Following are the boundaries for the day in Manhattan:

Neske Move Attributed Only to German Internal Conditions.

COBLENZ, June 14, (Associated Press.)—A detachment of the best troops of Gustav Noske, the German Minister of Defense, will be placed in the area immediately opposite the Coblenz bridgehead, according to information reaching American Army officers here.

It is believed that the transfer is simply a part of the general policy of moving troops from the Ruhr industrial district. The detachment consists of 1,800 men and is part of the Lettwitz group, which participated in the suppression of the Spartacides in the Dusseldorf area.

ASSAILS GIBSON REPORT ON POGROMS

Louis Marshall Says the Minister Is Whitewashing Polish Atrocities.

CITES EVIDENCE OF KILLINGS

And Asserts That Gibson Has Disregarded Damaging Admissions by Poles Themselves.

By CHARLES A. SELDEN.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, June 14.—The members of the various Jewish organizations of the world assembled in Paris for the purpose of assuring the rights of their people in the new States of Eastern Europe are indignant and distressed over the report from America that through the State Department at Washington Hugh Gibson, the new American Minister to Poland, has issued a statement to the effect that no pogroms have occurred in that country.

Louis Marshall, President of the combined Jewish committees in Paris, speaking for all his associates, gave me the following comment this evening on Mr. Gibson's statement:

"To one familiar with Polish affairs the report attributed to Mr. Gibson, minimizing the extent of the Polish pogroms, is astounding. He has apparently spoken out of the fullness of his ignorance. Until he arrived in Warsaw in the latter part of April there had been no American Legation there. He had no previous knowledge of Polish conditions. As late as a fortnight ago he stated officially that he had made no personal investigation into the subject of pogroms and could not speak authoritatively concerning them. Until June 11 he had made no effort to give them personal attention. On that day he started on a tour of inspection to Vilna. Hence his report is necessarily based on the merest hearsay, parrot-like repetition of what has been told him in court circles, within whose sacred precincts Jews are not permitted to enter.

"There, in the face of continuous and unparalleled atrocities that have shocked the civilized world, all the charges are brazenly met with the stereotyped remark: 'There have never been any pogroms in Poland.' This is usually followed by a pronouncement, the inconsistency and falsehood of which does not abash its authors, that, after all, the victims are Bolsheviki or capitalistic exploiters.

The Story of Pinsk Retold.

"Mr. Gibson finds it convenient to disregard conceded facts. He forgets that during the last seven years, at the instance of a political cabal, a pernicious boycott has been waged against Jews, which threatens their destruction industrially and economically. He coolly ignores the awful story of Pinsk, where thirty-seven defenseless men were without resistance taken into custody, while engaged in work of philanthropy, by the military authorities, and without the semblance of a trial or, hearing were deliberately murdered at the command of a Polish officer, who thus far has not even received a reprimand.

"He does not seem to know that Paderewski even has expressed qualified regret that some innocent blood was shed on that occasion. He does not appear to have read the official report of Lieutenant Foster of the American Peace Mission, whose findings of fact corroborate the charge of murder. He takes no account of the brutal castigations inflicted on men and women who were imprisoned after witnessing the execution of those near and dear to them and were later discharged as innocent of all wrong. He probably has never heard of the report of Brailsford, the distinguished English publicist, which is in the official files here, who shows that several weeks before the Pinsk murders the very officer who directed the butchery expressed to him his hatred of Jews and declared that one Jew in every ten should be killed. He makes no note of the arbitrary fine of 100,000 marks inflicted after this massacre upon the Jewish population of Pinsk, followed by similar fines in other towns.

"He regards as unimportant the confiscation by Polish authorities at Pinsk of 1,000,000 marks sent there by the American Jewish relief committees to relieve their brethren dying from famine and typhus, which he has as yet been unable to wrest from the hands of the despoiler. He is silent respecting the horrors of Vilna, the details of which have been officially reported, with the names of sixty Jews done to death, particulars of property valued at 1,000,000 rubles pillaged and destroyed, a minute narrative of floggings and other indignities inflicted and of wholesale deportations of hundreds of reputable citizens, who are still undergoing incarceration far from their homes.

Polish Admission of Cracow Pogrom.

"He seems to know nothing of the occurrences at Lida and many other towns. Nor does he appear to realize what happened at Szenstockau, although leading Polish journals, avowedly Anti-Semitic, have confessed the happening there of a pogrom where at least five Jews were killed and upward of forty seriously wounded. He has failed, so far as the public knows, to report what has just been learned of the attack made upon Jews at Cracow, in which the Polish General Staff concedes that soldiers participated, which resulted in the serious wounding of sixty-six Jews and in the infliction of slighter injuries on more than a hundred.

"He seems to have closed his eyes to the indiscriminate beating and flogging of Jews and to the systematic and diabolical tortures now inflicted upon them. A new kind of sport consists in tearing out by the roots the beards, with the adherent flesh, of Jews in streets, public places, railroad stations, and railway trains, or, by way of variety, severing them with knives and bayonets and setting fire to them.

"He has deafened his ears to the wails of the anguished Jews in Vilna, who are not even permitted to buy food for their famished children. The story of Lemberg for months has been published, giving the testimony of trustworthy eye-witnesses to the mediaeval fiendishness with which the Jews were treated. Depositions of what has occurred in many other localities are available.

"The Pinsk affair has been made the subject of Parliamentary inquiry, yet Mr. Gibson with profound insouciance either disregards these channels of information or looks upon them as fictitious or negligible. Yet when two aged rabbis, whose membership in the Polish diet and whose venerable appearance and learning did not save them from the Gentile dalliance of the brutal mob in the very capital of Poland, complained of this outrage General Pilsudski, recognizing conditions which do not appear to have come within Mr. Gibson's ken, issued a decree in which he deplored the existence of the disgraceful incidents which Mr. Gibson, more royalist than the king, seeks to deny.

"And now, concurrently with the application of the coat of whitewash by which our representative seeks to hide the sea of blood that has been and continues to be shed, comes a special military order from General Haller, the Polish Commander, reported in Le Temps of June 12, in which he admits the truth of complaints of persecution made by Jews and declares that to strike and wound defenseless people, to inflict cruelties upon them and to despoil them of their property is conduct unworthy of Polish soldiers in the service of a sacred cause.

"In the old Czarist days we became quite familiar with the benumbing influences of court life, where, far from those who wept and suffered, those who dwelt within the charmed circle were oblivious of the truth and dreamed that it did not exist.

Slaughters in the Ukraine.

"Information of but a small part of these shameful massacres has reached the Western world. They have taken place not only in Poland, but in Eastern Galicia as well. They have been numerous and indescribably cruel and bloody in the Ukraine. Consequently the Jews of Eastern Europe are dwelling in the midst of perpetual alarms, and at this moment, when human hearts everywhere are yearning for peace and the end of bloodshed, for the dethronement of injustice and the cessation of enslavement of spirit, they are singled out for a double portion of suffering because of their comparative weakness and because of the blind, willful prejudice, begotten of ignorance and stimulated by wickedness.

"The Jews bear no hostility toward Poland. Her liberty and prosperity and theirs are bound together. What they ask is complete emancipation, the breaking of their chains, equality before the law, the right to live their own lives, to do their share in developing the land in which they dwell. Unfortunately there is reason to believe that because they are now asking the Peace Conference, which is conferring sovereign powers on Poland, for the same measure of liberty to which all Poles rightfully aspire, there has arisen this recrudescence of race hatred and bigotry. If the Poles would only realize that by cultivating the spirit of brotherhood their country would surely reap a rich harvest of love and devotion, their future would be secure; whereas, as they persist in pursuing the contrary course, the blood of the innocent cries out to heaven as it has throughout all the ages."

GERMANY REPAYS SOME SWISS LOANS

Arrangements Made for Exchange of Products Between the Two Countries.

GENEVA, June 16.—A German train has arrived at Basle with 15,000,000 gold marks consigned to the Swiss Government for the repayment of loans negotiated during the war. The export of this gold from Germany was especially authorized by the Council of Four in Paris.

The full debt of Germany to Switzerland amounts to 250,000,000 gold marks, of which 4,000,000 is owed to the Geneva Red Cross, which will be paid later, after the Allies' accounts are settled.

BERNE, June 15.—The Swiss Federal Council and the German Government ratified yesterday afternoon an arrangement by which, in exchange for milk products, rice, chocolate, canned fruits, vegetables, and livestock, Germany agrees to permit the exportation to Switzerland of 50,000 tons of coal from the Ruhr Valley and 12,000 tons of coal briquettes and lignite from the left bank of the Rhine each month. Germany will also permit shipments of sugar and potash to be sent to Switzerland.

Under the agreement Switzerland will furnish Germany each month with 50 cars of milk products, 25 cars of rice, and 70 cars of canned goods. During the period of the arrangement, which will run from June 1 to Nov. 30, this year, 5,000 head of cattle and 2,500 goats will also be sent to Germany.

HINES ASKS RAILWAY EMPLOYES TO SAVE

Director General Sees Increase in Rates if Economies Are Not Practiced.

CITES OPERATING COSTS

Gives Deficit at Rate of $62,500,000 a Month—Asks Employes to Repay Government's Aid.

A letter, addressed to the officers and employes of the railroads under Federal control, asking their aid in redoubling their work and to economize in the use of materials, fuel, and other supplies owing to the heavy deficit created in the operation of the roads, and also on account of the increased wages, was sent out yesterday by Director General of Railroads, Walker D. Hines.

Mr Hines in his letter also says that these deficits, if they are not eliminated by economizing, will eventually have to be offset by increased transportation rates.

Mr. Hines in his letter said:

"The increased payroll cost, due to improved wages and working conditions, and the increased cost of material and supplies are now resulting, in connection with the falling off in business, in the United States Railroad Administration incurring heavy deficits in railroad operations.

"For the first four months of this year these deficits, after deducting the rental due the railroad company, were about $250,000,000, or at the rate of $62,500,000 per month. This critical condition makes it imperative not only that costs shall not increase, but also that every effort be made to help the Government through every reasonable effort to economise and realise greater efficiency.

"These deficits, so far as they cannot be eliminated through greater economies and through increased business, will eventually have to be offset by increased transportation rates, which all should endeavor to avoid.

"I ask every officer and every employe to redouble his efforts to do effective work, to economize in the use of railroad materials, fuel, and other supplies, and to use great care not to injure equipment, tools, office furniture or property being transported by the railroad and for which payment must be made if injury occurs, and further than this to try to encourage others to do the same.

"Please remember that if you should fail in any of these respects to do what you reasonably could and ought to do you would impose unnecessary cost upon the Government. This is true because it is the Government which has to bear the loss if there is one or which will receive the profit if any is earned.

"Do not wait for the other fellow to begin this improvement but begin yourself. Do not decline to help because some other fellow is not helping; turn in and help, and keep on setting the other fellow a good example.

"You are interested in the great movement for the improvement of the condition of the individual worker. You can aid in that great movement, through efficiency and saving in reducing the cost of railroad operation, because thereby you help to keep down transportation rates, and thereby you help to keep down the cost of living. An increase in rates will give occasion for an increase in prices of what the public consumes and that will mean a new circle of increasing still further the cost of living. It is to the interest of every man, woman, and child in this country that this shall be avoided just as far as possible.

"The Government, during Federal operation of the railroads, as a result of its nation-wide control, has been able to do much to promote justice to railroad employes through making proper increases in their wages and proper improvement in their working conditions. In the nature of things the result cannot be equally satisfactory to all. Of course, it is not possible in this vast undertaking, involving 2,000,000 employes, to satisfy actually every one, or even every class of those employes. If any employe feels he has a ground for such dissatisfaction, he ought to remember the remarkable strides that have been taken by the Government in the last twelve months in the recognition of the just rights of railroad employes, and compare the situation today with what it was in December, 1917, before Federal control began. It has been a source of satisfaction to me to aid in this great work. Will you not, in turn, do justice to the Government and help sustain my work, as Director General, and also justify what has been done for you, by doing all that you can reasonably do to save the Government money and to increase the efficiency of your work?

"I sincerely want your assistance in demonstrating that the railroads may be operated successfully even though the wages of their employes have been materially increased."

Garibaldi to be Candidate.

ROME, June 14.—The Democratic committee of Naples has announced the candidacy of General Giuseppe (Peppino) Garibaldi as Deputy from that city at the next general election. General Garibaldi is now in America.

SHOPMEN TO STRIKE ON CANADIAN ROADS

Order to 40,000 Men May Also Affect Many in the Federated Trades.

TEXTILE EMPLOYES GO OUT

20,000 Now Idle in Montreal—Winnipeg Employers Suggest Settlement.

MONTREAL, June 16.—A strike order has gone out from the officials of Division No. 4, Railway Shopmen of America, to 40,000 men. All relations between the union officials and the Canadian Railway War Board have been severed.

"We are simply waiting for Wednesday morning," said one of the union officials, "and there is nothing that can now be done to prevent a strike unless, indeed, the Railway Board changes its mind and decides to talk wages and wage schedules tomorrow."

It was thought at first that the strike order would affect only the shopmen on Canadian railway lines, but President Tallon of the shopmen said this afternoon that it included the federated trades as well, and that the committee was acting for these trades. This includes the carmen and others, and swells the strike total by many thousands.

The Canadian Pacific, it is stated, is in a position to run its passenger trains for three months after the strike goes into effect.

The strike situation in Montreal broadened today when 4,000 employes of the Dominion Textile Company left their places, demanding higher wages and a shorter working day. Four hundred electrical workers also went out, and labor leaders expressed the opinion that this disturbance would involve virtually all the building trades.

Twelve-hundred employes of packing houses also went on strike. It is estimated that more than 20,000 employes are now idle in Montreal.

WINNIPEG, June 16.—Winnipeg industrial employers today issued a formal statement outlining their position on the principle of collective bargaining, and suggesting a plan of settlement of the controversy with the Winnipeg Metal Trades' Council.

The employers' statement was formally indorsed by Gideon Robertson, Federal Minister of Labor. They agree to discuss industrial controversies wit delegations representing the crafts employed by their concerns. Leaders of the central strike committee, which organized the sympathetic strike on May 15, have insisted that business agents of the Metal Trades Council should have the power to adjust disputes which affect one or more of the seven crafts embraced in the council.

In their statement the employers say that their outline of collective bargaining has been indorsed by the Mediation Committee of the railway brotherhoods as "being in principle and effect the same as that enjoyed by these and other organizations."

Federal and city officials took the position that settlement of the metal workers' dispute, which was followed by the general sympathetic strike, had narrowed to a single issue—the one big union. Winnipeg employers, backed by the Government, are willing to bargain with their employes, but not with "walking delegates."

VANCOUVER, June 16.—Strike leaders here say that forty-two unions out of sixty-five are on strike. This morning the Vancouver Machinery Depot resumed work. This is an open shop, with both union and nonunion employes. A lumber mill also reopened.

MORE FOR PORT WORKERS.

Arbitration Board, Unionists and Employers, Announces Agreement.

An agreement as to wages and conditions of labor among harbor workers was announced yesterday after two months of deliberation by the Arbitration Board, composed of an equal number of representatives of the harbor workers and the private boat owners.

These meetings commenced after a strike of seven weeks' duration, during which the commerce of the port was seriously crippled, and resulted in considerable increases in wages and other concessions for the men, in spite of the fact that their attempt to gain these advantages by strike was definitely beaten by the private boat owners.

The new scale of wages for the higher grades of skilled harbor workmen, such as engineers, captains, and pilots, provides for increases averaging $15 a month. Other groups of harbor labor benefit in the same proportion. The increases are retroactive, and the men will receive payment to cover the difference between the old scale from the period beginning with the end of the strike.

The basic ten-hour day is adopted, with the agreement that six days constitutes a week's work. Employes working for one firm for a year or more shall have a vacation for one week with pay. Employes who do not have their meals as a part of their compensation will receive an allowance of 75 cents a meal.

RICHMOND TO BE A BAPTIST.

Former Episcopal Clergyman Says He Has Assurance of Recognition.

At a conference yesterday of the Baptist Council, which was held at the Baptist Calvary Church, 123 West Fifty-seventh Street, the Rev. Dr. Ernest F. Weise, formerly a Methodist minister in Bridgeport, Conn., was recognized as a member of the Baptist ministry. The Rev. Dr. George C. Richmond, the Philadelphia clergyman who was suspended from the Protestant Episcopal Church there because of his attack upon Bishop Rhinelander, was to have been recognized also, it was said, but this was postponed until Friday morning at 10 o'clock.

The session was secret, but at its conclusion Dr. Richmond said that he was sure of being recognized, as he had the assurance of the Rev. Dr. Robert Stewart MacArthur, President of the Baptist World Alliance.

which would be filed in view of the differing requirements and conditions in the several States, as in Ohio, for instance, where before an application can be passed upon valuation must be made, or in Michigan, where the municipality must join with the company in making the application.

"While we are eager to turn back the wire systems at the earliest possible date and limit the operation of the Federal rates to a reasonable period, we feel compelled to extend this period beyond ninety days, for reasons based largely upon the physical limitations imposed upon the commissions or regulatory bodies.

"On the other hand, we believe a period of one year too long. It would invite delay and dilatory tactics on the part of some of the companies to secure a proper readjustment of their rates. We believe, under these circumstances and in the interest of fairness both to the companies and to the public, that a period of six months will be sufficient.

"As the President has advised Congress that he would turn back the railroads at the end of the present year, it is hoped that in the proposed railroad legislation provision can be made to give to the Interstate Commerce Commission more complete regulatory power over wire systems doing an interstate business, so that when the six months' period provided for in the above amendment to this act expires the commission will have authority to act upon rates and other matters without leaving what might otherwise be an embarrassing and confusing interval."

In explaining the extension from sixty days to ninety days for the time required for the President to make his report upon Government control of wire communication the report said sixty days would be insufficient.

"If the report had to be itemized it would be impossible from a practical standpoint to make it," said the committee. "To require the items of expenditure for all the materials used by the thousands of companies under Federal control since August, 1918, would be a stupendous task and of little value to Congress when received."

Want Dividends to Stop.

The telegraphers, headed by Mr. McDowell, who saw Senator Watson today, alleged that since the operation of the lines has been turned back to the companies the dividends guaranteed the company when the lines were taken over by the Government should cease. It is with funds from these dividends, strikers assert, that the strike is being fought.

No promise that a resolution for an investigation would be introduced was made by Senator Watson, but he said that an investigation would be made following conferences he expected with other Senators.

Memoranda were sent to all members of the Senate and to members of the House Post Office Committee today by S. J. Small, former International President of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union, in behalf of a committee of seventy of the strikers.

"We claim, as justification for the strike," the memorandum said, "that the Postmaster General, since he assumed control of the wire systems, has at all times refused to receive and consider our complaints of discrimination against union employes and suggestions for adjustment of wage scales, but, instead, has adopted a policy of retaliation by inaugurating rules and ratings which reduced our earnings and increased our daily performance, thereby intensifying unrest, already acute.

"We also claim that Mr. Burleson has used his personal and official influence to prevent an adjustment of differences between the workers and their employers."

STRIKERS SEE GAINS.

Say They Are Ready to Settle on Burleson's Telephone Order.

CHICAGO, June 16.—Termination of the commercial telegraphers' strike, union officials declared tonight, now rests wholly in the hands of Postmaster General Burleson. They said, after reading reports from the American Federation of Labor convention, that a definite statement from Mr. Burleson concerning the scope of the order to electrical workers would be awaited before any move was made.

Officers of the Telegraphers' Union said if the Postmaster General's order granting the right of collective bargaining to electrical workers actually covered the striking telegraphers, steps probably would be taken to end the strike after assurances of no unfair discrimination against the strikers had been obtained.

"But in the meantime we shall continue plans for a finish fight," S. J. Konenkamp told a meeting of strikers here tonight. He reiterated that the strike was spreading and now included nearly 25,000 persons, and declared the order for railroad telegraphers to refuse to handle commercial business had clogged channels to scores of smaller towns throughout the country.

The Western Union Telegraph Company, on the other hand, denied that commercial business was being greatly delayed, and issued this bulletin from the Chicago office tonight:

"Situation in all offices practically unchanged. There was some interruption from railroad telegraphers who are unaware of the true situation. The informed ones thing it unfair and are handling business."

The bulletin added that Jacksonville, Fla., the storm centre of the South, reported normal conditions, and that the strike of Postal operators in Detroit also had been declared off.

An officer of the Association of Western Union Employes went to St. Louis today to confer with officers of the Order of Railway Telegraphers in an effort to have the order against handling commercial business on railroad wires rescinded. E. J. Manion, head of the railroad telegraphers, had asked whether the "Association of Western Union Employes was a union organization and so recognized by unionists," when he was asked in telegrams to revoke the order.

In a number of cities electrical workers and a few telephone operators walked out today in accordance with a strike order recently sent out by the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. The strike order was rescinded on Saturday after concessions had been granted by the Postmaster General. It was explained at headquarters that these walkouts were due to delayed messages calling off the strike.

J. G. Luhrsen, President of the American Train Dispatchers' Association, announced definitely tonight that the 5,000 members of that organization would not handle commercial business while the strike is in progress.

SEES END OF WIRE STRIKE.

Konenkamp Tells Thomas Tomorrow May Be the Last Day.

Declaring that he believed Postmaster General Burleson would be compelled to extend to the striking telegraphers the recognition he gave the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Sylvester J. Konenkamp, President of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union, yesterday advised Percy Thomas, local leader, that he expected the telegraph strike to be settled by tomorrow morning. Konenkamp's message referring to Mr. Burleson's grant to the electrical workers, follows:

"This is the biggest victory we've yet won. I hope the matter will be cleaned up by the end of the week. The next move, after we have definite word that Mr. Burleson's order includes telegraphers, would be for him to order the companies to take back the men discriminated against. I think the strike will be over possibly by Wednesday."

Miss May Matthews, Secretary of Boston Local 1A of the Telephone Operators' Division of the International Electrical Brotherhood, who is at the Hotel McAlpin, asked yesterday about her plans for unionizing telephone girls, replied:

"The organization work in New York City will be primarily for the future, not for the present. It has no bearing on the telegraph strike. Our organization work here is at a standstill; we are marking time. I expect Miss Julia O'Connor, President of our organization, here the latter part of the week, and we will then have a definite plan of organization to announce. I have met about 200 girls in New York and discussed with them the idea of forming a union. I found all enthusiastic for it."

Miss Matthews was asked if the organization would launch a sympathetic strike for the telegraphers.

"No, indeed," she said. "As a matter of fact, we shall be against all strikes if we can avoid them. Our organization is separate from all others, and, so far as I know, we are now chiefly concerned with organization."

Miss Matthews said she understood that the American Telephone and Telegraph Company had begun the organization of the American Bell Association, an employes' organization, among its 160,000 workers. Asked about this last night, F. H. Bethell, 1st Vice President of the company, said:

"The organization of the American Bell Association is simply in line with our sickness and benefit policy. This is a matter which we took under consideration some time ago. Now that the lines are in a fair way of being returned to private ownerships we are again taking it up actively."

A. A. Stevenson, director of the lines of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company in New York, said yesterday that there was no opposition on the part of the company he is connected with to the plan of the employes for organizing themselves into a union. His attention was called to the fact that Miss Matthews was on the ground, preparing to go ahead with organization plans. He replied that he saw no reason to anticipate any trouble.

Percy Thomas, the local strike leader, said he had received a protest from operators at the United States Naval Station at Cape May, N. J., saying that efforts were being made by Western Union agents to have them devote their leisure time to employment on the company's wires in southern New Jersey. He said he would not allow this employment of Federal employes for the purpose of crushing unionism."

Mr. Thomas said he had visited United States District Attorney Caffey yesterday and asked him to investigate charges that one of the telegraph companies was "suit-casing" messages—that is, sending messengers by train to deliver in other cities. He said that Mr. Caffey had promised to communicate with Washington for instructions, which the union leader interpreted as a request for Secret Service operatives to watch the telegraph companies.

Referring to the fact that James G. Hayes of the Association of Western Union Employes had gone to Springfield, Ill., Mr. Thomas said he wished to deny reports that Hayes had induced the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers to call off their strike. He said this was ridiculous, since the brotherhood regarded Hayes's organization as a "stool pigeon" union.

At both the Postal and Western Union offices it was said that service was normal. Thirty strikers, it was said, had returned to work at the Western Union office.

STRIKE AT DINNER HOUR.

But Hotel Bretton Hall Had Substitute Waiters Waiting.

It was the dinner hour in the restaurant of the Hotel Bretton Hall, Broadway and Eighty-sixth Street, last night, and with speculative eyes the fifty waiters stood at their posts, appraising the guests as they entered for the meal. According to one of the guests, there was an air of expectancy about part of the waiters, and this was explained when a whistle blew.

At the first pipe the serving victualers formed in line, and with military precision departed. Not even the ruse of a guest who dropped a coin loudly on his empty plate made an impression on the determined ranks.

But just as the last of the strikers went through the door fifty substitute waiters came in another. So far as the guests were concerned, the walkout merely served to show that most of the strikers had learned correct marching while in the service.

C. E. Fuller, manager of the restaurant, said the walkout was the result of the recent waiters' strike. He said the strikers presented no demands.

BOWLING GREEN HEALTHY.

Wall Street's Neighborhood Club Shows Decrease in Mortality.

At the annual meeting of the Bowling Green Neighborhood Association, Inc., Wall Street's social service organization in the district south of Cortlandt Street and west of Broadway, which was held in the association's building, at 45 West Street, yesterday, Dr. Miner C. Hill was elected president, to succeed Magnus Gross, resigned. Albert G. Milbank was elected as a member of the Board of Directors. The annual report was read and showed, among other things, that while the increase in deaths throughout the country in 1918 was approximately 30 per cent., there was a decrease in mortality in the district covered by the association of more than 3 per cent.

The association provides playrooms, a library, and a large playground for the children in one of the most crowded sections of the city, and in the Summer-time arranges for outings for children and mothers.

FIND COLEMAN WILL INVALID

Jury, in Sealed Verdict, Says Maker Lacked Testamentary Capacity.

Surrogate Wingate in Brooklyn today opened a sealed verdict returned by a jury, which found that William A. Coleman, who lived at 130 South Portland Street, Brooklyn, until he died on January 31 last, did not have testamentary capacity when he made his will on September 28, 1916. In the will he left all of his property to the rector, wardens and vestry of Christ Church in Bedford Avenue, at Clymer Street, Brooklyn.

The exact value of the property is not known, but it is estimated at about $8,000. Attorneys Coonen and Wilson immediately made a motion to have the verdict set aside, as contrary to the weight of the evidence, and the Surrogate decided to hear the motion argued Wednesday. If the verdict stands the property will go to Mrs. Bridget Flynn, 76 years old, an aunt of Coleman, who lives at 408 West Side Avenue, Jersey City. Mrs. Flynn, who contested the will, brought out the fact that Coleman was injured in 1910, it was said, and his brain was affected.

Common Sense

You never knew a dentist to use a drugged dentifrice to clean or treat your teeth. But every year dentists in the United States use tons of Dr. Lyon's in their practice for cleaning and polishing teeth.

Isn't it safer to follow the practice of the dentist than the theory of the drugged dentifrice? The one knows your need, the other is guesswork. Dr. Lyon's, the dentifrice of refined people for over fifty years, contains no drugs and hence no possibility of the misapplication of drugs. It is safe for everybody and always has been.

Life in the Open

The Adirondacks and the Thousand Islands

For pure delight of life in the open, there are few places like the Adirondacks!

Famous men have written much about its natural beauties. But, more convincing—tired city dwellers go there summer after summer, to get away from work, to forget business, to absorb the spirit and freedom of the woods, the lakes, the hills; to play, to sport, to live close to Nature; to camp out—fish, hunt, canoe, tramp, golf; to breathe new air, meet new people; to seek for a time, at least, their heart's desire—a full life in the open.

The Adirondacks will put into you, in a week, zip and freshness for a whole season of work.

The Thousand Islands of the St. Lawrence, just west of the Adirondacks, are a vacation in themselves. All along our shores, and the shores of our Canadian border-land, is most interesting international Social life. It is the motor-boating metropolis of the world. It is famous for its Bass and Muscallonge fishing. It is the starting point for the trip down the rapids to Montreal.

SAYS NATION NEEDS WOMEN AS VOTERS

McAdoo Asserts They Will Wield Powerful Influence Over Our Destinies in the Future.

CALLS THEM INDEPENDENTS

And Believes That They Will Forego Party Affiliations to Decide on Issues of the Day.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., June 15.—The opportunities confronting the women of the United States, after the Anthony amendment recently passed by Congress is ratified by the various States, were pointed out by ex-Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo in an address before the Connecticut Woman Suffrage Association here today. The women, Mr. McAdoo said, would form the independent body of voters which will be vital for the country in the future, inasmuch as they will forego party affiliations to cast their ballots on the issues of the day. Mr. McAdoo, in his address, said in part:

"It has always been incomprehensible to the enlightened human mind that while our Constitution guarantees equal political rights to all male citizens, regardless of race, creed or color, a wholly inconsistent discrimination should be made against one-half of our citizenship because of sex. Democracy cannot be confined to men only. Women are equally entitled to its full benefits and protection. Without the right of suffrage, women cannot get equal protection under the law. At last this grave injustice against American women, which has existed since the foundation of our Government, will soon be remedied. It, therefore, behooves the women of America to make ready for the new responsibilities and duties of citizenship they are about to assume.

"Since the foundation of the republic until very recently, when individual States began to grant the right of suffrage to women, men alone have determined our laws and policies. Men have divided themselves into political parties. Today we have two great parties in this country, almost evenly balanced—the Democratic and the Republican. Through long years of party strife the great majority of voters have become definitely aligned with one or the other of these political parties.

"Under our system of government we must have political parties. But it is equally important that neither political party shall have at all times such a preponderant majority of the electorate that it is assured of control of the Government. Because long continued political control by either party begets eventually an indifference to the public will through the creation of a political machine which is more concerned in party success and the selfish ambitions of political leaders than in the welfare of the great masses upon whose prosperity, contentment, and progress the security of democracy rests.

"Therefore, it is of the utmost to the country that there shall at all times be a sufficiently large element of independent voters who will put country always above party and vote upon the merits of the many issues which have to be submitted from time to time to the electorate. This independent element should always be large enough to determine the election by casting its strength with that political party which is most deserving of support and which at the time stands for the true interests of the country.

"In the critical times facing us now and in the future, it will become more and more vital to the national welfare to have a sufficiently large element of independent voters standing between the two great parties, who, uninfluenced by party passion and prejudice, will cast discriminating votes upon the issues of the day. Such an independent element should always hold the scales between the two great parties, putting each upon its mettle and exacting of each the full performance of patriotic service and duty to country as the price of support.

"This is where the new women voters of the United States will have their great opportunity. They have not been allied heretofore with either political party. They are indebted to neither political party for the right of suffrage. Neither Democrats nor Republicans alone in the Congress passed the woman suffrage amendment. It required both Democratic and Republican votes in sufficient number to secure its passage. It also required the approval of a Democratic President before it could become a law, and it will require the ratification of Democratic and Republican States alike before the great boon of suffrage will be given to the women of America regardless of State boundaries.

"Thus we shall soon have added to the electorate a great body of women voters, owing allegiance to neither political party, who bring fresh minds upon the problems of the day, and who can vote according to the highest standards and conceptions of independent citizenship. By their votes they will have the power to make that party successful which stands for the things which mean most for America and for the world.

"Another question which concerns women greatly is the matter of equal pay with men for equal work. This is an economic, not a political question, but its just solution is likely to come more quickly because women have the power of the ballot. Frequently economic problems must be settled through political instrumentalities. There has never been any justification for the payment of a less wage to women than to men for the same service performed, and in the settlement of the many problems of social justice which must be dealt with in the future, this matter demands a satisfactory adjustment.

"It is reasonable to expect that in the November, 1920, elections, the women in every State of the Union will have an opportunity to cast the ballot. It is an inspiring thing to visualize this great army of 15,000,000 or more of emancipated women marching to the polls in every precinct in America and exercising for the first time the greatest privilege of an American citizen—the right to vote—perhaps to determine by their votes the future destinies of this great Republic.

"Naturally, as a Democrat, I should like to see the women of the United States support the Democratic party, because I believe that the interests of the masses of the American people are bound up in the Democratic party. I believe the Democratic party, more than any other party, represents the hopes and aspirations of the great masses of men and women in this country. But speaking not as a Democrat, but as an American who believes always in America above party, I should say that the women of America will make no mistake in the exercise of the highest duties of citizenship if they hold to their independence, putting the interests of the great Republic always above party, and voting from time to time upon the issues that may be presented upon their merits and not from the standpoint of partisan politics.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE AMENDMENT WINS

Kaplan of New York, both Democrats, defended the Governor and declared that the Democratic Party had been the consistent friend of woman suffrage.

President Pro Tem. Walters disputed this statement.

"We are here now in extraordinary session for the sole reason that a number of Democratic Senators from the solid South refused to cast their votes for the Federal suffrage amendment last December," he said. "But for a Republican Congress we might not even now be in a position to act upon the resolution that is before us tonight."

The adoption of the resolution concluded the business of the Senate.

New York is the sixth State to ratify.

Women Announce Assembly's Action.

A ripple of applause greeted the entry of Mrs. Ida B. Sammis of Suffolk and Mrs. Mary M. Lilly of New York, the two women members of the Assembly, who, in honor of the occasion, had been appointed by Speaker Sweet on a committee to inform the Senate that the Assembly, too, had concluded its labors and was ready to adjourn sine die.

The cost of the extra session to the State will be $7,000, which was provided for in a special appropriation bill passed under an emergency message from Governor Smith.

Miss Mary Garrett Hay, head of the Woman Suffrage Organization of New York City, and Mrs. Travis H. Whitney, another leader in woman suffrage and Republican women's organizations, were present, with many suffragists from other parts of the State, when the resolutions were adopted. Adjournment was taken at midnight, and one of the shortest extraordinary sessions on record was concluded.

Housing Bills Pass Quickly.

Under emergency messages from Governor Smith, the Legislature in the extraordinary session tonight also passed four bills and two concurrent resolutions framed to relieve the housing situation in New York City.

The measures had been recommended by the Joint Legislative Committee on Housing and Rent Profiteering, of which Senator Charles C. Lockwood of Kings is Chairman, as well as by Governor Smith's State Reconstruction Commissioner of New York City, the Mayor's Committee on Rent Profiteering, and the Tenement House Committee of the Charity Organization Society.

The pending measures were passed by unanimous vote in the Senate.

Senator Lockwood later announced that he had received a message informing him that the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company would release at once $5,000,000 for building purposes, making $35,000,000 in all which had been pledged to the committee for immediate relief measures.

The Governor, when he called the Legislature, was determined that only ratification of the Federal Suffrage amendment should be considered at the extra session, but he relented late today, after a conference with Senator Charles C. Lockwood, Chairman of the Joint Legislative Committee which has been investigating rent profiteering and the scarcity of dwellings.

Among others at the conference were Abram I. Elkus, Chairman of the Reconstruction Commission; Nathan Hirsch, Chairman of Mayor Hylan's Committee on Rent Profiteering, and some of the legislative leaders.

The measures which were placed before the Legislature tonight include four bills and two concurrent resolutions calling upon Congress to do its share toward solving the housing problem.

One of these resolutions calls upon Congress to enact legislation to exempt from the Federal income tax the 4½ per cent. bonds of the New York State Land Bank, secured by mortgages deposited with the State Controller, to the end that such loans, which under the present law may be made as agency for providing additional housing facilities, may find a readier market.

The other resolution calls upon Congress to study the housing problem and make Federal land loans, which now are exempt from income tax, available for building projects of a character tending to provide more abundant housing facilities for families in humble circumstances.

Contrary to expectation, no legislation was urged or recommended to exempt ordinary real estate mortgages from income tax. Such action has been urged by men representing institutions with money to lend, who have appeared before the Lockwood committee, as an essential step toward rendering money available for building purposes by making mortgages as attractive investments as are the tax-exempt Liberty bonds and the short-time securities now issued by railroads, which, while subject to income tax, carry a high rate of interest.

One of the bills introduced will empower savings banks to invest in mortgages on real estate for building purposes, up to 60 per cent of the value of the improved property, at once. Under the present law savings institutions making building loans are permitted to advance only 40 per cent. before construction has begun, and the other 20 per cent. only after the construction of the building covered by the loan has been completed.

Tenement House Law Changed.

Of the other three measures, one will amend the tenement house law to permit the remodelling of four-story basement dwellings into apartment houses, to accommodate not in excess of four families, provided there be no dark inside rooms in the reconstructed houses, and that all stairways are protected by fire-proof partitions.

Another measure amends Chapter 812 of the Laws of 1919 by extending from five to twenty days the period of grace for tenants after dispossess notice has been given. The other bill amends the Municipal Court Justices in their discretion to grant an additional twenty days' stay, provided the tenant is willing to pay rent for the period in advance.

In the Assembly, three of the four Housing bills were passed unanimously. The two Socialist members voted against the bill amending the tenement house law to permit remodelling of dwelling houses into apartments.

The conference in the executive chambers, preceding the introduction of these bills, was attended by John J. Murphy, ex-Tenement House Commissioner, and at present Secretary of the Charity Organization Society, also Senator Lockwood, Speaker Thaddeus C. Sweet of the Assembly, President pro tem of the Senate J. Henry Walters, and Senator James A. Foley, the Senate minority leader, in addition to Messrs. Elkus and Hirsch.

The Real Estate Board of New York filed a formal protest with Governor Smith and the legislative leaders against the housing measures.

"You can amend the tenement house law. You could repeal drastic and costly regulations, enacted in a period of hysteria, at the instance of parlor socialists, but such measure would be controversial, and the building season would be well advanced before any law could be enacted," this protest read in part.

"As a matter of fact, if you will leave the situation alone, it will remedy itself. There is already a great building boom in Brooklyn, and hundreds of one-and two-family houses are being erected, and if capital realizes, even with wages 107 per cent. higher than in 1914 and materials 80 per cent. greater in cost, that houses can be built and sold or rented profitably, there will be abundant funds to do all the building necessary.

"Rents will be permanently higher, however, as everything else is permanently higher and there must be an immediate cessation of the present abuse of landlords," the Real Estate Board's statement concluded.

No Special Session in North Dakota.

BISMARCK, N. D., June 16.—Governor Frazier today informed suffrage leaders that he will not call a special session of the State Legislature for the sole purpose of ratifying the national suffrage amendment. Governor Frazier told Miss Alice Paul of St. Paul that the Legislature undoubtedly will approve the amendment "at the first reasonable opportunity."

OHIO AND KANSAS RATIFY.

Make Five Western States That Adopt Amendment.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, June 16.—The General Assembly today ratified the Federal woman suffrage amendment and immediately afterward passed a bill to give Ohio women the right to vote for Presidential Electors in 1920 should the Federal amendment not be in effect then. The vote on ratification was 73 to 6 in the House and 27 to 3 in the Senate.

TOPEKA, Kan., June 16.—The Legislature in special session today unanimously ratified the woman suffrage amendment to the United States Constitution.

Three States that ratified the amendment previous to these were Wisconsin, Illinois, and Michigan.

ANTIS ASSAIL SUFFRAGE VOTE.

As 'Voters' They Warn Albany That Federal Rule Is Resented.

In a communication addressed to the State Legislature, now in special session for consideration of the ratification of the Federal suffrage amendment, the Women Voters' Anti-Suffrage Party, with headquarters at 289 Madison Avenue, declares that the "special session" is an unnecessary expense at this time, and that the leaders actually back the "stack of the political whip." As to whether or not what it calls the "gamble" of the special session will be successful at the polls, the Women's Voters' Anti-Suffrage Party points to the political fate of Governor Whitman, who staked his all on suffrage.

The party's communication follows:

"We, voters of New York State, are aware that your ratification of the Federal suffrage amendment is a foregone conclusion. We make no appeal. We simply notify you that the country is now alive to the fact that nine highly financed special interests, controlling Congress and State Legislatures, are dangerously with the Constitution of the United States. They are using it as a vehicle to fasten on the nation laws which the people of the several States will not grant at the polls, and as a steam-roller to crush out State sovereignty.

"This 'tampering' will not stop with this amendment. Any special interest, sufficiently fanatical and financed, now knows that failure to win consent from the people simply means concentration on vulnerable members of Congress and Legislatures. Under pressure of special interests you are opening the way for the United States Constitution to become a collection of force bills on temperance, universal issues, and blanket laws or sectional measures possibly requiring enforcement by Federal troops, and inevitably leading to sectional retaliation. Northern Congressmen were openly accused of voting for the Federal suffrage amendment in retaliation by the North on the South for the prohibition amendment. Western interests may invoke the United States Constitution to attack Eastern business interests, &c.

"The people's so-called representatives are perverting the Constitution of the United States, former safeguard of the people's liberty, into an instrument of political trickery and oppression. We know, and all the country knows, the many kinds of pressure that the suffrage ring has used to force this amendment. Suffrage leaders have boasted of their control over the people's representatives. You know and we know that New York, having woman suffrage, does not need a ratification of the Federal amendment at this time, that this unnecessary 'special session' is an unwarranted expense on the already overburdened taxpayers; that it is a personal political concession to the dictation of suffrage leaders and as such should be paid for either by the Governor himself or out of his party's political campaign fund.

"A vote 'Yes' means: 'I, of New York, will do my utmost to force woman suffrage on the fifteen States that have defeated it at the polls, and on the nineteen States that have refused to consider it; force it back on New Jersey and Ohio that have repealed it, and fasten it on New York, where women themselves are dissatisfied and writing to repeal it.'

"We know that now you are answering the crack of the political whip and that you are stalking over all on the scent [suffrage] woman's vote. You know the risk of this political gamble. You have not forgotten the two previous suffrage deals with their disastrous results to Candidates Hughes and Whitman. You are not at all sure that woman suffrage is a winning card for the 1920 election. Chairman Will Hays to the contrary notwithstanding.

"You must wonder, with Governor Whitman, what became of the much-advertised New York City suffrage machine in the 1918 election, in the complete collapse in the suffrage strongheld—the home of the suffrage leaders, Mrs. Catt, Miss Hay, Mrs. Whitehouse, Mrs. Laidlaw, Mrs. Belmont, &c.—the actual suffrage champion, Governor Whitman, received 9,541 fewer votes, with women voting, than he polled in 1916 from men alone.

"You are making a miscalculation in featuring woman suffrage at this reconstruction period. The people are demanding a return to normal conditions and sound business basis. You are forcing on the country a revolutionary element that is a disturbing element in your own State and is known to increase the power of revolutionary factions in every State. The people are demanding back from the Federal Government the powers usurped temporarily as States and individuals for the period of the war. You, on the other hand, in ratifying this or any other Federal amendment on a controversial issue, are forcing on the people a supreme measure of Federal interference in their local affairs.

"What you will gain from it politically remains to be seen."

Women Voters' Anti-Suffrage Party, co-operating with established parties against radicalism, 289 Madison Avenue, New York."

This communication has been sent personally to every man in both houses of the Legislature.

DENIES RENT RISE COERCION.

City Employe Says Use of Name on Notice Was Unauthorized.

At the request of Mayor Hylan, sent through Corporation Counsel Burr, David Hirshfield, Commissioner of Accounts, yesterday conducted an inquiry into the allegations in an article published in The Brooklyn Eagle on May 1, alleging that the name of Abraham G. Tonkonogy of the Brooklyn branch of the Corporation Counsel's office had been used on notices of rent increases in a house at 859 St. John's Place.

One of the tenants of the house was John F. Crotty, a member of the staff of The Brooklyn Eagle. He was called as a witness in the hearing and showed the Commissioner the notice of an increase of rent from $35 to $50, the notice designating Abraham G. Tonkonogy as agent. He testified that Tonkonogy had called at the office of The Eagle and had told him that if the matter was printed in the paper the concession that had been tentatively agreed upon at previous interview would not be granted.

Anthony Gould of the Ettrick Realty Company and Boris Hershinof, the present owner of the house, testified that their dealings had been with George Tonkonogy, the father of Abraham G. Tonkonogy, and when the latter took the stand he declared that he had at no time been financially interested, either directly or indirectly, in the premises, but that he had thought, since he lived in the house, it would be advantageous to the tenants and to his father to have his name incorporated in the notices so that tenants could see him in regard to the increases. He said he had never received any profits from the house, that he had never collected any rents, that he had never represented himself as agent, and that he had signed no notices.

When the father took the stand he corroborated this testimony and testified that he had not seen the notices which included the statement that owing to higher taxes the rents were increased. He said they were written by a clerk in his office and that he had not told the clerk to mention his son's name.

APPEAL FOR FARM LABOR.

National Board Petitions Congress to Continue Employment Service.

The National Board of Farm Organizations announced yesterday that it had petitioned Congress to continue the United States Employment Service because of the alarming labor shortage in farming districts, which is said to endanger the harvesting of this year's crop, which will otherwise be a bumper crop.

"No labor problem is more serious than that of supplying adequate farm labor," the board said in its letter to committees in the House and Senate, "and although we understand there is a surplus of labor in certain centres, still the farmers are having great difficulty in obtaining sufficient labor to meet their requirements."

Dr. George W. Kirchwey, Director of the United States Employment Service for the State of New York, issued an appeal to the unemployed in this city to work on farms. "There are thousands of splendid opportunities listed at our Bureau of Agricultural placements, 21 East Twenty-second Street, and no man who is unemployed at the present time can afford to let this opportunity pass without careful consideration," said Dr. Kirchwey. "Unemployment in New York City is greater than at any time since the signing of the armistice. The man who is minus a job, and especially the unskilled man, has no alternative except to go 'back to the farm.'"

BOYS MAY LOSE DIPLOMAS.

High School Pupils Accused of Spreading Radical Doctrines.

Two boy pupils in the high schools will probably not receive their graduation diplomas when the commencement exercises are held next week. One is accused of disloyalty; the moral character of the other has been questioned.

The first pay is a pupil in the Morris High School. He is alleged to have said that he did not believe the problems confronting the United States would be settled peaceably and democratically, and advocated revolution instead. The other boy, who was in the same school, is said to have advocated free love doctrines. Girl pupils repeated his conversation to their teachers, and it was decided to transfer the offender to the De Witt Clinton High School, which receives boy pupils only. After the transfer, it is alleged, the boy continued his objectionable talk.

The school rules require each student, before graduation, to express his loyalty to the city, State and Nation. They also provide that a pupil whose moral character is not good may be refused graduation papers.

Associate Superintendent John L. Tildsley said yesterday that the answers by high school pupils to the war questionaires would be received by City Superintendent Ettinger and himself in a few days. The war facts test will be submitted to the elementary schools this week.

Action in the case of George J. Smith, member of the Board of Examiners, who, as toastmaster at the Walt Whitman festival at the Hotel Brevoort, introduced George S. Vierick as one of the speakers, and who commented on a telegram sent by Emma Goldman, may be taken at the meeting of the committee of the whole of the Board of Education tomorrow.

WANT NEW COURT BUILDING.

Federal Judges, in Resolutions, Favor Mulberry Bend Site.

The Federal Court Judges at a meeting yesterday adopted a resolution favoring the exchange of the Federal Building for a site to be furnished by the city at Mulberry Bend.

The resolution favors a new court building "with adequate accommodations, among other departments, for the great and constantly increasing business of the Federal Courts and their offices." Judge Henry G. Ward presided at the meeting.

ASKS COURT TO BAR EXHIBIT IN PARK

Taxpayer's Suit Seeks Injunction to Prohibit Use of Arsenal by Safety Institute.

CALLS THE LEASE ILLEGAL

William H. Williams Sees Move as Opening Wedge for Other Encroachments.

Legal proceedings to prevent the occupation by the Safety Institute of America of the Arsenal in Central Park, under the terms of a lease executed by Park Commissioner Galatin and the society on April 23 last by which the Arsenal is to be remodeled by the society as an exhibition building, were started yesterday by William H. Williams, of 28 West Fifty-eighth Street, Vice President of Gaston, Williams & Wigmore, Inc.,

Mr. Williams sues as a taxpayer but his action is taken as the result of a protest by many citizens and by the Parks and Playgrounds Association, with the encouragement of Supreme Court Justice Eugene A. Philbin, against the use of the park building for the purposes of a private organization whose objects have no connection with the parks of the city. On Mr. Williams's application Justice Tierney signed an order returnable tomorrow directing the Safety Institute and the Park Commissioner to show cause why the injunction should not be granted. The papers were served on William J. Moran, general counsel of the Travelers' Insurance Company, as Secretary of the institute.

Wants Building Barred.

The relief asked for in the complaint is that the defendants be restrained from "acting under or performing any of the terms, stipulations and conditions or from enforcing the lease, agreement or writing referred to in the complaint, and restraining the Safety Institute of America from proceeding with the erection, construction, alteration or occupancy of the Arsenal building.

Mr. Williams says in his petition, drawn by William B. Roulstone, that he is a taxpayer for more than $1,000, and says he has been advised by his counsel, Mr. Roulstone, that the Park Commissioner "has no right or authority in law to lease to the defendant, the Safety Institute of America, the Arsenal Building, or to make such lease to any other corporation or enterprise whose functions and powers do not come immediately within the provisions of the law applicable."

He alleges that the lease has been entered into between the Park Commissioner and the Institute "without authority of law, and except in violation of the laws of the State its terms cannot be carried out."

Mr. Williams attached to his petition the list published in THE TIMES by the Parks and Playgrounds Association of various attempts made in recent years to encroach on the park property of the city for various reasons, which have been opposed by the association, and says:

Parks Immune So Far.

"From all these divers enterprises, although many of the same were most worthy in their concept and purpose, nevertheless the parks of the City of New York have so far been largely protected and have enjoyed immunity from such invasion, and thereby have been largely preserved inviolate, as it is most and proper they should be, for the whole people of the City of New York at all classes, kinds, and conditions, without restriction as to race or creed."

The plaintiff said he has investigated the purposes of the Safety Institute and regards it as "worthy of the most liberal support and indorsement of the public at large for its principles, worthy objects, and purposes, the minimizing of injuries to workmen and others, and should have the full support and should obtain as conspicuous a place as possible for its exhibition, to the end that it may carry out its worthy objects and purposes."

Mr. Williams says, however, that he views with great apprehension the occupancy of the Arsenal Building in Central Park for that purpose, and in similar manner views this and every other encroachment upon Central Park and every other park of the city with the greatest apprehension that if the opening wedge is ever driven in, and it is regarded that the occupation of the Arsenal by the defendant would be such opening wedge, there would never be an end to the encroachments upon the public park spaces of the city, which public park spaces at the present time are at best meagre and wholly inadequate for the vast population crowded within the limits of this city; and this is particularly true of the parts and limits by which the Borough of Manhattan is bounded."

For the reasons stated, Mr. Williams asked that the courts pass on the question at the earliest possible moment. He said in his complaint that the occupancy of the Arsenal by the Safety Institute will not "enhance the enjoyment of the park by the people of New York, but will diminish the opportunity of the people and public to use and enjoy Central Park as a place of amusement, recreation, and exercise."

TUMULTY DENIES RUMOR.

Did Not Intimate President Would Abrogate Wartime Prohibition.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Denial was made at the White House today that Joseph P. Tumulty, private secretary to President Wilson, had given any intimation that President Wilson would order wartime prohibition canceled before July 1. Mr. Tumulty stated he had made no statement that could be twisted to have such a meaning.

The denial was made when it was called to Mr. Tumulty's attention that there was a report in Jersey City that he had advised liquor men to renew their licenses, because the President would abrogate wartime prohibition.

Senator Phelan announced that he would try to have his bill for the exemption of beer and wines from wartime prohibition placed in the Agriculture Appropriation bill as a rider. This bill is to come before the Senate tomorrow, but the Phelan bill would be subject to a point of order. Senator Phelan will move for a suspension of the rules.

CLASH ON EVIDENCE IN FORD LIBEL SUIT

Judge Tucker Intimates That Preparedness Is Irrelevant to the Case.

FLOYD GIBBONS TESTIFIES

Counsel Object to Account of Conditions on the Mexican Border in 1916.

Special to The New York Times.

MT. CLEMENS, Mich., June 16.—Exclusion of evidence bearing on the state of preparedness of the United States for military activity at the time of mobilizing the National Guard for Mexican border duty in 1916 was intimated by Judge Tucker today at the beginning of the sixth week of Henry Ford's million-dollar libel suit against The Chicago Tribune for its editorial calling him an anarchist.

This opinion was explained by the Court in response to an objection by the Ford counsel to the line of questioning pursued with Floyd Gibbons, war correspondent.

It was the subject of a long and heated argument with Alfred Lucking and Alfred J. Murphy speaking and arguing for the plaintiff, and Kirkland and Elliott G. Stevenson maintaining that the question of preparedness was directly involved.

They took the ground that Henry Ford's public expressions against heavy military equipment for the country and against the necessity of armed intervention in Mexico had had a direct result on the country's military condition at the time of the Mexican outrages, and thus helping to clip the wings of the country. They maintained Mr. Ford had constituted himself an enemy of the public and in effect an anarchist.

This point was emphatically sustained by Mr. Stevenson. He insisted to the court that the defense should be allowed to show what the actual strength and equipment of the border forces were at that time.

Mr. Stevenson reiterated that Mr. Ford had spent "millions of dollars" to spread the propaganda of unpreparedness.

Mr. Lucking declared that Mr. Ford's personal expenditure in his campaign which included the full page advertisement, "Humanity and Sanity," would not exceed $30,000.

He asserted that even if it were proved that Mr. Ford had sought by these advertisements and other expressions to cut off further war preparation, which the counsel vehemently denied, it could have had no effect on the state of our military strength at the time of the Mexican expedition two months later, or the war program in Congress, which Mr. Ford thought unwise, could not have taken tangible shape [illegible] that year.

"If the Tribune counsel were able to furnish proof that Mr. Ford was an anarchist, he should not put up the bars against their introduction," said Mr. Lucking. "We maintain, however, that the matters they refer to had no connection with that question.

"How a man stood at a certain time on the subject of military preparedness," he said, does not prove that he was or was not an anarchist. A very large body of American citizens thought just as Mr. Ford did at that time."

Mr. Lucking characterized as "a simple dirty piece of yellowness" the introduction of expressions from the Edward Marshall interview with Mr. Ford, in which he was quoted as saying that the word "murderer" should be embroidered on the breast of every soldier, and references were made to the American flag and to the sinking of navies and junking of military equipment.

"They have not dared introduce the entire article," exclaimed Mr. Lucking. "If they don't, we shall."

Mr. Stevenson declared that the defense would show that Mr. Ford's attitude was as stated in the editorial, and that he had pursued a line of conduct which would mark him an anarchist.

Floyd Gibbons continued his testimony, covering his experience first as a correspondent attached to the forces of Villa and later with General Pershing.

Beautiful Teeth

Are Now Attained in This Way

All Statements Approved by High Dental Authorities

By Ending Film

A film on your teeth is what discolors them. It is also the basis of tartar.

It is that slimy film which you feel with your tongue. It clings and tartar forms. It gets into crevices and stays. And it causes most tooth troubles.

The tooth brush does not completely remove it. The ordinary tooth paste cannot dissolve it. So millions find that well-brushed teeth discolor and decay.

That film holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Dental authorities long have known that this film is the great tooth wrecker. They have known that brushing did not end it. They have seen tooth troubles constantly increase.

But now they have found, and amply proved, a way which does combat it. It is based on pepsin, and is now embodied in a dentifrice called Pepsodent.

It proves itself. You can see the results. So we ask you to try it for ten days and see what it does for your teeth.

A Delightful Test

Pepsodent is delightful. This ten-day test will be simple and pleasant and free. And it has brought to countless homes a new era in teeth cleaning.

Able authorities, for five years, have proved it in every way. Leading dentists everywhere advise it. So you owe to yourself this test.

Pepsodent is based on pepsin, the digestant of albumin. The film is albuminous matter. The object of Pepsodent is to dissolve it, then to constantly combat it.

Pepsin long seemed impossible. It must be activated, and the usual agent is an acid harmful to the teeth. But science discovered a harmless activating method. And that new method, combined with other agents, gives to Pepsodent its power to fight this film.

You know, we believe, that your present methods are inadequate. They do not end film, do not save the teeth. Then let us send you a 10-Day Tube to show what this new way does.

TRIANGLE Pictures Immortal

In the past ten years a few motion pictures have been produced which are really great—great in conception, in artistry, in genius of direction and camera wizardry.

Film Art has won its way in the hearts of millions because of these few wonderful pictures, just as literature, music, sculpture and painting are measured by their masterpieces.

Dozens of good pictures are produced every month—pictures well worth seeing. But once in a great while there is created a picture that will never die—a picture that touches the heart, that is colored with romance, shadowed with tragedy, a picture that sparkles, thrills and supremely satisfies—A Picture Immortal.

From thousands of pictures produced in the last ten years, we have selected twelve which, measured by the judgment of the most prominent film authorities and by the supreme judgment of the theatre-going public, are the finest examples that Motion Picture Art has achieved.

These Pictures are priceless—they rank with the masterpieces of older arts—with great paintings or classics of literature.

By special arrangement with leading Motion Picture theatres in New York, these twelve pictures are once more offered to lovers of Film Art.

The Responsibility Is Entirely Our Own

While many Goodyear Service Station Dealers have fairly adequate stocks of Goodyear Tires, there are other such dealers whose stocks are very low.

Occasionally a Goodyear user who is unable to have his wants filled by one of these latter dealers is inclined to blame the dealer for his disappointment.

Almost always such a dealer is without fault in the matter, and the responsibility for his shortage is entirely our own.

The truth is, that in converting our business back to a peace-time production basis, we failed adequately to estimate the full measure of Goodyear Tires' popularity.

With the signing of the armistice and the completion of our obligations to the government, we embarked our factories on the heaviest tire production schedule they had ever known.

Basing our estimates on pre-war demands and allowing for what we thought to be a generous margin in addition, we felt reasonably certain that our program was sufficient.

Although we have accomplished this schedule—and have since even exceeded it—there are still hardly enough Goodyear Tires to go 'round.

In other words, our production, which, during the past 2 weeks, averaged the enormous figure of 24,103 finished tires per day, is yet insufficient fully to satisfy public demand.

Of course we are employing every proper means to remedy this condition, and to establish ample stocks of Goodyear Tires everywhere.

Until this is accomplished, however, we suggest that you anticipate your future requirements by placing a reservation order with your Goodyear Service Station Dealer.

Many Goodyear users already have placed such orders, and have thus protected themselves against any inconvenience that might otherwise arise.

For our part we are undertaking the immediate expansion of our volume, in an endeavor to make Goodyear Tires as easy to get as they are worth while to use.

BREWERS' CASE UP TODAY

Root and Guthrie Will Submit Brief Quoting Many Decisions Defining Intoxication.

Beer containing 2.75 per cent. alcohol, which is defended in an elaborate brief prepared by Elihu Root and William D. Guthrie for submission today to the Circuit Court of Appeals, was indorsed yesterday by the Allied Medical Association of America, which is holding its annual convention at the Hotel Pennsylvania.

About 100 medical men from all parts of the country, who were present at the gathering, voted unanimously in favor of the resolution, which was as follows:

"Resolved, That the Allied Medical Association of America, in convention met in the Pennsylvania Hotel, New York City, N. Y., hereby go on record as convinced of the necessity of properly brewed lager beer in the treatment of certain of the patients of its members, to whom the mildly stimulating and nourishing properties of such beer are absolutely essential.

"Furthermore, That the so-called war beers as brewed at present, containing not to exceed 2¾ per cent. alcohol by weight, are not only beneficial to humanity at large when drunk in moderation, but are also admirably adapted as a substitute for stronger alcoholic drinks now consumed by our people in large quantities and as a variant for the many kinds of so-called soft drinks on the market, all of which cannot be recommended without reservations; be it further

"Resolved, That this association recommend and endorse grape products, light wines, if pure, as beneficial to our patients in many conditions, as both a stimulant and medicine and as a measure to prevent the increased use of narcotics."

Study of 2.75 Beer.

The brief of Root and Guthrie will be submitted to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, which will consider today the appeal of Acting Collector of Internal Revenue Richard J. McElligott from the decision of the United States District Court, which has the effect of an order to the Collector not to interfere with the manufacture and sale of "2.75 per cent. beer."

The brief submits elaborate medical opinion to prove that "2.75 per cent. beer" is not intoxicating and an exhaustive quotation of legal and constitutional authorities from Thomas Jefferson on down to prove that the wording of the Wartime Prohibition act does not forbid the manufacture of beer, but only of beer which has enough alcohol in it to be intoxicating. The brief is then addressed to a large number of questions concerning the meaning and application of the word "intoxication," which are said to constitute one of the most complex and difficult problems ever placed before a court.

The main points are: What mental and physical effects must be displayed by the subject before it can properly be said that he is intoxicated? How much alcohol does it take to produce such a state? Should the intoxicating effects of a liquor be gauged by its effect on a normal person, or should a man, woman, and child having the greatest susceptibility to alcohol be taken as a standard in judging intoxicants?

Many decisions are submitted to prove that "an intoxicated person" is one showing marked signs of the use of alcohol. One of the definitions given is the following, written by the court in St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Waters:

"A man may be said to be drunk whenever he is under the influence of intoxicating liquors to the extent that they affect his acts or conduct, so that persons coming in contact with him could readily see and know that the intoxicating liquors were affecting him in that respect."

Another quotation is from the decision in Gard. v. State, 15 Ch. C. C.:

"There are various degrees of intoxication. * * * The proof shows that the plaintiff, at the time of his arrest, had a flushed face; was talkative, talking loudly, and that his breath smelled of intoxicating liquors that could be detected three or four feet away. * * * We are of the opinion that the statute contemplates something different from what the proof shows; that, while any sort of exhilaration from the use of intoxicating beverages might be termed 'intoxication,' yet the statute contemplates that something more than is shown by the proof in the case should be included in the charge made. Whoever is found in a state of intoxication would, by implication, mean that the party accused had lost control to some extent, either of his faculties or possibly of his muscles."

The following instruction by the court in Lafler v. Fisher, 121 Mich. 60, is also quoted:

"I want to say a word to you in reference to what may be deemed 'an intoxicated person' within the meaning of the statute. When it is apparent that the person is under the influence of liquor, or when his manner is unusual and abnormal and his inebriate condition is reflected in his walk or conversation, when his ordinary judgment and common sense are disturbed or his usual will-power is temporarily suspended, when these or similar symptoms result from the use of liquors and are manifest, then within the meaning of the statute the person is intoxicated."

Views of Medical Men.

The briefs present the results of experiments conducted by medical men of high rank to ascertain the effect of the "war beer" and the opinions of numerous medical authorities to the effect that the human stomach will not hold enough beer of 2.75 per cent. strength to produce intoxication, and that even by continuing to drink and keep the stomach full, the drinker cannot introduce alcohol into his system as fast as his system consumes it and throws it off. Several of the contentions of authorities cited by the Government against "war beer" are dealt with in the briefs, notably that of Dr. Wiley. The brief says:

"Dr. Harvey W. Wiley bases his conclusions that war beer is intoxicating upon his assumption that all alcohol is toxic. Dr. John S. Billings, with other celebrated authorities, writing for the Committee of Fifty," scouts this idea, and declares: 'The term poison applies with equal propriety to a number of other food accessories, as coffee, pepper, ginger, and even common salt.' According to the contention of Dr. Wiley, an infinitesimal dose of alcohol would produce a small degree of intoxication. Such reasoning can serve no useful purpose, and can be of little or no help to any court."

Commenting on decisions, intended to prove that a beverage to be considered intoxicating must be capable of intoxicating an ordinary person, the brief says:

"These groups of decisions clearly imply that it is the drinking capacity of the ordinary man which is the test, and not the drinking capacity of any extreme type of individual or one with idiosyncracies. Lawmakers framing legislation must deal with general tendencies and general characteristics, with the average and not with the exceptional or peculiar. Thus, the first group of cases lays the emphasis upon the quantity which 'may be practically drunk,' while the second emphasizes the quantity which 'the human stomach' can ordinarily contain. It is to be observed that the test is nowhere stated to be that minimum of the liquor which any individual can drink or any human stomach can hold. As is usual in the law, the ordinary person under ordinary circumstances constitutes the standard or norm to be adopted. The slightest reflection must reveal that that is, indeed, the conception which is commonly intended when we speak of 'intoxicating liquors' in everyday life. Otherwise there could be no common standard or agreement or understanding among men when they employed these terms."

Acting Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue McElligott was directed yesterday, by telegram from Commissioner Roper in Washington to issue internal revenue stamps to wholesale and retail liquor dealers, if they insisted on having them, but to warn them that these stamps would not confer immunity if it was found that they had violated the law.

BARS BEER IN CANCER CASES.

Homeopathic Doctor Would Also Confine Diet to Vegetables.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., June 16.—All alcoholic beverages must be entirely eliminated and a vegetable diet adopted in the case of sufferers from cancer, if a cure would be effected, according to Dr. Ralph Bernstein, professor of skin diseases at Hahnemann Hospital, Philadelphia, who spoke this afternoon before the delegates to the seventy-fifth annual convention of the National Institute of Homeopaths, here.

"One way to prevent cancer," said the speaker, "is for a sufferer from a mole, wart, or any abnormality of the skin to seek immediate treatment and have the matter thoroughly decancerized. In most instances the sufferers themselves are to blame for the spread of cancer. They treat the matter lightly at the start, neglect to have medical attention, and suddenly they find their cases serious."

The speaker declared that great strides had been made in the treatment of cancer, due principally to the use of the X-ray, which he said had practically taken the place of the knife.

Another speaker was Lieut. Col. Frederic H. Dearborn, Medical Corps, U. S. A., President of the Institution. He referred to the work of the homeopaths during the war, declared they had done wonderfully good work, and were to continue during reconstruction.

PLAN TUBERCULOSIS TOWNS

Army Medical Men Tell of Needs for Control of White Plague.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 16.—The responsibility of the Government for the proper care and treatment of the thousands of tuberculosis soldiers before they are returned to civil life was told here today before the annual meeting of the National Tuberculosis Association by army medical men and representatives of the Surgeon General's Office.

Colonel Estes Nichols, Commandant, United States Army General Hospital No. 16, at New Haven, Conn., described a plan which he said was now being considered to give this form of treatment in special reconstruction towns or communities.

"These towns," said Colonel Nichols, "might be located upon lands in the national forests. This would permit of the setting up of attractive and healthful woodworking industries for the patients and afford an opportunity for them to retain control of land holdings after they were cured. No matter where these towns might be located, proper medical supervision would be necessary, but whereas medical treatment has first place in sanatorium care of sufferers from tuberculosis, productive industry would take precedence in the towns. These communities would require financial assistance at first, but eventually might become self-supporting."

ADRIATIC SAILS WITH 1,283.

Lady Duff Gordon, Before Leaving, Predicts Return of Long Skirts.

The White Star liner Adriatic sailed yesterday for Liverpool with 1,283 passengers, said to be the largest number of civilians departing for Europe this year. Among those who booked passage were H. Granville Barker, Mr. and Mrs. Howard J. Gould, Mr. and Mrs. James Heckscher, Baroness de Erp, Rear Admiral H. A. Wiley, Cyril Maude, Lady Duff Gordon, and Brig. Gen. Charles Lee.

Before sailing Lady Duff Gordon denied that she had ever spoken slightingly of America. She said the statements attributed to her at a recent trial were untrue. Discussing future fashions, she predicted the early discard of the short skirt.

"During the war," she said, "those who usually decreed the fashions gave little thought to clothes. The result was the fashion fakirs of Paris foisted the short skirt on the shop girls and the midinettes while the others were not looking, so to speak. Now that the war is over and the women have returned to normal pursuits I look for a speedy return to long skirts."

Colonel Guillaume Vanderhaeghen, Captain Henry Servais, and Lieutenant Julien Le Roux, members of the Belgian Purchasing Commission, who have been in the United States to get horses for their Government, also sailed on the Adriatic.

WELCOME NEW CITIZENS.

Wagner Warns Meeting Against Those Who Denounce Government.

At a citizen reception meeting of the League of Foreign Born Citizens, last night at its downtown headquarters, 95 Second Avenue, 300 persons who had received their naturalization papers in the last month were greeted as American citizens. They represented thirteen nationalities. The principal speaker was Justice Robert F. Wagner of the New York Supreme Court. Nathan Phillips, President of the league, introduced the speakers.

Justice Wagner told the newly made citizens that those people who attempted to sow seeds of discontent among them, who denounced the Government as capitalistic and as controlled by the interests, were either fools or knaves, and that the red flag would never fly over any public building in the United States as long as there was one drop of American blood flowing in young men's veins. As an instance of the young man's possibilities in America he cited his own career, in which he had risen from a poor boy living in the same district in which his audience lived, to a Supreme Court Justice, and in closing told how the present Governor of New York, Alfred E. Smith, had attained eminence solely through his own efforts.

Why Guarding the Flag Is the World's Finest Business

Unequalled Opportunities for Red-Blooded Men in the UNITED STATES ARMY

DID you think your opportunity to become a soldier passed with the signing of the Armistice, or that Uncle Sam no longer needed soldiers?

The men who are returning from the big victory are entitled to immediate discharge. Many are eager to re-enlist, others are going back home and to work. Replacement troops are therefore necessary. Uncle Sam will maintain a ready, efficient, patriotic army to guard the Flag, which flies in many parts of the world.

This must be a volunteer army, made up of men who believe with all their hearts that being a soldier of the United States is the finest business in the world.

50,000 MEN WANTED

for Immediate Service in France and on the Rhine

Replacement troops are now being recruited for immediate overseas service. Do you want to go along as an active participant in the interesting events during the period of occupation? Do you want to see battle-scarred France and the great River Rhine, which the Germans thought no enemy would ever cross?

Or would you prefer to go to Panama, Hawaii, the Philippines, China, or Alaska? Well, if you're the right kind of chap, Uncle Sam wants you. Thousands of Americans would gladly pay for this experience. You will get paid for it.

What is meant by "the right kind of chap"? One in good physical condition, with a clean mind, ambition, alertness, intelligence. That's you, isn't it? You have the stuff of a good citizen in you, of course. Then you have the stuff of a good soldier. And, when you have served out your enlistment, you should be twice as good a citizen!

Good Pay—Enjoyable, Inspiring Work—Recreation and Man-Building

YOU are the Sort of Chap Uncle Sam Wants: Read What He Offers

Food, clothing, living quarters, medical and dental attention—all of the very best quality—absolutely FREE. The pay starts at $30.00 a month. This seems small until you stop to think that you get pretty nearly everything FREE. In other words, with the exception of tobacco, if you use it, and such extras as you may choose to buy, you have a net profit of about a dollar a day.

Can you pay all your expenses from your present income and have a dollar a day left over? Probably not.

The work is of two kinds: Military and educational. The military work comprises your duties as a soldier. This is mainly out-of-door work. Some of it is almost athletic in character. It is usually interesting, ofttimes inspiring. It is sufficient to give your body and mind useful, constructive discipline. It inculcates self-control, quick-thinking, alertness, regularity, exactness, bodily fitness. It makes you hard as nails; a trained, co-ordinated unit of clean bone and muscle. If you're plump, it turns your fat into brawn; if you're thin, it fills out the spaces between your ribs and builds muscle in chest and arm. Most men gain weight as a result of army life!

How Uncle Sam Makes His Soldiers Into Useful Civilians

Uncle Sam offers his soldiers absolutely free many opportunities for educational training.

In the Army, a man who wants a common school education can have it. A man who wants to learn a technical trade can obtain both instruction and practice, if he takes advantage of this possibility. Uncle Sam pays you while you study. EARN WHILE YOU LEARN!

Vocational Training in the Army Fits You for Success

Suppose you are a young man looking about you for a trade as a stepping stone to success in life. To learn such a trade you must either work for very low wages during your apprenticeship, or else go to a trade school; and in both these cases you have to find yourself while learning. Uncle Sam gives you your living, gives you the opportunity to learn a trade and pays you real money at the same time. And when you complete your enlistment and obtain your discharge, if you have made use of your opportunity you find yourself a trained man, and your services will be in demand wherever skilled men are employed. Among these skilled trades are:

Land Surveying	Switchboard Installation	Lithography
Auto Repairing		Bricklaying
Telephone Repairing	Motor Mechanics	Blacksmithing
Road Construction	(air or ground)	Masonry
Wireless Telegraphy	Baking and Cooking	Welding
Drafting	Carpentry	(Acetylene and Electric)
Telegraphy	Photography	Airplane Mechanics
Steamfitting	Electrical Work	Plumbing

and a great many others.

Liberty and Recreation

The army is run like a business, with hours for work and hours of freedom. The soldier off duty writes letters, smokes, plays baseball, pool, football or most any other game he likes; goes to the movies, or theatres; calls on his girl, if he has one—in fact, does about as he likes. Being in uniform, his self-respect as well as the rules of the Service demands that he conduct himself as a soldier and a gentleman. He has no difficulty in obtaining permission to leave the camp or post at proper times, and he may obtain leave when his turn comes. He meets agreeable people, including lots of nice girls, at Hostess Houses, etc. He goes to dances, if he wants to. In fact, he usually has a better time than a civilian.

Now, Men, What Do You Want? Name It and the Chances Are You Can Have It!

Where do you want to go? Do you want to see foreign lands?

France and the Rhine (50,000 going right away)
Panama, Hawaiian Islands, Philippine Islands, China, Alaska

Men are wanted for certain branches of the Service in each of the above places. You can go anywhere you choose, provided the branch of service you select is open for that place.

What branch of the Service do you like best?

Infantry	Medical Dept. (including Veterinary Corps)	Air Service (Balloon Corps)
Cavalry		Quartermaster Corps
Field Artillery	Motor Transport	Corps of Engineers
Ordnance Dept.	Tank Corps	Construction Division
Coast Artillery Corps
Signal Corps

You can select the branch of the Service you like. You can enlist for Foreign Service if you wish. This means extra pay.

What sort of education do you want? What useful skilled trade would you like to learn?

Well, man, in the Air Service alone there are Forty-one Skilled Trades, and in some of the other branches there are still more. You can learn almost any trade you wish, and quit at the end of your enlistment with money in the bank and an absolutely certain livelihood in your brain and at your finger-tips, provided you really want to do these things.

Do you want to stick in the Army?

Very well. There are vacancies for Corporals, Sergeants and the Non-Commissioned Staff grades with increased pay, opportunity and experience. Appointments of qualified enlisted men to West Point are frequently made. The regulations provide that at all times there shall be men so appointed, to a number not exceeding ninety. Many men also receive commissions direct from the ranks.

Call at the nearest recruiting station and ask all the questions you wish. You incur not the slightest obligation by doing so. Courteous non-commissioned officers on duty will cheerfully tell you whatever you want to know and give you printed matter that you can look over at your home.

What else do you want to know? This advertisement tells only a part of the story. Get the rest today. Don't delay. Act now!

THE PRESIDENT'S TOUR.

Mr. WILSON has one quality which detraction cannot withhold or spite deny to him. His power of statement is recognized. It is remarkable, long ago it carried him to a foremost place among the statesmen who have been responsible for national policies during the war. It made him the spokesman of the nations associated against Germany. He has the power and the ability to state a purpose, a policy, or an international ideal, in a way that arrests the attention and makes a powerful impression on the mind of the public. For this reason the announcement that the President, soon after his return from France, will address Congress and then make a tour of the country rendering to the people an account of his labors at Paris, of the deliberations and decisions of the Council, of the Treaty and of the League of Nations, is most welcome. The interest of the whole people has been centred upon the work of the Council, their desire for full and authoritative information is keen, and from Mr. WILSON they will have information at first hand. Probably few communities in the country have places of assembly large enough to contain all those who will wish to hear him.

We give small credence to the report that he will meet Congress and the people "in a fighting mood." The President will go forth for exposition, not for battle. President ROOSEVELT used sometimes to appeal to the people over the heads of Congress; he was a born fighter, loved fighting, and the American people doubtless most admired him when he was in a combative mood. Mr. WILSON has no such inborn joy of strife and the great duty that awaits him will be better performed in another way. To the problems the Council has to solve he has given more attention than any other American. His knowledge of the nature and the motives of the peace conditions imposed on Germany is complete, the League of Nations covenant is largely his own work. It is about these things that Americans wish to be informed. The President has taken a wise resolve in deciding to go before them and tell them frankly and fully what they want to know about the terms of peace and the covenant, to communicate much information which was necessarily withheld while the enormously difficult and delicate negotiations were in progress.

The President has been attacked, often with unseemly violence and in a manner that, it seems to us, has sometimes been unfair and from motives that many times have been questioned. Against such attack the defense of clenched teeth and the fist pounding the table are always available. They are not the best weapons—at least, they are not the best for this emergency. We have no shadow of a doubt that when the American people are put in possession of the facts within Mr. WILSON'S knowledge, when they are made to understand, as he will make them understand, the views he has taken of the peace terms and of the League covenant, when the great plan and purpose of the League of Nations is put before them in his clear expository manner, and when the immeasurable benefits which enlightened statesmen and fair-minded, reasonable men everywhere expect to flow from the League are pictured forth to them, they will give the President and his peace and League policies a support so overwhelming and insistent that opposition will be borne down and the ratification of the Treaty with the League as an integral part of it will be made certain.

When the American people clearly understand a question, their judgment does not go wrong. Mr. WILSON can make them understand the Treaty and the covenant—no other man can do it so well. It is his good fortune, it is the good fortune of the country and of the world, that his qualification for the task he is to undertake is unequaled. His knowledge of the subject is complete, and the world has had abundant evidence of his extraordinary capacity to tell others what he knows himself. There will be a deal of buzzing in the Senate this week, the partisan opponents of the President may hasten a decision adverse to him. If the joy they will have in rejecting the Treaty in advance is really indispensable to their complete happiness, they will do well to take advantage of their opportunity while it lasts. Their final decision will come later. It will be different.

A NEEDED LESSON.

Mexico was not invaded in a military sense when American troops were ordered across the Rio Grande to expel from Juarez the Villistas whose shots had killed or wounded people in El Paso. There was a time when the Mexican Government would have resisted the passing of a single American soldier into its country in pursuit of bandits who had been raiding peaceful settlements on the American side, but there is now a standing agreement between the United States and the Government which it has recognized in Mexico that the troops of either country can be used as a police force in the border territory of the other for the protection of citizens from raiders and snipers. Recently an American Lieutenant crossed the border with a detachment to punish bandits who had killed or wounded Americans in their own territory. In principle there is no difference between the action of that young officer, which Mexico did not protest, and the course taken by Brig. Gen. J. B. ERWIN when he dispatched a column across the Rio Grande into Juarez to drive out the Villistas, who had been killing and wounding people in El Paso with their volleys.

"Protection to American lives and "property is the sole point upon "which the United States are tenacious," said Secretary EVARTS in a celebrated note to President DIAZ. There is no way to protect the citizens of El Paso from flying Mexican bullets, whether fired with murderous intent or wantonly in partisan fighting,—except by employing General ERWIN'S methods; that is to say, by using troops for police duty in Mexican territory, troops who have returned to American soil, in fulfillment of General ERWIN'S promise, "as "soon as the safety of the citizens of "El Paso has been assured." There can be no question of an invasion of Mexico, or of a belligerent act against its Government, when murderous assailants of American citizens are driven from the border and taught a lesson. Secretary BAKER speaks significantly when he says, concerning the expulsion of the Villistas from Juarez, that "there is "no possibility of a misunderstanding "between the Republic of Mexico and "the United States with regard to the "protection of life on the American "side."

The time had come to break up the practice of making Juarez a battleground with the design of involving the United States with the Carranza Government and forcing armed intervention. Once too often the Villistas tried it, and now they understand that American troops coming across the border on police duty will pursue them to kill or capture, as a policeman shoots at or seizes a criminal trying to make his escape. Beyond rifle and artillery range of the border the Mexicans can fight as much as they please, but when they begin shooting across the line the United States Army will take a hand if casualties on the American side are reported, and it will not make any difference whether Carranzistas or Villistas are the offenders.

THE ACHIEVEMENT AND THE FUTURE.

The American seaplane flight from Trepassey to the Azores, and thence to Portugal and Plymouth, prepared the world for the greater achievement of Captain JOHN ALCOCK and Lieutenant ARTHUR W. BROWN when they made a non-stop flight from St. John's to Galway, but anticipation does not dull the lustre of their triumph. There is nothing in aviation comparable with it, for the Englishman and the Anglo-American—for such BROWNS should be called—not only flew 2,000 miles straightaway, but, as ALCOCK says, "scarcely saw the sun, or the moon, or the stars" as they sped through the void at the stupendous speed, for such a distance, of 120 miles an hour. The passage of the Atlantic in the air would have been a great feat if the medium had been crystal clear, sunshine and moonlight. But mainly the atmosphere was impenetrable to the eye. The airplane went hurtling through vast areas of fog, and the pilot sometimes feared that they would plunge into the sea, in which case death would have come suddenly, ingloriously, and there would have been no record of the fate of the adventurers. "For four hours," says ALCOCK, "the machine was covered "with a sheet of ice caused by frozen "sleet," and again a blanket of fog would render the speed indicator useless for some alarming moment. In the murk the machine must have cut eccentric figures, for often the pilot had "no sense of the horizon." There was a Providence that took care of those aviators, aloft they knew not where. The feat will always be wonderful, and posterity will say that no stouter-hearted men, no men greater of soul, ever faced a hazard on land or sea with more indomitable spirit. Theirs is the kind of honorably won fame that the bravest men will always envy them.

With the success of this flight across the wide Atlantic comes a realization of the service that may be expected of aviation as its instruments are improved. Captain ALCOCK had one-third of his fuel left when he landed in Galway; he might have gone on for almost another thousand miles. We know now that any well-engined airplane can fly the Atlantic in clear and fair weather with a competent pilot at the wheel. The task set inventors is to provide a plane that can get across in any but the most tempestuous conditions, and there will follow a regular air service. Lord NORTHCLIFFE in his message of congratulation to Captain ALCOCK said that he looked forward to the time when London morning newspapers would be selling in New York in the evening. Let no one make light of the prediction. Twenty years ago who would have dreamed that the Atlantic would be crossed in the air in about sixteen hours? It is evident that the cable, which for delays has fallen under criticism of late, will one day have a competitor as to much of its business in airplanes darting across the ocean in a comparatively few hours.

THE BANKING SITUATION.

The first deficit in the Federal reserves of this district since the system was established calls for remark, but of a different sort from that called for when such incidents were frequent and disturbing. The last run of reserve deficits was in 1914, and over several months steadily the maximum was near fifty millions. Now the deficit is less than a million, and there exists a ready means of correction which was not available under the old system. The Federal reserves are massed, and in the nation are 52.7 per cent., including even the note issues as well as deposits. Therefore the deficit is local and domestic, and has no relation to any sort of embarrassment in home or foreign trade. The Treasury received large tax payments and reduced its deposits. Other districts withdrew funds which they had sent here because of the attractions of a higher interest rate than could be realized in smaller money markets with fewer uses for idle funds. Altogether the money market lost in the week $112,467,000, and a good part of it in actual cash, some for gold exports, rather than credit. There are easy remedies. The Government may redeposit tax receipts. The banks short of funds may reimburse themselves by rediscounts. All this is in the ordinary run of business. More important than the day-to-day flow of funds is the fact that, for some time the local loans have exceeded the deposits, the excess of loans now being near a billion. But that, too, is not national, although the national excess of deposits over loans is slight.

Always the quality of bank investments is more important than the relation of the items, which constantly shifts. In his address before the National Association of Credit Men a few days ago, Mr. WARBURG called attention to the fact that 80 per cent. of all the paper held by Federal Reserve banks consists of war paper. This paper is of the highest quality, commands the lowest rate, and therefore is used for purposes of rediscount. Also some banks are using their funds where they command the speculative rate. The result is that the commercial market is scantily supplied, and that the relation of the various sorts of credit is disturbed. Where Government paper is so largely used there is little opportunity for the introduction of bankers' acceptances, or even trade acceptances, which ought to be a firm reliance for business under all conditions. Just as the airmen are safest when they are highest, so commercial credit will be least subject to disturbance when the volume is greatest and exists for both domestic and foreign trade. Long ago Mr. WARBURG predicted that there soon would be a billion of bankers' acceptances. Already there is a half billion, and the time will come when they will displace the war paper in the banks. But home Governments command a lower rate than bankers' acceptances, and with foreign Governments offering 6 per cent. for credit for commercial uses ordinary commercial borrowers are elbowed away from the supply.

The Federal Reserve differential between bankers' acceptances and commercial paper being only one-half of 1 per cent., there is no room for a rate for trade acceptances, and the easing of the commercial market by the use of this essential facility is deferred until the billions of Government paper are better digested. Sooner or later it will be desirable to mark up the rates on Federal loans, which were made unduly low for the purpose of floating them on a patriotic basis, with the result that they are too largely carried on bank credit rather than paid for from savings or profits. As this class of Federal Reserve bank accommodation approaches the commercial rate there will be room for quoting rates for bankers' acceptances, trade acceptances, and single name paper in due relation. Now there is plenty of credit, but too much of some sorts and too little of other sorts. There is a use and a rate for each, but while Government paper clogs the banks we are still not using our banking facilities either fully or effectively. That may seem extravagant to say, considering the indispensable services rendered, but the truth will appear when bankers' acceptances are at work equalizing domestic and foreign money rates as now rediscounts equalize our domestic reserve districts.

It was thought preposterous when it was urged that the Federal Reserve system could give us a continental money rate, but that is approximated. Soon we shall see our Federal system playing its part in equalizing credit rates between nations. At present, banking rather bolder than better than ours is giving a better rate, or rather an artificially low rate, in London, although sterling exchange is at a discount and there is a British embargo on gold. That cannot continue. The free market for gold always has been the low market for credit and for goods, and so it must be. But even Mr. WARBURG cannot foresee whether the two credit markets will be equalized by an advance there or by a decline here. The world money market is better worth thinking about than the London or the New York money market, and the Federal Reserve system will yet give us a voice in determining its control.

THE GERMAN REPLY.

Additional and superfluous evidence that the Germans are not like other people and that their minds do not work in the way of other minds is furnished in the German reply to the peace proposals. It appears to take the ground that President WILSON'S Fourteen Points were all intended in the interest of Germany, whereas others understood them to have a quite different intent. It ignores, of course, the fact that Germany is guilty of this war, but it goes further and ignores the fact that Germany was beaten.

Nothing in the whole document is stranger than the quotations made from speeches by Mr. ASQUITH, Lord ROBERT CECIL, President WILSON, WINSTON CHURCHILL, and others. The Germans do not seem to understand in the least that what the Conference of the Allied and Associated Powers has to say to them supersedes anything that ever was said in any political speech in any country by anybody. What they are dealing with, though they appear or pretend not to know it, is a supreme council which alone can speak with authority, and which does so speak to them.

Fully as strange is the contention that the Allies were defending themselves only against the German Government, and therefore have no right to make any exactions from the German people. How is it possible to make exactions from the German Government without making them from the German people? Is WILHELM HOHENZOLLERN to pay the indemnity out of his own pocket, or is he to cede his private domain to the Allies by way of securing France against another invasion? On the contrary, the German people, who supported the war by loans and taxes, must pay the indemnities, and they must cede Alsace and Lorraine and temporarily cede enough of the rest of their territory to guarantee safety to France. It is needless to say that had the Germans won the war they would have made no such fantastic distinctions between the treasuries of the Allies and the people who filled those treasuries. In Belgium they proved it.

Odd, too, is the German insistence on the principle of self-determination; Germany, if we remember rightly, did not give weight to that principle during four years of war. She showed what she thought of it all the way from Belgium and the Baltic to Armenia. If she had been able to get over to this side of the water, she would have shown what she thought of it from Mexico to Argentina. As for the allegation that the peace terms are going to make life hard for Germans, it may be admitted that they will be hard. There never has been a war in history where the beaten nation did not have an uncomfortable time of it, as France can testify. The Germans seem to proceed on the theory either that they were victorious or that Germans are in some way exempt from the rules that apply to other people, and especially from the rules that Germany herself has always enforced on other people. Sometimes the beaten nation which paid this hard penalty has been a guiltless and injured nation, but Germany is guilty. Is there any special reason why, for the first time in history, the rule that the loser pays should be abrogated in behalf of the guiltiest nation since the days of Assyria?

Pervading the whole document there is an air of ruffling swagger which is characteristically Prussian. Its haughty and domineering form is as disagreeable as anything that was put forward by Germany even in the days when she seemed to be winning the war. Of course, the reason for its trumped-up denials and protests is plain enough. It is the German way of bargaining. The Germans do not expect to get what they demand, but they do expect to save something—anything will do—out of the wreck. The Allies know with whom they have to deal.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Accusation and Denial Much Alike.

Between the accounts of a "mutiny" among American troops that came to this country from Archangel last Spring and those given since their arrival at Brest by the officers and men who were involved in the episode, the differences are slight and immaterial. Certainly they do not impose any obligation to apologise or to confess inaccuracy upon the newspaper correspondents who sent out the original stories, and they do not justify the indignation which now marks the denials that there was any mutiny at all.

As the men put it, they did not mutiny—they only "kicked," with, of course, the usual soldier word to express the vigor of the kicking. The officers say that the men, declaring that they did not know why they were fighting in Russia after the war was over, refused to obey the orders of their Sergeants to entrain for the front, and persisted in the refusal until the situation had been explained to their satisfaction by higher than non-com. authority. But that is in effect what the correspondents said, and whether or not the behavior of the soldiers constituted mutiny is largely a matter of definition.

It was not mutiny if mutiny consists in shooting officers and a complete abandonment of obedience to any control not self-imposed, but in all ordinary understanding revolt does not have to go as far as that to be mutiny. Perhaps a compromise all around could be found in saying that the conduct of these men was mutinous for a time, but they submitted to discipline as soon as they were told the facts in the case and appreciated the necessity to "carry on" for a while longer.

Evidently the commander of the regiment felt that the gravest of military crimes had not been committed, for he let the matter drop without ordering anybody court-martialed.

They Only Wanted to Understand.

In other days and in other armies, such an incident as the one at Archangel would have been considered of the utmost seriousness. It is none too pleasant now, and in the American Army, but instead of seeing in it evidence that a spirit of insubordination exists among our men, it is kinder, more reassuring, and probably much nearer the truth, to take it as showing nothing more alarming than that the American soldiers feel themselves, and are, something more, better, and different from the soldier of old, who was supposed to be as unthinking as his musket and no more privileged to express a preference as to what should be done with and to him.

Theoretically, such a man is still the ideal soldier; really, he has disappeared, even from the German Army, where he longest survived, and today there is a general admission on the part of the higher commands, sometimes reluctant, but tending to become cordial, that it is well for the men in the ranks to know at least a little about the nature of the operations in which they are used. It was not weakness, but good sense, that caused the American Colonel whose men didn't know why they should go on fighting in Russia to tell them the reason for it. The effect was that they did go on fighting, very effectively, too, and certainly that was better than it would have been to inflict upon them the established penalty for mutiny in the presence of the enemy.

Threatening a Form of Suicide.

It would be easier to feel, or rather to maintain, sympathy with the antagonism to the immediate banishment of beer and light wine that was expressed by the demonstration in Washington by the American Federation of Labor if it were not for one argument that was used by the organization's spokesmen, including Mr. GOMPERS himself. The argument which the national lawmakers were supposed to heed most was that, if the country were made completely "dry," the inevitable result would be a spread of Bolshevism in a great class where it does not exist.

This prophecy may be true, and, if true, it is a reason of a sort for not putting an end to mild intoxicants on July 1 or at any other date. But it is a reason that thinking and intelligent men should be more than reluctant to proffer, for of what imaginable advantage will it be to "labor," or to anybody else, if to the discomforts and inconveniences apprehended from lack of a valued alleviation of thirst there be added the immeasurably more disastrous consequences that inevitably would follow a descent into Bolshevism?

To say that if deprived of beer one will accept the doctrines and imitate the practices of LENIN and TROTZKY is to threaten to act as does the ill-trained child, who, when what he wants is refused, throws himself on the floor and kicks and screams in a sort of voluntary insanity. Children sometimes gain their ends that way, but only when the parents are considerably less wise and strong than is the American Government as yet. Bolshevism would cost the workers and everybody else—if there is any considerable body of nonworkers in the United States—vastly more than their beer, and not for long would it give them even that.

Celebrating Their One Escape.

No severer strain could be imposed on any mind than by giving it the task of explaining why the German sailors on the surrendered German ships now lying at Scapa Flow took pleasure in celebrating with games and decorations the anniversary of the Jutland battle. If that battle really was a great German victory, as was claimed by the inscription on one great banner displayed to astonished British observers in explanation of the festival in progress, how strange it is not only that the scene of contest remained in the possession of the enemy, and how much more strange is it that the victors never attempted to repeat the triumph they had won. There is no doubt, however, that the British knew they had been in a fight when that battle was over. But they also know, now, that not long after the whole German fleet came out at last and made the most amazing and humiliating surrender recorded in naval history. And it was the men who consented to that surrender—who never fired a shot to prevent it—that found pleasure in celebrating what the least boastful of Britons might possibly admit ended in a draw! It is really remarkable how German Germans can be when they try.

FARM CLOCKS.

Opposition to Daylight Saving from a Dairyman's Standpoint.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have been much interested in the many articles that have been written regarding daylight saving, but, in my opinion, little has been said that covers the real objection to this changed time by the farmer.

Agriculture is largely dependent on climatic conditions, a factor over which we have absolutely no control, and we are compelled to work at a disadvantage under present conditions, especially during the harvest season.

With sun time the first hour or hour and one-half when with heavy dews we are unable to accomplish much until the sun has dried the grain or grass; now when you double that time you practically waste half the forenoon, making that last dry hour in the afternoon which we lose worth more than the first half of the forenoon.

There are many crops that cannot be harvested or handled until the dew has dried off, and with labor as expensive as it is today the farmer cannot afford to waste many hours.

This is not a political question as you suggest in your paper under date of May 30; neither are the farmers endeavoring to help certain corporations. I doubt if many of them ever thought of such a thing, but they are protesting against a condition which very seriously interferes with the most economical operation of their business.

If the agricultural interest of this country were to impose upon the manufacturing interest any condition which interfered with their business as this changed time does with agriculture, a howl would go up loud enough to disturb the peace of the angels.

The latest figures obtainable from the United States Department of Agriculture show the value of farm crops to be $14,600,760,000, and of manufactured products $14,811,310,542. If these figures are correct, and I see no reason to doubt them, certainly the agricultural interest of this country should be allowed to have something to say about matters so vitally affecting their business.

During the war farmers were urged to greater efforts in producing more food. They certainly responded and did so under most adverse circumstances, labor shortage, high-priced fertilizer and machinery, to say nothing of changed time.

They made good. No newspaper felt called upon at that time to criticise, but now that the critical time has passed and the general public no longer fear starvation, some papers have resorted to their former habit of making the farmer the butt of ridicule.

I had been hopeful that the war would impress upon some of our urban population that the earth fed them and that the farmers were the people who tilled the earth, but evidently that fact has not begun to percolate through the crevices of their craniums.

There is an interdependence between the city and country that should be recognised and the rights of each should be given consideration as it most affects their respective welfare.

Polish Liberty and License.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Some time ago Bjornstjerne Bjornson said of the Poles that "in their understanding, liberty means nothing but license for themselves to do what they please." Unfortunately, recent events in Poland indicate that there is some truth in Bjornson's statement. The national aspirations of the Poles were at first confined to political autonomy, but, assured of political autonomy, the Poles then demanded complete independence. The Entente Powers satisfied this just and reasonable demand of the Poles by recognising—setting up, in fact—the present Polish State.

But it seems that the Poles, or at least their imperialistic leaders, were not quite satisfied; they desired more than liberty, and took it themselves. Not content with territories "indisputably Polish," they began to invade territories which were indisputably non-Polish. I have special reference to the Polish invasion of Ukrainian and Lithuanian lands. Again, there are the disgraceful pogroms in Poland, that, according to reliable information, have been permitted and at times instigated by Polish authorities. This is a license that is worthy only of Asiatic barbarians.

A few days ago I read in THE NEW YORK TIMES that the Poles, having occupied all of Ukrainian Galicia, were maltreating Ukrainian citizens and soldiers, were persecuting the Uniate clergy, despoiling the Ukrainians of their property and churches, and destroying all the historical documents they could find. In justification of their actions, the Poles tacitly assert that they are "safeguarding allied interests in Galicia." Such an insolent falsehood is an insult to the Allies, who gave Poland the liberty she has debased into license. The Allied Powers should inform Poland that there is a radical difference between liberty and license. They should warn Poland that they are ever ready to help a people win liberty, but that they will not tolerate the practice of license by any one.

THE CONCERT OF CABOT AND PHILANDER.

A thought germed in a Boston bean
May be half-baked, if it's not keen;
When nourished with a Pittsburgh stogie,
Smoke-clad, such grows a gruesome bogy!
The bean was Cabot's, who is "sot"
On holding what is right is not.
The smoke wherein this thought meanders
Comes from a twofer that's Philander's.
While Cabot lodges gibe, and mocks,
Full fearlessly Philander knocks!

Now Cabot likes a League of Nations:
Has sometime said so, in orations.
But these are days when acts are tricks,
And statesmen do what's politics.
Originated by his party,
The League had found our Cabot hearty
Supporting such with elocution;
But now he shouts, "The Constitution!"
While Cabot lodges gibe, and mocks,
Fallaciously Philander knocks!

Why do they hate the Treaty so?
For answer, there's not far to go:
They him, while treaties they berate,
To stick pins in their Him of Hate!
Oh, pair of dark reactionaries,
Do ye not know the wind that varies?
That our New Age is just beginning;
Humanity's copped off this inning,
The while the Cabots lodge their rocks,
And frantically Philander knocks!

Wake up, ye relics ante-bellum;
Throw off your coverlets of vellum!
The world has moved since your selection;
Must Gabriel trump you to correction?
Hey, there, Philander! Hey, you, Cabot!
Stop, look and listen! Get the habit!
Quick rid yourselves of the obsession
That you can stop the world's progression;
Else Cabot lodge on fatal rocks,
And fierce Philander get the knocks!

ALBERT S. CROCKETT.

EIGHTEENTH AMENDMENT.

The Question of Getting It Before the Supreme Court.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. Carman F. Randolph in a communication published in your paper of June 4, in speaking of the recent decision of the Supreme Court of the State of Washington that a legislative resolution purporting to ratify on behalf of the State the prohibition amendment may, under the State's Constitution, be submitted to a referendum, says:

"If, then, a petition for referendums be duly signed and filed the 'ratification' of Washington, which has been duly deposited with the Secretary of State, will be in suspense until the Fall election of 1920. * * * Meanwhile, if petitions for referendums are still in order in a sufficient number of States to leave the amendment without the complete ratification of the necessary three-fourths, there is an opportunity to halt it."

I differ with the conclusion reached by Mr. Randolph. If all of these States on a referendum refused to ratify the action of their respective Legislatures in ratifying the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution, such action would not suspend the amendment nor impair its validity.

An amendment to the Constitution requires, under the provisions of that instrument, but two acts: First, the enactment of the amendment by proposing it to the States for ratification by two-thirds of each House of Congress; and, second, the ratification of such proposed amendment by three-fourths of the "Legislatures" of the several States; these acts having been performed, the amendment then becomes "valid to all intents and purposes as part of the Constitution." The action of the Secretary of State in certifying and proclaiming the adoption of the amendment is a mere ministerial act commanded by the act of Congress, which provides that

"Whenever official notice is received at the Department of State that any amendment proposed to the Constitution of the United States has been adopted, according to the provisions of the Constitution, the Secretary of State shall forthwith cause the amendment to be published in the newspapers authorized to promulgate the laws, with his certificate, specifying the States by which the same may have been adopted, and that the same has become valid, to all intents and purposes, as a part of the Constitution of the United States."

Before the Secretary of State, on Jan. 13, 1919, promulgated the proclamation that the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution had been adopted, he had received, as he certified, "official notice" from the Executive Department of the fourteen States whose Constitutions provide for a referendum that the "Legislatures" of those States had ratified the proposed amendment—ratification by the Legislatures being the only requisite prescribed by the Constitution of the United States—and thus by the action of three-fourths of the States, certified to and by the Secretary of State, the amendment became "valid, to all intents and purposes, as a part of the Constitution of the United States."

It was settled by Congress respecting the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution that the determination whether a proposed amendment had been ratified by the States, and had become a part of that instrument, was a question for Congress; whether it was lawfully originated or executed by Congress and ratified by the States is necessarily a question for the decision of the Courts; the President having no power in originating or adopting the amendment.

If these contentions be correct, it is immaterial, so far at least as the Eighteenth Amendment is concerned, whether or not the referendum can be used respecting amendments to the Constitution, but I conceive that these referendums which have been or may be ordered in the various referendum States can be used in such a manner as to become the means of presenting to the Supreme Courts of those States the question of the constitutionality of the Eighteenth Amendment itself—on the decision of that question an appeal can be taken to the Supreme Court of the United States at the opening of its next term, and a decision had before Jan. 13, 1920, when, by its terms, the amendment becomes finally effective.

Prompt action alone will defeat this iniquitous amendment from becoming in January, 1920, "valid to all intents and purposes as a part of the Constitution of the United States."

JAMES W. VROOM.
New York, June 5, 1919.

Already Answered by Mr. Lodge.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the editorial article entitled "The Knox Resolution," you say: "There is no warrant in the Constitution or elsewhere for the assumption that the Senate through every stage of treaty negotiation is a co-equal part of the treaty-making power of this Government."

The Constitution says of the President: "He shall have power, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to make treaties, provided two-thirds of the Senators present concur." This is all the Constitution says on the subject. How, then, do you conclude that the President has the power to negotiate treaties and that the Senate has no authority to take part therein? Nowhere in the Constitution is the power to negotiate treaties directly conferred on the President. If he has that power, rather than our foreign representatives, it must be because the term "make treaties" includes the term "negotiate treaties," or, rather, implies the power to negotiate treaties. If so, then the Senate is authorized to advise in the negotiations. If by "making treaties" is meant only the final act which establishes the binding force of treaties, then the President has no constitutional powers to negotiate, for the word "make" is the only verb in the sentence of which the pronoun "he" (meaning the President) is the subject. In other words, whether making treaties includes or excludes negotiating them, the Senate, under the terms of the Constitution, is co-equal in power with the President.

To Keep Daylight Saving.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The repeal of the daylight saving law will be speedily accomplished if the people do not immediately protest in no uncertain terms against the destruction of this most beneficial piece of legislation. The advantages to the men, women, and children in this country from the additional hour of sunlight after the day's work are so great that there should be strong opposition to repealing this law.

It is inconceivable that the mysterious forces working to repeal a law that has proven to be so universally popular should succeed. Millions of dollars are saved to the people in electric light and coal and gas costs, and the wealth of the people and the resources of the nation are greatly increased. Millions of dollars' worth of farm products alone are added to the nation's wealth.

Both work and play are needed for the man, women, and children to give them a sound mind and a sound body, and this additional hour in the sunlight materially helps in this direction.

JULES GOLDBUND.

BULGARIAN DUPLICITY.

Light on How Sofia Deceived Allied Statesmen.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. Stephen Panaretoff, Bulgarian Minister to Washington, has embarked upon the apparently impossible task of whitewashing the Bulgarian government. It is clear why he has attempted this. In a few days' time the discussions of the peace with Bulgaria will come before the conference at Paris. Mr. Panaretoff's bit of special pleading, Bodme sua, gives us a foretaste of the arguments of the Bulgarian delegates will be. We can expect that they will be characterized by the same mendacity and suggestio falsi which are seen in the Bulgarian Minister's laboured defense of Bulgarian policy during the last four years.

But his letter contains one valuable admission, which I am glad to put on record, as it explains much that was mysterious in the fateful weeks of September and October, 1915. During those three months which preceded the entry of Bulgaria into the war the United Governments were in active negotiations with Sofia in order to bring Bulgaria into the war on the side of the Allies. During the whole of that time Athens, Nish, and Bucharest were bombarding the Foreign Ministers of the Entente Powers with warnings that Bulgaria was about to betray them, but these they turned a deaf ear. In London the Foreign Office even mobilized the Censors to suppress all the warnings telegraphed by newspaper correspondents in the Balkan capitals.

In August, 1915, I had in Rome a long conversation with M. Coromilas, Greek Minister to the Quirinal, whom I found aghast at the extraordinary credulity shown by the Entente in the promises of the Bulgarian Government. He declared the Allies were going toward disaster. "If they persist in their present policy," he declared to me, "in three months' time the Serbian Army will either have surrendered or be driven into Albania."

Ten days later M. Venizelos in Athens expressed to me the same opinion of his Minister in Rome and frankly declared the allied policy was heading straight toward a catastrophe.

But the worst was yet to come. When the Serbians realised that they could expect no aid from the Allies they resolved to do everything in their power to help themselves. Field Marshal Putnik, the Serbian Chief of Staff, massed an army at Pirot, the frontier town facing Sofia. It was his intention, the instant King Ferdinand signed the decree of mobilization, to hurl this force across the frontier, march on Sofia, capture the capital, and, if possible, the King and Government, and break up the Bulgarian mobilization before the troops had time to concentrate. Colonel Zivko Pavlovitch, his Assistant Chief of Staff, with whom I discussed the matter a year and a half later, when I was on the Saloniki front, told me the Serbian Army would have been in Sofia on the third day. The Bulgarian concentration being broken up, the Serbian Army could have turned its full force to the Danube to meet the rush of the German and Austrian armies.

The day arrived when King Ferdinand signed the decree of mobilization. The Serbian Government telegraphed to London asking permission to attack. Not only was permission refused, but Serbia was categorically forbidden to break the Balkan peace, and was told that if she did so the Allies would leave her to her fate. At the same time Sir Edward Grey sent for M. Boshkovitch, the Serbian Minister to the Court of St. James's, and informed him that the Bulgarian mobilization was not directed against Serbia. M. Boshkovitch communicated this extraordinary statement to M. Pashitch, the Serbian Prime Minister. The latter could only assume that some secret understanding existed between the Entente Powers and Bulgaria, of which Serbia had not been informed. He therefore decided to obey the instructions of the Allies, and gave instructions that, in order to prevent the possibility of any frontier incident, the Serbian Army should be withdrawn five kilometers from the boundary line. Having thus tied Serbia hand and foot, the Allies could only look on helplessly while her throat was cut. Forty-eight hours later 400,000 Bulgarians stormed across the eastern frontier, while 300,000 Germans and Austrians attacked on the Danube front.

Up to now Sir Edward Grey's action in assuring M. Boshkovitch that the Bulgarian mobilization was not directed against Serbia has always been a mystery to me. M. Panaretoff has now provided the explanation. The Government, he states, gave out that the mobilization was ordered to defend Bulgarian neutrality and prevent Germany and Austria trying to reach Constantinople across Bulgarian territory and further, to enable Bulgaria to promptly attack Turkey, as the ally of the Entente.

It is incredible that, in view of their knowledge of the tortuous methods of Bulgarian policy and the warning they had received from the Balkan capitals, Entente statesmen should have allowed themselves to be hoodwinked by the astute M. Radoslavoff, but the fact remains that they did so.

GORDON GORDON-SMITH.
Washington, June 9, 1919.

Italianism of Dalmatia.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. R. F. Hlacha's letter, printed in your issue of June 7, on which he bases a specious argument on what purports to be a quotation from my address at St. Mark's-on-the-Bouwerie on May 25, is such a perfect example of the insidious methods of Jugoslav propaganda here and abroad that I must ask you to permit me a few words of reply.

What I "put to the acid test" was not, as Mr. Hlacha pretends, the complaints of the Jugoslavs in Dalmatia against the suppression of the Slav schools, but the truth of the statement solemnly made to me by the Jugoslav leaders at Cursola that there was not a single child in that city who could speak Italian! It was upon this assertion that Messrs. Arneri, Radomiri and others based their complaint against the Italianization of half the school. And it was this assertion that my visit to the school proved to be absolutely false. Evidently Mr. Hlacha is pursuing the same tactics in New York as his friends in Dalmatia.

Again, I did not state "that Dalmatia was the birthplace of many distinguished men, but all were Italians." What I did state was that all that Dalmatia has contributed to the world's culture is Italian—Giorgio da Sebenico, the two Lauranas and Tommaseo, for instance. Mr. Hlacha says Tommaseo never ceased to emphasize his Slav consciousness. I know something of Tommaseo's works, especially his "Synonyma," the greatest work of its kind in the Italian—not the Croatian. Be it observed—language. And it was Tommaseo who wrote: "Lo slavismo nelle terre dalmate non è un albero, ma un palo secco piantato per reggere le tende nuove." (In the earth of Dalmatia Slavism is not a tree but a dry pole erected to support new tents.)

LOOKS TO THE POETS TO DECIDE ON PEACE

Prof. Perry Tells Phi Beta Kappa of Harvard They Will Pass on Righteousness of Terms.

LAUDS THEIR STAND IN WAR

Says Singers Lead in Advance of Humanity—Commencement Exercises Open at Cambridge.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 16.—Phi Beta Kappa day at Harvard today opened the undergraduate activities for Commencement week. Professor Bliss Perry delivered the address, and Rev. Percy S. Grant, rector of the Church of the Ascension, New York, read an original poem at the exercises held in Sanders Theatre.

Professor William C. Land, the Harvard Librarian, announced his retirement as Secretary of the Harvard Chapter after a service of thirty years, being succeeded by Professor William G. Howard, also of Harvard. William Roscoe Thayer, the historian, was elected President.

Five honorary members were admitted, including the Rev. Mr. Grant and Lieut. Colonel Hugh Cabot, formerly of the Royal Army Medical Corps. The united chapters of Phi Beta Kappa were invited to hold their triennial meeting at Harvard next Sept. 10 and 11.

Professor Perry, in part, said:

"It was the poets, even earlier than the statesmen, who asserted that Napoleon's power could not endure, since it was founded on injustice. So it was the poets and novelists in the full current of Victorian humanitarianism who made the social diagnosis, however wild some of their prescriptions may have been. Legislation followed the imaginative depiction of social wrongs. First comes the sonnet or the novel after the statue. The community ultimately writes its will into the statutes. Only there is this vast difference between the persons who think of justice in the terms of poetry—the poets are surer of their grounds.

"We may test the relation of poetry to progress by examining the ideal of liberty. Men everywhere are striving for freedom in society. It is true, of course, as Shelley maintains in his sonnet on 'Political Greatness,' that man must first rule the empire of himself. But even a community of self-rulers must find, after all, some practical equilibrium between the freedom of individuals and the freedom of all. Yet you will find English poets, like English orators, more often discussing their liberties—that is, their legal rights—than liberty in the absolute. Our poets of emancipation are forever chanting about freedom from something, freedom toward something. They are notor-minded. For it is unfreedom, like injustice, which stings men into wrath that makes verse. We all wish liberty from oppression, from unjust laws, from the tyranny of the mob as well as from the tyranny of Kaisers. But the poets bring to such question an insight, an imagination, a partisanship beyond the grasp of the prose reason.

"Even the mere questioners of society, the Heines, the Ibsens, the Byrons, the Bernard Shaws, the satirists, and the mockers, have thus been soldiers in the army of liberation. They have often served the cause better by their plays and songs than by their experiments with actual legislation.

"It is hard for the laws to keep step with the music of the idealists, and the idealists are apt to be more eloquent in their denunciation of wrong than accurate in their sense of direction toward the right. For what are we to do with our liberties after we have won them? The oppressed should go free, certainly, but whither shall they go? Better wages, better hours, better housing are only steps toward something, and toward what? To Emerson writing his 'Boston Hymn,' it all seemed clear. The American Commonwealth was at last purged from slavery: Freedom was to be King; the goal was self-mastery for the individual, self-government for the State.

"I venture finally to test the attitude of poets toward that desire of humanity which we call by the 'dear affronted name of peace.' That this is one of the goals of human effort no one doubts, but as to whether we are making any substantial progress toward it, there is a wide-spread scepticism. The very word 'peace' is under suspicion. It means, like so many words that have been the symbols of fierce controversy, diametrically opposite things to different persons.

"Peace, according to the poets, presupposes the partial success, at least, of righteousness, truth, justice, liberty, and fellowship. For peace, like beauty, is a harmony of effects. It is a commonplace of poetry, as of law and politics, that there can be no permanent adjustment of differences that is not based upon right. Injustice inevitably provokes revolt. Peace must be founded on truth; otherwise it is but a sham peace, an armed peace. Surely there can be no peace without liberty. Neither can there be any peace without fellowship. Among friends the question of peace does not arise. They do not know what the word 'ultimatum' means.

"It is not the poets, it is the sentimental politicians, who cry peace when there is no peace, who argue for our international isolation when such a thing is no longer possible. The war poetry of the last five years has wrought one inestimable service; it has told the pitiless truth, not only about the battlefields but about the wrath and hate and greed that are coiled around the foundations of Europe. It says little of the pomp and circumstance of glorious war; it sees straight to the human facts underlying war; it shows that world peace is conditioned upon the concrete and fundamental issues of justice, liberty, and fellowship.

"And yet the finest voices of contemporary poetry still bid us to lift up our hearts. Poetry has witnessed inconceivable horrors, and it sees the brutal facts of the present situation. We may be sure that poets are even more keenly sensitive than we are to the world-wide disillusion which so closely resembles the post-Revolutionary pessimism of a century ago. It was after the triumph of Waterloo that Byron wrote bitterly:

'Europe has slaves, allies, Kings, armies still.'

"The poets know even better than we that every perpetuation of hatred is a postponement of peace, and that the hatred we have to fear in the immediate future is not so much the hot manly hatred of foes who have faced one another on the battlefield, as the cold hatred of non-combatants, the calculated hatred of competitors for world markets. The poetic imagination sees all this, but it also sees something else, and that other thing is the essential thing—namely, the ultimate supremacy of moral forces. When you and I are depressed over the prevalent violence of the educated classes, over their lack of serenity and poise, their easily wounded vanity, their distrust of idealism, their disloyalty to moral leadership, we may find comfort in the words of Harvard's most distinguished graduate: 'In all the encounters that have yet chanced, I have not been weaponed for that particular occasion, and have been historically beaten; and yet I know all the time that I have never been beaten; never yet fought, shall certainly fight when my hour comes, and shall beat.' Emerson wrote that in prose essay, but he never wrote more like a poet, for he wrote with the long view."

CLASS EXERCISES AT YALE.

Academic and Scientific Seniors Revive Pre-War Customs.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 16.—The senior classes of both Yale undergraduate departments, the academic and scientific, today held their class day exercises in amphitheaters constructed on the campus, renewing university customs which have been allowed to lapse in the last two years.

This morning the Sheffield Scientific School seniors gathered in the amphitheatre which had been built near the Sheffield Vanderbilt dormitories, and the class oration was delivered by E. Brewster Crawford of New Haven, the class prophecy by E. Fisher Williams, and the class history by John L. Campbell of New York City.

At the class day exercises of the seniors of the academic department this afternoon the class history was read by Donald M. Campbell, Jr., of Detroit; the poem by Stephen V. Benet of Augusta, Ga.; the oration by W. Melville Borders of Chicago, and the ivy ode by Dean Kirkham Worcester of New York City. The class ivy was planted at the Linonia-Brothers library.

This evening the undergraduate seniors continued their celebration by holding the Commencement Glee Club Concert and the senior promenade in Woolsey Hall.

This afternoon the anniversary exercises of the Law School were held, beginning with the annual banquet in the university dining room. The toastmaster was Edward G. Buckland of this city. Representatives of the reunion classes, 1889, 1899, and 1909 spoke briefly. The Townsend prize speaking followed and the anniversary address was delivered by Congressman Sherley.

Charles Phelps Taft, 2d, son of former President Taft, was announced by Dean Swan of the Law School as the winner of the prize of $50 for the member of the first-year class who stood highest in the annual scholarship examinations which closed the year's work. George Edward Woodbine of this city won the prize for the third-year class.

WATER SUPPLY FAILS.

Long Beach Light Plant Shuts Down When Pump Shaft Breaks.

LONG BEACH, L. I., June 16.—Long Beach went "dry" tonight, but not alcoholically, when the main pumping station of the Long Beach Water Company at South Lynbrook, four miles away, was put out of business by the breaking of a crank shaft on the big pump there used to force the water to this resort through a wooden pipe line.

The accident to the pumping station became acute at dark when the electric light power house at Queenswater was compelled to shut down because of the lack of water. This kept the boardwalk and practically all of the main streets in darkness, put candles and kerosene oil at a premium, and generally caused much inconvenience, owing to a rather heavy fog which prevailed. Officials of the water company announced late tonight that the break would be repaired in time to furnish water shortly after daybreak.

T. SAMBOLA JONES MARRIES.

American Minister to Honduras Weds Miss Julia D. Duron.

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras, Saturday, June 14.—Thomas Sambola Jones, the American Minister to Honduras, was married today to Miss Julia Duron y Duron. The ceremony, which was performed at the American Legation, was attended by President Bertrand.

T. Sambola Jones, whose home is Baton Rouge, La., will be 60 years of age next Autumn. His first wife, who died some years ago, was Miss Deborah Spencer, a daughter of Chief Justice Spencer of Louisiana. Mr. Jones at one time owned a paper called the Educator. He is a Democrat, and has been on the staff of every Governor of Louisiana since 1888 save one. He was defeated for Congress in 1912. Later he was elected to the Louisiana Assembly. Some months ago he was appointed by the President as envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to his present post.

Fete by League of Women Workers

An outdoor fete will be held by the New York League of Women Workers on Saturday afternoon, June 28, at Oakmere, Orienta Point, Mamaroneck, N. Y., for the purpose of establishing a fund for founding further clubs for working girls. Miss Virginia Potter of 138 East 78th Street is chairman of the committee in charge of the arrangements, from whom tickets may be obtained. Mrs. Henry Ollesheimer, Mrs. Courtlandt D. Barnes, Mrs. H. W. J. Bucknall, Mrs. Felix Warburg, Mrs. Samuel Lewisohn, Mrs. Herbert B. Swope, Miss Louise Dickson, Mrs. George W. Hill, Mrs. J. H. Holbrook, Mrs. Bernard E. Pollak, Mrs. Henry Ittleson, Mrs. Kenneth J. Muir, and Mrs. E. Beroizheimer, are members of the committee.

Miss Silberman to Wed Tonight.

The marriage of Miss Dora Silberman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Max Silberman of Lebanon, Penn., and Joel Claster, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Claster of Lock Haven, Penn., will take place this evening at the Hotel Astor. The Rev. Dr. Elias Solomon is to officiate. A reception and dinner for 300 guests will follow the ceremony.

PRINCETON CONFERS DEGREES UPON 232

Two Hundred Graduated from Academic Courses at 172d Commencement.

14 GET HONORARY DEGREES

Gen. Crowder and Frank A. Vanderlip Receive Honor of Doctor of Laws for Their War Work.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., June 16.—Princeton's 172d Commencement exercises were ended this morning with the final graduation exercises and the presentation of degrees. Two hundred and one men from the classes of 1917, 1918 and 1919 were graduated. Seventeen others received the degree of Master of Arts, six received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy, and one Master of Science degree was conferred.

President John Grier Hibben presided at the exercises, which took place in Alexander Hall. Henry Lamont Wheeler, Jr., was the Latin Salutatory speaker, and Henry Pitney Van Dusen of Philadelphia was the Valedictorian. After the presentation of the degrees in the undergraduate courses, fourteen honorary degrees were conferred upon the commencement guests.

The Honorary Degrees.

Those who received the honorary degree of Master of Arts were Albert William Atwood, the writer; Edward Augustus Woods, and Colonel Ernest Lester Jones, Director of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey. Honorary degrees of Doctor of Literature were conferred upon Jesse Lynch Williams, novelist; Robert Bridges, editor of Scribner's Magazine, and Paul Elmer More. Those who received honorary degrees of Doctor of Divinity were John Douglas Adam, professor in the Hartford Theological Seminary, and the Rev. Dr. William T. Manning, rector of Trinity Parish, New York.

The honorary degrees of Doctor of Science were conferred upon John Mason Clarke, New York State Geologist, and Caspar Frederick Goodrich of the Naval Unit and Officer Material School in Princeton University. Honorary degrees of Doctor of Laws were conferred upon Senator William Mindred Johnson, Charles Wolcott Parker, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of New Jersey; Frank Arthur Vanderlip, ex-President of the National City Bank, and Major Gen. Enoch H. Crowder.

PURSUIT SQUADRON HOME.

185th Aero Officers Praise Ocean Flight of Captain Alcock.

American fighting aviators, members of the 185th Aero Squadron, known as the Bats because it was the only night pursuit squadron in the A. E. F., who arrived home yesterday on the transport Liberator, spoke in high praise of the accomplishment of Captain Alcock and Lieutenant Brown in crossing the Atlantic in a land plane.

"None of us was surprised when we heard of the feat," said Lieutenant W. S. McClintock, commander of the squadron. "The British aviators are cool, collected and fearless. They have a supreme confidence in the British made airplanes and the Rolls-Royce engine and they are justified in having this feeling."

The Bats got into the fighting in October and remained at the front until after the signing of the armistice. Five of their number were killed in action. Lieutenant McClintock said that the patrol duty was extremely hazardous as it was done at night, operating with searchlights. The squadron which trained at Kelly Field, Texas, was commanded at one time by Captain Seth Low, a nephew of the former Mayor of New York. He remained abroad.

The 91st Aero Squadron, an aerial photographing unit, commanded by Major Victor H. Strohm of Bowling Green, Ky., also returned on the transport. Major Strohm said that although a non-combatant unit, the members, who were armed, succeeded in bringing down twenty-two German planes. The men often went forty and fifty miles behind the lines to take photographs, he said, and took a total of 144,000 photographs. Thirty-two were killed. The Liberator brought back 1,015 soldiers in all.

The transport Plattsburg, which has been dubbed the bridal ship because of the number of brides it has brought back each trip, upheld its record yesterday when she returned again from France with sixty-nine brides and twenty children. There were 2,221 troops on board, belonging chiefly to the 23d Engineers. There were also about 800 wounded officers and enlisted men who have been confined in army hospitals overseas.

Elbert Anderson Bennett.

Elbert Anderson Bennett, assistant cashier of the American Exchange National Bank of New York, whose home was at 99 Central Avenue, Montclair, N. J., died Sunday night at the Mountainside Hospital, Montclair, following an operation for appendicitis. Mr. Bennett was born in Bristol, R. I., forty-eight years ago and had been connected with the American Exchange National Bank for thirty years. He was a member of the Administrative Council of the American Bankers' Association, and was assistant treasurer of the Navy League. Mr. Bennett was also a member of the Montclair Club and the Montclair Athletic Club. The funeral will be held at the home Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock.

James Harper Dies of Injuries.

James Harper, 33 years old, of 879 Brook Avenue, the Bronx, assistant armorer of the 2d Field Artillery, died yesterday in Fordham Hospital as the result of a fracture of the skull received last Saturday when he was thrown from his horse at 168th Street and Franklin Avenue, while returning to the armory from the welcome home parade in the Bronx.

REV. DR. F. O. HALL WEDS AND RESIGNS

Pastor of Church of Divine Paternity for 17 Years Marries Mrs. Helen C. Greenelle.

LEAVES PULPIT FOR PEN

Author of "C[illegible]" [illegible] Was Urged for [illegible] Universalist Church.

The Rev. Dr. Frank Oliver Hall, for the last seventeen years minister of the Church of the Divine Paternity, Central Park West and Seventy-sixth Street, and Mrs. Helen Chaster Greenelle, a member of his congregation, who lived at the Manhattan Square Hotel, 50 West Seventy-seventh Street, were married Sunday afternoon at 1 o'clock at the Manhattan Square Hotel, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. Dr. Thomas Edward Potterton, minister of the Church of Our Father, in Brooklyn. It was said yesterday at the home of Dr. Hall that he and his bride had gone to Marblehead Neck, Mass., where they would spend the Summer.

It was learned that Dr. Hall had tendered his resignation as minister of the church, in order to devote his entire time to literary and educational work. Dr. Hall was born in New Haven, Conn., March 19, 1860, and was educated for the ministry in Tufts College, in Massachusetts. He received a degree at St. Lawrence University, and after filling several important pastorates in New England came to the Church of the Divine Paternity as the successor to the Rev. Charles Henry Eaton in 1902. Some years ago he was urged to become President of the Universalist Church, the highest office in the gift of the denomination, but his parishioners would not consent, and he declined.

Dr. Hall is the author of "Common People," "Soul and Body," and other books, essays and pamphlets on religious and social subjects. His first wife was Miss Vermeille A. Swan of Lowell, Mass., whom he married in 1886.

GENEVA RED CROSS CENTRE.

Headquarters of League of Societies Are Opened There.

GENEVA, June 16.—The League of Red Cross Societies has opened its headquarters here in one of the oldest and most historic buildings of the city, near the ancient cathedral where Calvin and Knox preached.

The head of the league, Maj. Gen. Sir David Henderson, has arrived, and the French, Italian, and Japanese representatives, with a large personnel, are expected shortly.

COUNTERFEITED OUR SEALS.

Two Germans Seized in Coblenz Did Big Trade with Travel Permits.

COBLENZ, June 15, (Associated Press.)—The American military authorities have arrested in Coblenz two Germans who had in their possession counterfeits of the seals used by the Americans in stamping civilian identification cards in giving permission to travel.

It is believed that thousands of German civilians have been traveling at will through the use of the counterfeit seals, a charge of 50 marks and upward having been made by the Germans for the use of the seals.

Many civilians desiring to travel were willing to pay for the counterfeits in preference to standing in line at headquarters and of having their credentials passed upon and stamped by American intelligence officers.

Golf Course for Camp Upton.

CAMP UPTON, L. I., June 16.—A nine hole golf course for the use of officers and men will be opened here on Saturday. The home tee is in the centre of the camp on the grounds of the house of Brigadier General Nicholson, the camp commander, and the holes are scattered about within the garrison area. Captain Spencer Stewart, camp utilities officer, constructed the course, his men being directed by Sergeant Alex J. Olson of the cooks' and bakers' school, a well known left handed golfer.

Engaged.

COHEN—LEBOSS.—Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Leboss, 51 St. Nicholas Av., announce the engagement of their daughter, Anna, to Mr. Mack Cohen.

UBIS—McKEEFREY.—Mr. and Mrs. William D. McKeefrey of Leetonia, Ohio, announce the engagement of their daughter, Chloe Spearman McKeefrey, to Mr. Felix M. Uzis, Lieutenant, Coast Artillery Corps, United States Army, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Uzis of Norwood Park, Ill.

Married.

Will You Help The Home Building Campaign?

TODAY there is a great home buying and home building movement in the Boroughs of Brooklyn and Queens. It deserves to be encouraged. Lending money on mortgages will do this.

WE have loaned $16,000,000 on mortgage since January first and are prepared to lend more as fast as investors take these mortgages off our hands.

They are good mortgages, all of them guaranteed by the Bond & Mortgage Guarantee Company to net 5% to the investor.

We have sold $692,000,000 of such mortgages and no investor has ever lost a single penny. No other investment offered to the public has any such record.

We have on hand a number of small mortgages as shown below to meet the usual July first demand from investors.

Par-amount Prices

The prices of Par-amount Shirts were not chosen arbitrarily, and a shirt made to fit the prices—

Contrarily, a shirt of high standard quality and workmanship was evolved and then a fair price determined.

Consequently, $1.50 and $2.00 invested at any of the seven Par-amount Shops buys as good a shirt as any man needs to wear to enjoy peace of mind, comfort of body and health of pocketbook.

SATISFACTION!—that's the word that sums up the Par-amount idea—

PIPP'S HIT SAVES DAY FOR YANKEES

Single in Eleventh Sends Baker Home with Tally that Beats Browns, 4 to 3.

FIELDING VERY BRILLIANT

Shawkey Wavers in Eighth and Triple by Billings Ties Score for Visitors.

With one swing of his war club yesterday, Wally Pipp, the tall, rangy athlete who guards first base for the Yankees, turned back the St. Louis Browns on the Polo Grounds and kept the Miller Huggins clan within reaching distance of the American League pacesetters, the White Sox. Wally, after going through ten exciting innings without a hit, faced Bert Gallia, with a difficult situation confronting him, in the eleventh. The score was deadlocked, there was one out, and J. Franklin Baker was on second. The fact that Wally hadn't made a hit previously evidently caused Gallia to be careless. At any rate, the Browns' hurler served one about waist high to Pipp, and with a crash the old apple was off on a grass-burning journey to centre. Baker didn't lose any time getting the winning run home, and the tally gave the Yankees the attractive end of a 4 to 3 score.

The events which led up to this eleventh-inning triumph seemed to foretell just what was going to happen. Gallia, who had been decidedly steady after a poor first inning, winged Baker in the left thigh. Duffy Lewis dropped a sacrifice down toward first base. Baker raced to second while George Sisler and Joe Gedeon were making the putout on Lewis. There followed a few moments in which Gallia tried to induce Pipp to hit at some wide ones, and then Pipp sent 8,000 inhabitants of the hollow of Coogan's Bluff home in a happy frame of mind.

Yanks Score in First.

The Yankees paved their way in the first with a brace of markers, and further insured it in the fifth with a single tally. A Brown uprising in the eighth, however, in which Josh Billings came from the obscurity of the dugout to pummel across a brace of runs which tied the count, forced the teams into extra innings.

Bob Shawkey did the hurling for Huggins and seemed on the verge of catastrophe several times. Bob wasn't quite as thrifty in his hit allotment as he might be, but he had the happy faculty of getting himself out of holes and received fine support.

The Browns hopped on Shawkey in the third for three hits which started them off in the run column. In the seventh danger threatened for the home contingent when the sacks were crowded. A great running shoestring catch by Ping Bodie, however, turned back the threatened outbreak until the eighth, when Josh Billings pumped a damaging triple to right which tied the score.

Scintillating catches abounded during the two and one-half hours the teams struggled for supremacy, and Walter Gerber, the agile Browns' shortstop, contributed several fielding plays which captivated the crowd. Gerber engineered a lightning double play in the first which prevented further scoring by the Yanks, and twice in the ninth he choked off promising rallies. Baker speared three twisting foul flies over near the grand stand. Duffy Lewis chased Tobin almost to the left field fence for difficult flies.

Vick Starts Trouble.

The deep bass voice of the announcer had hardly died out in the first inning when Sam Vick slashed a single to centre. Peckinpaugh followed by beating out a hit to Gerber. Gallia didn't like the outlook with Baker at bat and finally allowed him to draw a pass, filling the bases. Lewis hit into a double play, while Vick scored and Peckinpaugh took third. Pipp drew a pass, and then came an attempt at a double steal. With the signal Peckinpaugh was off third on a dash for home. Mayer dropped Gedeon's return throw and Roger was safe with the Yanks' second run. Pratt popped up to Gerber for the third out.

In their half of the opening frame the Browns got frivolous with Bob Shawkey, but nothing resulted. After Austin fanned Gedeon pumped a single to centre and Tobin followed with a safe clout to left. Shawkey tightened here, however, and fanned Sisler.

The Browns got one run back in the third, when Shawkey had a wavering spell. Austin singled to centre. Gedeon forced him with a grounder to Baker. On Tobin's thump to right Gedeon went to third, and from this station he scored when Sisler beat out a hit to Peckinpaugh. Jacobson fanned for the third out.

With two down in the fourth, Ping Bodie larruped a fly to deep left which chased Tobin almost to the fence, where he set himself for the catch and then dropped the ball. Ping pulled up at second, but danced himself into trouble almost immediately. With Truck Hannah at bat, Ping kept skipping and prancing gayly about the second corner until he got so far off the bag he couldn't get back. Mayer suddenly whipped the ball to Gedeon, and Bodie, seeing his predicament, tore off for third. Gedeon had the ball in Austin's hands, however, in plenty of time to dispose of Bodie.

Vick and Peckinpaugh collaborated to give the Yanks another marker in the fifth. With two down, Vick beat out a hit to Gerber back of second. Sam took second when Gallia made a balk and Peckinpaugh singled to left, scoring Vick.

Bodie's Catch Saves Shawkey.

Shawkey had the elements set dead against him in the seventh, but got through the ordeal with flying colors. After Baker had speared Gerber's foul fly near the stand Mayer singled to left. Gallia flustered Peckinpaugh with a grounder near second and both runners were safe. Here Josh Billings was injected to run for Mayer. Baker made another thrilling catch on Austin, going almost to the stand for a foul fly. Gedeon drew a pass, filling the sacks, but Bodie saved the day with a difficult catch on Tobin's fly to short centre.

The Browns tied the count in the eighth. Sisler beat out a hit to Peckinpaugh. Jacobson skied to Bodie and Demmitt drew a pass. Peckinpaugh raced over to short left for Gerber's fly, and then Billings belted a twisting triple to right, clearing the sacks. Billings was left high and dry, however, when Peckinpaugh threw out Gallia.

Gallia had a fine chance to win his own game in the tenth. With two down, Gerber singled to centre and took second when Billings beat out a hit to Gedeon. Gallia tried his mightiest, but fanned.

DODGERS LOSE IN RAIN.

Storm Halts Game with Cardinals Leading, 2 to 0.

ST. LOUIS, June 16.—The jinx that has been trailing the Brooklyn Dodgers ever since they came into the West was back on their trail again today. This time it came in the form of a sudden thunderstorm which broke in the fifth inning of the game with the Cardinals and brought the game to a halt when the home team was leading by a score of 2 to 0.

The rain started to pelt the diamond while the Cardinals were coming to bat in their half of the fifth and poured so hard that it was impossible to resume play after a wait of half an hour. While the Cardinals had been able to score two runs the Dodgers had been playing good ball and Al Mamaux had been pitching a very good game. He had allowed but five hits and had apparently settled down to a real good afternoon.

Smith accounted for both the runs made by the Cardinals, making a double in each of the innings in which runs were registered. In the first inning he doubled and scored, when Miller followed with a single. In the third inning he again doubled and when Krueger made a wild throw on a roller in front of the plate the runner scored.

Meadows was in the box for the St. Louis team and was effective. He also received fine support.

PIRATES BEAT PHILLIES.

Gain Early Lead and Win by 6 to 5 Score.

PITTSBURGH, June 16.—Pittsburgh defeated Philadelphia today 6 to 5. Woodward was knocked out of the box in the first inning when the Pirates scored four runs. Three other pitchers were used by the visitors. In the eighth and ninth innings Adams was bombarded by Philadelphia, six hits netting four runs. Cooper was substituted and retired the side with two men on base. Third baseman Boeckel was released to the Boston team today. He will join the club when it comes here Wednesday.

PERSHING STADIUM READY.

Credit Given to American Army for Completion of Great Plant.

PARIS, Sunday, June 15 (Associated Press.)—The Paris newspapers whose representatives visited Pershing Stadium at Joinville-le-Pont, near Paris, yesterday, comment in flattering terms today on the record-breaking achievement in completing the tracks and arena buildings in fourteen weeks, and on the generous initiative of the American Army, to which Paris will owe one of the finest stadiums in the world.

The eventual participants in the Inter-Allied games which will inaugurate Pershing Stadium, continue to arrive, and training is going on intensively at Colombes and other tracks.

It is announced that Italy's representation in the games will comprise 150 of her best athletes, including oarsmen, fencers, boxers, football players, wrestlers, and horsemen, as well as the sprinters and long-distance runners previously announced.

The United States will enter a strong broadsword team, including Colonel Pullen, Colonel George S. Widener, and Lieutenants Louis N. Fleisher, Robert S. Hanse, and John Bartol. They will have to meet teams from Italy, Poland, Belgium, France, and Portugal.

GIANTS VICTORS IN EXTRA-INNING GAME

Jess Barnes Has Only One Bad Inning in Humbling Cubs for Third Time in Succession.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 16.—Ragged fielding by "Shufflin Phil" Douglas's supporting cast enabled the Giants to make it three in a row from the Cubs today by a score of 4 to 3. As on Sunday, it was necessary for the teams to go into extra innings before a decision was reached, the Giants rushing the winning run over the plate in the tenth inning. Jess Barnes opposed Douglas on the hill. He allowed only six hits, and except in the third inning had the Cubs at his mercy all the way.

The Giants "hopped off" to a two-run lead in the second inning, errors by Kilduff and Pick opening the way for them to score the brace of tallies that put them in front. After Pick had made a great play on Doyle's bunt and had thrown Larry out, Kilduff fumbled Kauff's grounder and Pick booted one from Zimmerman's bat. Chase lifted a fly to Mann, but McCarty walked and the bases were filled. Barnes then crashed the ball down into the left end corner of the park for two bases, and Kauff and Zimmerman scored. Burns was thrown out by Deal.

In the third the Cubs bunched three hits, one of them a freak double, and a base on balls for two runs, evening the count. O'Farrell singled to centre and was forced by Douglas. Flack rammed a double to right on which Douglas loped around to third and Pick walked with the bases loaded. Mann cracked the ball back at Barnes with the speed of a bullet. The pellet caromed off the pitcher's leg and into left field, and before it could be returned to the diamond, Douglas and Flack had scored, Pick rested on third base and Mann on second. Merkle hit to Fletcher, who threw Pick out at the plate, and immediately thereafter Mann was nipped at the rubber, McCarty to Doyle to McCarty, when he and Merkle essayed a double steal.

An error by Zimmerman, who otherwise played a superb game at the far corner, gave the Cubs a start in the fifth. Heinie booted a grounder hit down at him by O'Farrell, and Douglas pushed O'Farrell along to second with a sacrifice. Flack was tossed out by Doyle, but Pick scratched a hit past the box on which O'Farrell scored. Pick pilfered second, but was left stranded when Mann popped to Chase.

In the seventh the Giants tied the score. Chase doubled to left centre and moved along to third on McCarty's sacrifice. Barnes hit to Douglas, who threw to O'Farrell, and Chase was hung up between third base and the plate. O'Farrell pursued Chase back to third and then made a toss which Deal couldn't reach, Chase reaching the bag in safety. A sacrifice fly by Burns brought Chase home.

The Giants put on a rally in the ninth in the course of which McCarty was taken out to allow King to run for him. The rally failed when, with the bases full and only one out, Douglas tightened up and struck out Fletcher and Doyle. Earl Smith replaced McCarty behind the bat for the Giants in the Cubs' half of the inning, and in the tenth broke up the ball game.

Douglas started the tenth by fanning Kauff, but Zimmerman singled to right and stole second. Chase struck out, but Smith rapped a single over Pick's head and Zimmerman scored. Douglas put the brakes on too late and succeeded in fanning Burns.

Barber batted for Douglas in the Cubs' half of the frame, but was an easy out, as were Flack and Pick also.

NEWARK TAKES OPENER.

McCabe Successful in Pitchers' Duel with Thomas.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, N. J., June 16.—Newark defeated Buffalo in the first game of the series here today, 2 to 1. It was a pitcher's duel between McCabe and Thomas, with the Newark pitcher coming out on top. Thomas, the Buffalo pitcher, was knocked unconscious in the eighth, being hit by a ball thrown across the diamond by Sargeant.

Newark scored in the third on McAlpin's single, McCabe's sacrifice, and Letter's double. In the fourth Jacob singled, Cook sacrificed, took third on a balk, and tallied when Keating let McAlpin's blow get away from him.

HONORS FOR NAVY NINE.

Rare Insignia Bestowed on Players Who Defeated West Point.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., June 16.—Eleven midshipmen, members of the baseball nine which defeated the Military Academy, have received the long delayed honor of the "N" for baseball with star. This is given by the Navy Athletic Association only to those who participated in a victory over the Military Academy nine, so that no other group of midshipmen has received it since 1908, while only four besides this year's nine, have been so honored since the series began.

Those who received the star with the "N" are: Blakeslee, R. D. Baker, L. N. Baker, Doyle, Gaines, Cloughley, Milner, Pino, Clark, Humphreys, and Mulholland. Stubbs, regular centre fielder, who sprained his ankle a few days before the final game, received only the "N." Those who received numerals for baseball are: Anderson, Gillon, Bolton, McDonnell, Hillenkoetter, Wheichel, Poole, Fitzgerald, Bunting, McCann, W. V. Alexander, McLaury, Greber, Hartman, W. G. Alexander, Hogan, Harding, and Kelly.

The special honor of the crossed oars as well as the "N," was awarded to those who had rowed regularly on the crews which defeated Pennsylvania, Harvard, Princeton, and Syracuse on the Severn, and took first place in the American Henley. These are: Harris, Graff, Skinner, Ballreich, Ingram, Crawford, Reppiler, Graves, and Sanborn. The "N" was awarded to Weideman and Wellings, and the rowing numerals to Bailliere, Jackson, Richardson, Horton, King, Johnson, Gallagher, Keppel, Rothwell, and Wanselow.

The "N" for field and track was won by Fahrney, J. P. Curtis, E. B. Curtis, Pearson, Burdick, Momcewicz, Porter, and Benner, and numerals for field and track work by Hibbs, Perry, Bonney, Hart, Angerer, Haskell, Hintze, Macondray, Kane, Cook, Power, Dell, Alexander, D. L. Jones, Bueche, Perkins, Hudson, Baker, Kaufmann, Wallace, Farwell, Rockey, Clapp, and Carpentier.

The "LNT" for lacrosse was awarded to Gearing, Morse, Finebaum, Maichle, Scaffe, Burroughs, Voinot, Kaufmann, Buse, Pendleton, Wilkes, Herring, Shaw, Roth, Isbell, Ewen, Watters, Alford, Murray, and Severn. Lacrosse numerals went to Rodes, Lewis, Harvey, Moore, Corrigan, Flood, Morehouse, Nager, and Larson.

The "RNT" for rifle shooting was won by Rathbun, J. G. Jones, Walker, Rogers, Conradt, Cater, Holm, Halsey, Sampson, and J. A. Smith.

Jersey Athletes in Title Meet.

New Jersey's athletic talent plans a strong fight for the Metropolitan A. A. U. junior track and field championship in the annual title meet, which will be held at Stevens Tech Field, Hoboken, N. J., June 28. Entries were received yesterday from three New Jersey organizations, including Anchor A. C., Perth Amboy Y. M. C. A., and Stevens Institute. The Jersey Harriers' A. A. has also nominated its junior athletes for the meet. It is expected that the meet will attract one of the largest entries ever received for a junior title competition.

DAMROSCH TAKES THE GARDEN CITY

Only Favorite to Win, and in Three Days but Four Choices Have Captured Brackets.

Jockey Johnny Loftus further increased his popularity yesterday, when he rode Commander J. K. L. Ross's Damrosch to victory and stopped for the moment the run of losing favorites that has been remarkable at Jamaica. Damrosch was the only public choice to catch the judges' eye and in the last three days there have been but four winning favorites.

As a matter of fact, it was the skill of Loftus and the confidence of his supporters that made Damrosch start favorite for the Garden City Selling Stakes at a mile and a sixteenth, which was the feature of an excellent card that attracted more than 10,000 persons to the track. In the early speculation the lightly weighted Frederick the Great, a horse with a great turn of speed but suspected of little class and stamina, was the choice. Damrosch had to carry 115 pounds, but when Loftus's name was posted as the rider there was a stampede to get aboard, and Damrosch was backed from 4 to 1 to 13 to 5, while Frederick the Great receded in the betting.

Though Woodtrap broke in front he had to give way to the speed of Frederick the Great, which went around the first turn with an advantage of several lengths. Loftus had preferably taken the outside position, instead of No. 2, which he drew, an indication that he was in no hurry to go to the front, but in the run along the back stretch he moved up with Damrosch and was in second place going to the turn. There the crack jockey determined to test the courage of Frederick the Great, and he shot Damrosch up alongside for a sharp duel that quickly ended in favor of the Ross candidate. With Frederick the Great disposed of Damrosch had the race at his mercy and Loftus kept him well in hand through the stretch to win by three lengths from W. L. Oliver's Kilts II., which closed very fast and took the place from G. D. Widener's Rose d'Or. The time of 1:47 1-5 is only a fifth of a second slower than the record for the stake.

One of the surprises of the day was furnished in the Montague Handicap at a mile and a sixteenth, which brought out horses of better class and was run in faster time than the stake event. Here the big plunge was on the Brookside Stable's King Plaudit, which is reckoned among the best of the three-year-olds. He ran a good, game race, but weight told its tale at the finish and King Plaudit had to give way before the rush of Theodore Cook's Jack Stuart, a four-year-old that was in receipt of 31 pounds by the scale.

The race was a sizzler all the way. Lyke going out to set the pace with King Plaudit, Valor, and Jack Stuart following him closely all along the back stretch and around the last turn. The pursuers of King Plaudit closed on him as he straightened out for the run through the home stretch, but Lyke went to work to maintain his lead and, though plainly tired, King Plaudit managed to hold his own until the last 100 yards. There he staggered under the weight and, as he wavered, Wessler shot by with Jack Stuart to gain the verdict by a length, with Valor another length further back. The time was 1:46 2-5.

W. R. Coe's Terentia, top weight and favorite for the second race, for three-year-old fillies, again disappointed her admirers. Terentia had to concede weight to a number of smart fillies and never was dangerous. John Sanford's Alphee, a 12 to 1 shot, was in front all through the six furlongs, with Ophelia pressing her closely. At the home turn Loftus challenged with W. S. Kilmer's My Friend, but could not make an impression on the leader, which went on to score by four lengths. My Friend held the place by a length from Ophelia.

The greatest shock of all came in the last race, for two-year-olds, in which nearly every one of the nine starters was liberally tipped, with W. Booth's Neddam an odds-on favorite. M. Kornblum's Ira Wilson, a colt that was bought cheaply by Paul J. Fox for the benefit of the tobacco fund, was one of the few overlooked and some speculators received as good as 30 to 1 against his chances. Ira Wilson was close up all the way and came with a great burst of speed in the last sixteenth to capture the purse from R. H. McPotter's Romany, a well-backed second choice.

BY JINGO WINS HANDICAP.

De Pledge's Horse Easily Takes English Race from Aynsley.

MANCHESTER, England, June 16.—The Manchester Cup Handicap of the value of $12,500 was run off here over a course of one and a half miles and won by W. de Pledge's By Jingo, ridden by Hulme, by four lengths ahead of Horatio Bottomley's Aynsley, with Ashworth in the saddle. F. Hardy's Happy Man was third, three-quarters of a length behind. Thirty-four entries were received for this handicap, but only nine horses went to the post. The betting was: By Jingo, 7 to 2; Aynsley, 3 to 1, and Happy Man, 8 to 1. J. Rhodes trained the winner.

CUDGEL IS TOP WEIGHT.

Commander Ross's Entry Leads Candidates for Brooklyn Handicap.

Commander J. K. L. Ross's Cudgel has been allotted the post of honor for the Brooklyn Handicap, at a mile and a furlong, which will be the attraction on the opening day of the Queens County Jockey Club meeting at Aqueduct next Monday. Cudgel is asked to shoulder 130 pounds and give away weight to all of the others in an entry of sixty-four. Naturalist, winner of the Excelsior last Saturday, will incur a penalty that will bring his impost up to 127 pounds, and he will share second place on the list with Westy Hogan. Sunny Slope, 125; The Porter, 123; Exterminator, 122, and Star Hawk, 122, are next in order.

Purchase is rated the best of the three-year-olds engaged. The new rival to Sir Barton will have to carry 112 pounds and give one pound to Billy Kelly and two pounds to Sweep On.

CHANNEL SWIMS IN VIEW.

Wolff and Burgess May Again Attempt Difficult Feat.

Jabez Wolff, the noted swimmer, who has made many attempts to swim the English Channel, is once more in training for the event, after recently accomplishing a fine long distance swim in the Thames. It is possible that T. W. Burgess, who swam the Channel in 1911, may venture to establish a record by accomplishing the feat a second time.

Burgess, who has long been a resident in France, has been pretty hard hit by the war. Both his wife and daughter are dead, but his son came through the fighting unurt. If Burgess does make another attempt to swim the Channel he will start from the French coast.

Bensonhurst Bouts Attract Boxers.

The committee in charge of the amateur boxing tournament of the Bensonhurst Yacht Club, yesterday announced the receipt of nine entries. Five boxers have entered for the 110-pound class, three for the 130-pound division, and one for the 120-pound section of the tournament. The bouts will be held June 24 and 26.

WOMEN'S NATIONAL TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIP COMMENCES WITH FAVORITES VICTORS

FAVORITES COME THROUGH AT NETS

No Upsets in First Day's Play at Philadelphia for Women's National Championship.

MISS BJURSTEDT WINS TWO

Champion, Not Extended, Takes Matches in Immediate Succession—Mrs. Wightman Wins.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, June 16.—Sixty-four of America's leading women tennis players began play this afternoon on the turf courts of the Philadelphia Cricket Club, St. Martin's, for the national title. Among them was Miss Molla Bjurstedt, the present holder as well as three-time former champion, and Mrs. George W. Wightman, and both of these have come through the first round in easy style.

Miss Bjurstedt obviously saved her energy in her match against Mrs. Robert Herold of Philadelphia, refusing to run after any ball that called for unusual exertion and trusting to the speed of her drives and her opponent's plentiful errors to carry her through to victory. The champion took things easy on her service and rarely exerted herself in the rallies, although Mrs. Herold made some good recoveries and often managed to keep the ball in play until the Norse girl executed a brilliant placement shot to close out the point. The sets went 6-0; 6-1.

Miss Bjurstedt Wins Another.

Not satisfied with this success, Miss Bjurstedt immediately proceeded to play Miss Marion Murray, who had advanced by the default of Miss Gertrude Della Torre, and this time she did not allow the loser a game, although still refraining from any undue effort. These two easy victories placed the champion in the third round.

Mrs. Wightman, who drew Mrs. Erskine M. Smith, another local player, as her first opponent, did quite as well as the champion, going through the match without the loss of a game and never being extended sufficiently to call upon her entire repertoire of strokes. She will meet Miss Phyllis Walsh of Philadelphia tomorrow in what should prove a far better test of her powers.

Miss Eleanor Goss and Miss Marion Hindercorn, the present holders of the national doubles title, both won their second-round brackets by default, while Miss Eleonora Sears, a former doubles champion, defeated Mrs. H. F. Kerbaugh, 6-2, 6-3, without great difficulty.

Miss Wagner Gets Victory.

Miss Marie Wagner of New York, another prominent contender, began with a clean-cut victory over Miss Katharine Porter, last year's winner of the girls' national championship, at 6-3, 6-1, and Miss Clare Cassel, recent winner of the Ardsley invitation tournament and of the championship of Pennsylvania and the Eastern States, triumphed over Mrs. R. T. Nalle of Philadelphia in two one-sided sets, 6-0, 6-2.

The same score was registered by Mrs. De Forest Candee against Miss Margaret Taylor, the case of this victory coming as something of a surprise to the gallery.

The morning hours were devoted to the starting of the girls' championship, in which there are twenty-seven entries. The present champion, Miss Katharine Porter, drew a bye, and then advanced to the third round by an easy victory over Miss Emma Morris at 6-1, 6-1. But a number of the other matches were far closer, two of them running to three sets. Of the winners, Miss Adelaide Hooker of New York had the hardest task, losing the opening set to Miss Helen Sewell at 6-3, squaring the match with a 6-4 session, but being carried to 12-10 in the rubber before the winning shot was scored.

Bayard Sisters to Fore.

The Bayard sisters, Martha and Alice, of Short Hills, were both successful in their opening matches, the former defeating Miss Margaretta Sharpless, 7-5, 6-1, while the latter won more easily from Miss Susan Goodman at 6-1, 6-0. A surprise came in the quick defeat of Miss Ceres Baker, runner-up for this year's girls' metropolitan championship. She lost to Miss Elizabeth Warren in rather a one-sided fashion, getting only three games in the first set and none at all in the second.

The national doubles and mixed doubles events will begin tomorrow.

One of the youngsters who played in the girls' event also made an exceptional showing in the women's singles. This was Miss Elizabeth Warren, aged 16, of Richmond, Va., who, after her morning victory over Miss Cereo Baker, defeated Mrs. M. B. Straffin of the West Side Tennis Club, 6-3, 7-5. Miss Warren played in splendid form, pulling out the second set after the games stood 5-1 against her. Another 16-year-old entry from the South is Miss Penelope Anderson, who won a junior match from Miss Buriel Binzen today in two close sets, 6-4, 9-7.

The longest and hardest match of the afternoon came in the closing hours of the play, when two New York stars, Mrs. W. H. Pritchard and Mrs. E. V. Lynch, were brought together by the luck of the draw. Mrs. Lynch won the opening set, after an extended driving duel, by a 6-3 score, but Mrs. Pritchard squared the count by duplicating this feat, and then ran on to a brilliant finish at 6-4, putting all her power into her strokes until the winning point had been registered.

Miss Mary Thayer of Philadelphia joined Miss Bjurstedt in the third round also in the afternoon by her successive victories over Mrs. L. B. Bailey and Miss Virginia Carpenter.

The summaries:

Women's Singles.—First Round—Mrs. M. B. Stoff, New York Tennis Club, defeated Mrs. Margaret Moses, Chevy Chase, 6-4, 7-5; Miss Eleanor Goss, West Side, won from Miss Helen Sewell, Huntingdon Valley, by default; Mrs. George Wightman, Longwood Cricket Club, defeated Mrs. Erskine Smith, Philadelphia Country Club, 6-1, 6-0; Miss Phyllis Walsh, Philadelphia Country, defeated Mrs. George Stawnix, New York Tennis Club, 6-3, 6-4; Miss Anna Townsend, Merion, defeated Miss Jessie Gott, West Side, 6-3, 6-3.

Miss Elizabeth Warren, Westmoreland, defeated Mrs. Straffin, West Side, 6-3, 7-5; Mrs. Robert Leroy, West Side, defeated Mrs. E. C. Dubie, West Side, 6-0, 6-2; Miss M. Iler, New York Tennis, defeated Mrs. Lewis Morris, Jr., Yonkers, by default; Mrs. Gilbert Harvey, Philadelphia Country, defeated Miss Augusta Wurm, New York Tennis, 6-2, 6-0; Mrs. D. S. F. Fullerton Weaver, West Side, won from Mrs. Rawson, West Side, by default; Miss Anne Naylor, Philadelphia Cricket, won from Miss Deborah Seal, Merion, by default; Miss Mary Newbold, Philadelphia Cricket, defeated Miss Margaretta Dixon, Philadelphia Cricket, by default; Mrs. Theodore Sohst, West Side, defeated Miss Gladys Payne, Germantown, 6-3, 6-1; Miss May Heaton, Greenwich Field Club, defeated Miss Margaretta Sharpless, Philadelphia, 6-1, 6-1; Miss Adelaide Hooker, Greenwich Field, won from Mrs. S. H. Waring, New York Tennis, by default; Miss Dorothy Newbold, Philadelphia, defeated Miss Margie Furguson, Philadelphia, 6-1, 2-6, 6-4; Miss Clement Wainwright, Philadelphia, defeated Miss Emily Welsh, Philadelphia, 6-3, 6-0; Miss Molla Bjurstedt, West Side, defeated Mrs. Robert Herold, Belfield, 6-0, 6-1; Miss Marion Murray, Belfield, defeated Miss Gertrude Della Torre, West Side, by default; Miss Marie Wagner, New York Tennis, defeated Miss Katherine Porter, Philadelphia, 6-3, 6-1; Miss Katherine Gardner, West Side, defeated Mrs. J. F. Bailey, Longwood, 6-4, 6-3; Miss Katherine Lauder, Greenwich Field, defeated Miss Rebecca Thomson, Philadelphia, 6-4, 6-3.

Miss Virginia Carpenter, Philadelphia, won from Mrs. George Powell, Cynwyd, by default; Miss Mary D. Thayer, Philadelphia Cricket, defeated Mrs. W. Lewis Bailey, West Side, 6-20, 6-2; Miss Deforest Candee, West Side, defeated Miss Margaret Taylor, West Side, 6-0, 6-3; Miss Marian Zinderstein, Longwood, won from Mrs. N. W. Niles, Longwood, by default; Miss Florence Ballin, West Side, defeated Miss Penelope Anderson, Westmoreland, 6-3, 6-1; Miss Eleonora Sears, Longwood, defeated Mrs. H. F. Kerbaugh, Belfield, 6-2, 6-3; Mrs. F. S. Cabot, Longwood, defeated A. D. Smoker, Belfield, 6-1, 6-1. Second Round—Miss Molla Bjurstedt, West Side, defeated Miss Marion Murray, Belfield, 6-0, 6-0; Miss Mary D. Thayer, Philadelphia, defeated Miss Virginia Carpenter, Philadelphia, 6-0, 6-2.

AMERICAN TEAM ARRIVES.

A. E. F. Tennis Players Reach Wimbledon to Play for Grass Title.

LONDON, June 15. (Associated Press.)—The lawn tennis team representing the American Expeditionary Forces has arrived to compete in the world's grass championships beginning at Wimbledon on June 23. The team comprises Captain Watson M. Washburn, seventh man in the United States in 1916; Lieutenant Dean Mathey, the tenth man; Captain Graves of the All-New Yorkers, Captain Cannon, champion of Missouri; Major Robert D. Wrenn, former Davis Cup player, and Lieutenant Brown, Jr., a prominent member of the Harvard team.

In the men's doubles these players will be partners as follows: Washburn and Mathey, Graves and Brown, Cannon and Wrenn.

Lieutenant Mathey stated today that the members of the team were in fine fettle. They are keenly anticipating the tournament, as the United States has not been represented on the Wimbledon courts since the visit of Maurice E. McLoughlin of California in 1913. Moreover, it will constitute the greatest American invasion Wimbledon has ever experienced.

The championships will include six of the finest Australian players, including the world's champion, Norman Brookes, and also South Africans and Canadians and the best French players.

AUSTRALIANS WILL COME.

Tennis Team Now in England to Invade United States.

LONDON, Sunday, June 15. (Associated Press.)—The Australian lawn tennis team, which recently played in the inter-allied tournament in Paris, is going to the United States after the championship matches at Wimbledon, and will participate in the American championships. It is not decided as yet whether Norman Brookes, the widely known Australian player, will be included on the team.

COMPLETE FOOTBALL PLANS

Harvard Squad Will Probably Report Sept. 15.

Now that Harvard has put its football house in order by arranging the most important detail in the plans for the coming season, announcement is to be made this week of the time when the Fall practice will begin. Sept. 15 is the date likely to be selected for the main squad, to report to Coach Robert Fisher.

There will be little change in the Harvard coaching staff next Fall. All Percy Haughton's lieutenants who can find time to do so will aid in the development of the team. No one has been more active in seeing that Harvard football be placed in the proper hands than Haughton himself. The great Harvard coach will probably spend the greater part of the remainder of the year in the South, but in the event of his work being transferred to Boston or even New York he has promised Coach Fisher his assistance.

Leo H. Leary, end coach, who announced his retirement several months ago, is expected to modify that statement. R. W. P. Brown, the strategic coach and chief scout, is expected to be present, and many other coaches who have surrounded Haughton during his seasons of success on the gridiron will flock to Fisher's assistance if they are needed.

Walter H. Wheeler, Jr., of Albany, N. Y., Captain-elect of the 1917 team, sent word to Cambridge several weeks ago that he would not return to college, but the selection of Fisher, who is an especial friend of the young New Yorker, may cause him to change his mind. The selection of a Captain at any event will not be made until the Fall, when the players have an opportunity to get acquainted.

The Crimson has this to say of the new coach:

"The uncertainty which has surrounded the university's coming football season has been largely dispelled by the Athletic Committee's selection of the new coach. Robert Fisher has been spoken of as an available candidate ever since it was definitely known that Major Haughton could not return. His experience under that recent coach, not only as an assistant but as a player, makes him particularly valuable.

"The football outlook is, on the whole, a bright one. Seven former 'H' men will be able to play, which is a remarkably fine showing when it is considered that the last formal games were played and the last letters awarded two seasons ago. Besides this, the Spring practice of two months ago brought out the welcome fact that at least as large a supply of first-rate new material is available as in any one recent year. Of course, there will be difficulties, for, as in other sports, the continuity has been broken, and it will take time and infinite practice to reform old habits and to lick musty material into shape. Former Coach Haughton, however, has expressed every confidence in Mr. Fisher's abilities as next year's coach, and the seven 'H' men who have worked under him before are ready to swear by him. Moreover, Coach Fisher himself has declared his fixed intention of continuing, in essentials, at least, the Haughton system."

Murchison's Club in Doubt.

Despite the fact that Loren Murchison, the St. Louis sprinter, is understood to be affiliated with the New York A. C., it was reported yesterday that the Missourian was considering the proposition of joining the athletic ranks of the Robins Dry Dock. Homer Baker of the Glencoe A. C. is building up a representative athletic team for the shipyards and is said to have been in negotiation with Murchison in an effort to obtain the latter's membership.

KUMAGAE DEFEATS DONALDSON AT NETS

Japanese Player Reaches the Fourth Round in Brooklyn Championship Tourney.

Ichiya Kumagae, the Japanese net star, advanced through the first three rounds of the annual Brooklyn championship tournament for men, which got under way yesterday on the courts of the Terrace Club in Flatbush. The Oriental player, drawing a bye in the first round, made his way through the two succeeding flights without the slightest trouble.

In his second round match Kumagae triumphed over Gerald Donaldson, Jr., in convincing fashion by scores of 6-2, 6-3. Kumagae's success in the third round was ever more convincing when he swept aside the attempts of D. Moorehead and took the match in straight sets by 6-1, 6-2.

Seldom before has the Flatbush club's courts presented such a busy spectacle. The tournament attracted an entry list of close to one hundred. Defaults were conspicuous by their absence. Thirty-one matches were decided from the time the first pair took to the courts until dusk was beginning to settle over the Brooklyn club's grounds. The only default profited E. Geltner, who advanced through the first round at the expense of E. A. Davis.

Frank T. Anderson, metropolitan titleholder, placed himself in the third round through a victory in the second round over M. Macksoud. The young district champion was not forced at any period of the match to extend himself to his limit, for his net attack easily smothered the efforts of Macksoud. Anderson took the first set at 6-love and the second at 6-2. The metropolitan champion drew a bye in the first round.

Gerald Emmerson, the young East Orange player, battled his way through the first round after one of the stiffest matches of the day. Emmerson drew as his opponent F. Kynaston, who furnished somewhat of a surprise. Emmerson took the first set at 6-4. In the second set Kynaston rallied and evened the match through a 6-3 success. The two players fought hard throughout the third and deciding set, the East Orange youngster finally winning 7-5.

This match was the only one in the men's singles title test to go an extra set, although several of the matches were won after extra games had been contested.

Allen Behr was also among the successful competitors. He drew a bye for the first round and captured his second round match from H. E. Evans by 6-4, 6-3.

In addition to the men's singles championship tournament, competition got under way in the chase for the boys' and junior titles. Ten matches were decided in the latter two events, and produced some keen play. Jerry Lang went through the second round of the boys' event after a hard three-set match with E. Kuhn, the former winning by 6-4, 4-6, 6-3.

Another three-set match was furnished in the first round of the junior tournament, wherein R. Talmadge defeated D. Silverman by 6-4, 3-6, 6-4.

FREEBOOTERS VICTORS.

Win from Rumson Four in Polo Match.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, June 16.—Berens Waters, playing No. 1 for the Rumson Polo Club in its losing fight with the Bryn Mawr Freebooters at the Philadelphia Country Club today, was seriously injured in the seventh period when he crashed into a goal post, his mount going at full gallop. With his head down, the blow struck his neck and he was so stunned that a moment later he threw up his hands and plunged off, landing on his right shoulder, and, it is feared, breaking his collarbone. At any rate, the shoulder was badly lacerated. It was an "out of luck" incident for the Rumson team, as Mr. Waters was just on the point of making a sure stroke for a much-needed goal when he was knocked out.

The Bryn Mawr Freebooters won the contest, 9¾ goals to 8. The game, which was the second in the tournament for the Temora cups, being played to the finish with G. B. Fletcher taking Mr. Waters' place.

The game was a good companion to the contest on Saturday, in which the Bryn Mawr Polo Club beat the Philadelphia Country Club four, and will match the Bryn Mawr Freebooters Wednesday for the final against the regular Bryn Mawr team.

The line up and summary:

McInnis Has Great Record.

BOSTON, June 16.—"Stuffy" McInnis, crack first baseman of the Boston Americans, is developing a remarkable fielding record. Playing in all thirty-eight games of the Red Sox to date, at the difficult first base position, McInnis has fielded without flaw. He has handled the ball 421 times for 401 putouts and twenty assists. His average of 1,000 is unequalled on the team by any man playing a regular position, the team average being .976.

WILLARD BATTERS SPARRING PARTNERS

Champion Knocks Out Heinen Twice as He Announces End of Burlesque Bouts.

TOLEDO, June 16.—Sparring partners in Jess Willard's training camp received a punching today that they did not anticipate. The champion informed them before the workout that he intended to eliminate all burlesque from his training and that they would have to look out for themselves. He boxed them in rotation, permitting each man to rest two rounds after boxing one.

Jack Heinen was knocked out twice in the first round that he worked. A right hand cross to the chin dropped him flat, and Willard shadow boxed around the ring until the Chicagoan recovered. Another short right to the jaw a little later sent Heinen to the canvas. When it came his turn for the eighth round, he was outside the ring holding his head in his hands.

Jack Hempel and Walter Monahan also received a battering during the six rounds they faced the champion. After the work with the gloves, Willard shadow boxed at top speed, wrestled, and allowed his partners to stand across the ring and throw the heavy medicine ball at his midsection.

Dempsey did no work with the gloves today, but lugged at the weights, shadow boxed, and punched the bag to satisfy the crowd which stood in the rain to watch him go through his paces. Manager Kearns said tonight that the challenger weighed 196 pounds, and that he would not be permitted to do any boxing or strenuous work until Saturday or Sunday.

The Army, Navy, and Civilian Board of Boxing Control today advised Tex Rickard, promoter of the Independence Day contest, that it had accepted Rickard's invitation to pick the referee and other officials. The board, Rickard was advised, will submit a list of referees to Dempsey and Willard and from those approved by the boxers the board will make its selection.

BOOM IN SOCCER FOOTBALL.

Gate Receipts in England More Than Double Those of 1918.

That soccer football has returned to popularity in England is shown in the annual financial statement issued by the football league. The total gate receipts for the season amounted to $753,550, against $347,695, the previous year. The biggest gate during April was $8,530 for the Liverpool-Everton match, this being the highest in the Lancashire or Midland sections. There were two over $5,000. Gate receipts during April amounted to $153,000, which compares with only $20,000 twelve months before.

GRANTLAND RICE IN LEAD.

Has Low Score in Newspapermen's Golf Tourney.

A gross of 79 gave Grantland Rice the place of honor at the head of the competitors in the first round of the New York Newspaper Golf Club annual championship tournament which started yesterday on the links of the Englewood Country Club. Rice made the outgoing trip in 39 strokes and returned in 40.

One stroke behind Rice was Frank M. Gould, whose card showed 40 for both outgoing and incoming journeys. Allen F. Poinsett, champion of last year, finished third with an 83. The titleholder went out in 43 and returned in 40. Fred Flaugh was fourth with 44, 45—89.

In addition to the prize for the leading scores the organization officials decided to distribute two prizes for the leading net scores. The first prize was won by Gould, who had a card of with 83, 5—78.

The tournament will be concluded next Monday.

LEONARD DEFEATS DUNDEE.

Champion Has Better of Fast Six-Round Bout.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, June 16.—Benny Leonard, world's lightweight champion, had to exercise every lesson he ever learned in boxing to defeat Johnny Dundee at the Phillies' Park tonight. The battle, the final bout of an all-star bill, went the full limit of six rounds with the title holder the victor on points by a fair margin. Every bout between Leonard and Dundee has been a whirlwind and this battle was no exception.

As soon as the opening bell sounded Dundee sprang out of his corner and went after the champion. It was a good thing that Leonard was set for such a rush or he might have been smothered at the start. Dundee was the aggressor but his difficulty was in getting his blows home. Leonard's wonderful blocking and sidestepping carried him out of danger time and again. Then when Leonard hit, his blows generally landed. One of Leonard's blows was worth six of Dundee's.

In the second Benny's generalship began to count, but at no time did the Italian give him a rest. Leonard won the honors in the second and third. The batting was even in the fourth, Dundee getting to Benny's jaw for the first time. These bouts made the champion cautious. The fifth and sixth were two cyclonic affairs. Dundee tried desperately for a knockout, but his rival was too fast and cool. By using his left after every rush he more than held his own and was entitled to the verdict by a fair margin. The crowd was the largest that has seen a fight here since the Kilbane-Leonard bout in 1917.

Irish Patsy Cline carried too powerful a punch for Eddie Moy of Allentown, and won the honors of a sizzling bout. Cline scored a knockdown early and made Moy timid. In the fifth, the Allentown boy suddenly turned aggressor and staggered Cline. He also fought harder in the sixth, but Cline came back strong and forced Eddie to hold. In this round a big crash was opened over Moy's left eye as a result of battling Patsy. Patsy was downish and often held his arms down as an invitation for Moy to punch him. But it was noticeable that any time it was required Cline could always pull a spurt that staved Eddie off.

RICE MAY COACH CORNELL.

He Is Mentioned as Possible Successor to Courtney.

It is expected that some definite action will be taken at Cornell this week to revise the plans for rowing. This may also involve a change in coaches, as it is doubtful if Charles E. Courtney will continue, owing to his age.

A meeting of old crew men has been called for Friday at which Eddie Foote, stroke oar of the '04, '05 and '06 varsity crews, and other noted oarsmen, will discuss with Courtney and the rowing committee the situation as it now exists and make recommendations for the future.

Many old oarsmen are in favor of Mr. Courtney selecting a man to succeed him as coach and there is general agreement that this is the time to name the man. Courtney stood the last rowing season very well, his health is better than in many months, but he is 70 years old and he realizes, and rowing men at the university realize, that at best he has only a few years of service left. It is believed certain that he will have to give up all coaching within a few years.

The man most frequently discussed as Courtney's logical successor is James Rice, former coach of the Columbia crews, who is held in high esteem in Cornell rowing circles. It is believed that Courtney will approve the recommendation.

Entries for New York A. C. Bouts.

Julius Schwartz of the Brooklyn A. A. and I. Levine of the Pastime A. C. were the first two boxers to enter for the amateur tournament, which will be conducted by the New York A. C. June 23. Schwartz will compete at 115 pounds and Levine at 135 pounds. Entries for the tournament will close Thursday.

YALE AND HARVARD OARSMEN TUNE UP

Crews Take Short Sprints in Preparation for Big Race on Friday.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 16.—Both Yale and Harvard's rowing squads had light practice tonight, none of the crews going below the submarine base, the two-mile mark of the course. Harvard's two 'Varsity and freshmen eights were taken in hand by Coach "Bill" Haines at 5:30 o'clock, and all paddled in a bunch to the naval station. Here they were lined up for a brush over two miles up stream, the 'Varsity winning out by a close margin over the freshmen in 11:07, and the second 'Varsity a boat length astern the first-year shells.

Yale's freshmen had a half-mile sprint over the upper end of the course, while Harvard was monopolizing the middle half. After Coach Abbott had put the freshmen through a half-hour manoeuvres he called for the second 'Varsity and gave them an opportunity to row long stretches with new bars. Yale's 'Varsity crew did not launch its shell until about 7 o'clock and paddled and rowed over the upper end of the course for an hour.

All the oarsmen at both quarters are in excellent health. George Batchelder, who injured his knee playing baseball at Red Top, has returned and taken his seat in the 'Varsity boat and will row with the 'Varsity crew next Friday. Betting favors Yale on all three races, which will be held Friday morning and afternoon.

When Harvard and Yale's 'Varsity eight rowed time trials up the four-mile course late Saturday night the conditions were apparently the same, an incoming tide and scarcely any breeze. Harvard got away about 7:45 o'clock and Yale a half hour later. Harvard's time being 21:34 and Yale's 21:13. As Red Top is claimed Yale had a more favorable current, and the Crimson backers are ready to place even money on the Cambridge oarsmen. Yale has great faith in their second 'Varsity and freshmen crews.

Lockwood to Run for N. Y. A. C.

Jos Lockwood, former University of Pennsylvania sprinter, will probably soon be competing for the New York A. C. A report was current in athletic circles yesterday that Lockwood had joined the Mercury Foot Club. The former Red and Blue athlete has been training recently on the quarter-mile track at Macomb's Dam Park.

THE FUTURE LOOKS TO ITS WOMEN

In every land women are successfully applying their energy and intelligence to the solution of national problems—civic problems—business problems—home problems. Pictorial Review, the first great woman's magazine to recognize the broadening of women's interests, continues to lead the way in reporting new activities, new opportunities, and the great constructive good that women everywhere are accomplishing!

Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt

Can a New York society girl do a hard day's work?

CAN a girl brought up in luxury sweep and scrub all day long without going to pieces? Would she stick to drudgery day after day without complaining? Would she stand discomfort, long hours, rough living and no amusements?

These are the questions Mrs. Vanderbilt—the New York society leader—asked herself when she went to France as head of the Red Cross Canteen Service. Read Mrs. Vanderbilt's answers to her own questions in her striking article called "The New Four Hundred" in Pictorial Review for July.

Kathleen Norris

Can you keep a servant?

IF not, is it because women, as employers of labor have failed? How is it that your husband can take your friend's youngest son into his office without lowering his social position while your friend's young daughter cannot come to work in your house on a basis of equality?

Read Kathleen Norris's startlingly original solution of this universal problem entitled "Help, Help, Who Wants Help?"

Rheta Childe Dorr

Are our thirteen million aliens to be Americans or Bolshevists?

IMAGINE it! A salaried press agent of the Russian Bolsheviki carried on propaganda work at a meeting in a New York school amid yells of approval. Almost unbelievable, isn't it? But it actually happened. You will get the shock of your life when you read Rheta Childe Dorr's fact-story in Pictorial Review for July. It is called "America Must Be Americanized," and it will make you blush for our lack of national feeling.

Color Portraits of the Peace Makers

Wilson—Lloyd George—Clemenceau

THE world will never forget these three great peacemakers. The forceful personality of our president, the indomitable spirit of the British statesman, the fighting soul of the French premier.

ARMY OF 500,000 URGED BY BAKER

Senate Committee Hearing Develops Sharp Colloquies Over His Program.

GEN. MARCH PRESSES NEED

Force Required to Fulfill This Country's New Duties Under a League of Nations.

CITE ENGLAND'S AIR FLEET

Gen. Menoher Also a Witness as to Vast Increase Abroad—Dispute Over Gas Warfare.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Appearing before the Senate Military Affairs Committee today, Secretary Baker urged that the Senate restore the provision in the Army Appropriation bill, eliminated by the House, through which the War Department would be able to maintain this year an army of 500,000 men.

Mr. Baker argued that, with the necessity of patrolling the Mexican border and of keeping some 100,000 men in France to look after the work of dismantling military establishments built by the American forces, the department could not get along with the 300,000 men proposed to be allowed under the measure as it passed the House. The Secretary of War, in reply to questions by various Senators, said that the United States must expect for some time to maintain an army of 500,000 men.

General March, Chief of Staff, who also appeared as a witness, told the committee he believed the United States should resort to compulsory military service to raise an army of the proportions required.

In the course of General March's testimony, Senator Frelinghuysen of New Jersey asked him how many men the army would require under the League of Nations.

"That is hard to say," replied General Marsh.

Senator Frelinghuysen spoke of Article X., providing for the guarantee of territorial integrity of nations in the League, and asked the General how many American soldiers he calculated would be needed to carry out that provision, so far as it involved this country.

"Oh, I should say at least 500,000," replied the General. "If the United States did its share, as I suppose it would naturally."

"That's a conservative estimate," commented Senator Frelinguysen in an undertone.

March Sees Larger Allied Armies.

Supporting Secretary Baker's appeal for an appropriation for an army of 500,000 men, General March spoke of Great Britain and France having put their peace-time armies on a basis immeasurably greater than they were before the war. Great Britain, which had an army of some 150,000 before the war, had decided, he said, to maintain an army now of 925,000 men, while France's army was appreciably over the pre-war basis. General March asked that figures he gave of France's army be not made public.

General March assured the committee that the United States, contrary to criticism made in the House, had not abandoned its activities in aircraft output. He said that private concerns might be closed down in production for national use, but the Government would keep up the output as required.

Mr. Baker told the committee that, while demobilization was going on in France as rapidly as possible, the War Department will not be able to reduce its force below 100,000 this year. Altogether, he said, 500,000 men would have to be kept in the army "to make it safe."

The task of getting the men back home, Mr. Baker said, is a tremendous one, many problems having come up. The Secretary explained that huge ammunition stores and manufacturing plants must be protected while the work of dismantling buildings goes on.

The War Department's idea, Mr. Baker said, is to have the Army of Occupation in Germany handled from Antwerp or Rotterdam, as bases, instead of from French ports. The reason for this, he said, is that it will be easier and more economical to move troops and materials along the Rhine than along the French railroads.

"All the great establishments in France are being shut down, beginning just back of the front line and extending gradually back towards the sea coast," said Mr. Baker. "The War Department is endeavoring to sell its properties en bloc to the French Government. The United States Liquidation Commission, headed by Alton B. Parker, is now carrying out negotiations to this end. The plan is to close the entire transaction as of a particular day, when France may take formal possession, and the United States will step out.

Baker Praises Attitude of France.

Secretary Baker characterized as false reports that France had compelled the United States to pay import duties on supplies for the army. France's attitude, he declared, had been "extremely liberal." At the same time, he pointed out, France does not want great quantities of material "dumped into her country." If the United States attempted to dispose of them in open market, France would impose import duties. But they will likely be bought by the French Government, and if this is done, France will forego the duty.

Bridges, warehouses, railroads, and other permanent improvements made by the American Army in France, the Secretary went on, are wanted by the French Government permanently.

"While all this demobilization is going on," Mr. Baker said, "the United States must keep an army in France. We are trying to get the men home as fast as we can, but it cannot be done too rapidly. We must calculate, in asking our appropriations, upon at least 100,000 men in France this year."

The Secretary became involved in heated interchanges with members of the committee when he spoke of a provision inserted in the Army Appropriation bill by the House, which would prohibit the War Department from buying any more real estate in this country to carry out projects for nitrate plants, aviation fields, and other activities under way when the armistice was signed. For one thing, he said, the House attitude would upset the plan for developing Camp Benning in Georgia, as a rifle training establishment. Mr. Baker had also, he said, found some Senators against this project.

Senator McKellar, Democrat, of Tennessee, interjected that he did not, for one, approve all the War Department's recommendations for after-war developments. Senator New of Indiana said he was inclined to agree with Mr. McKellar.

"Well, of course, if Congress will not appropriate the money we cannot proceed with our projects," replied Mr. Baker.

Millions of dollars, Mr. Baker said, had been put out in undertakings that would have to be given up if money were not forthcoming.

Educational Work for Army Urged.

Mr. Baker deplored the action of the House in cutting out all provision for recreational and educational facilities for the army.

"The only way, in my opinion, to maintain an army in peace-time," said the Secretary, "is to make it an educational opportunity. In all this war nothing has happened so spectacular as the manner in which the men have availed themselves of the educational facilities we have provided in the army.

"A university has been established in France in which 11,000 men are entered, while men from our forces have gone to colleges of France, Great Britain and Ireland, thousands of others have entered extension courses, taking up chemistry, agriculture, electricity and the like. Nothing like this has ever been seen in an army.

"Before the war men entered the army with the spirit of wanderlust, men who had failed somehow and wanted to get into a new environment. In this war it was different. If we are to continue getting the different class of men who joined our army we must give them an educational opportunity."

Mr. Baker went on to say that men in the army were finding the social feature attractive. He spoke of a slogan which, he said, was being used effectively in army recruiting to "join the army and meet some nice girls."

"This phrase," said Mr. Baker, "is being used everywhere on posters, billboards and otherwise. The army is giving a lot of young men the opportunity to meet some honest to goodness American girls. This makes the army a delight."

"What are you raising the army for?" interposed Senator New, abruptly.

"Maybe to be used in Turkey," suggested Senator Thomas of Colorado.

Senators Differ on Recruiting 500,000.

Senator Wadsworth asked Mr. Baker if he thought it possible to enlist an army of 500,000 men by recruiting.

"As easy as to raise an army of 100,000 man," replied Mr. Baker, "provided you give them educational and recreational opportunities—half their time, say to the work of education."

"I don't think you are right about that," commented Senator Chamberlain of Oregon.

"I disagree with you, Senator," insisted Mr. Baker.

"During the war," responded Senator Chamberlain, "it must be remembered that the men were inspired by the prospect of getting into France. I don't believe it is possible to maintain an army of 500,000 men except under compulsory service."

Secretary Baker was asked what the War Department intended doing with its gas warfare forces, now that the war is over.

"I suspect," he said, "that gas warfare will be forbidden as we get more civilized. But there are two views of that subject. Some feel that gas warfare is desirable because the objective is to knock out the man without killing him. Others regard it as wickedly indiscriminating in its disregard of the innocent bystander."

Senator Chamberlain took issue with the Secretary, his questions indicating that he considered the Secretary had not given sufficiently serious consideration to the importance of gas warfare.

"I have been informed," said Senator Chamberlain, "that 30 per cent. of the casualties sustained by the American forces in France were by gas. Also we have been informed that if Germany had been as fast in the development of the possibilities of gas war as we were, they would have been able to decimate our army before we got started. As it was, we developed the best gas, but not in time to use it. Why should we stop it now, as you seem practically to recommend?"

"I did not recommend that we should discontinue its development," replied Secretary Baker. "I feel that we should continue its scientific development so as to be ready to employ gas if anybody else uses it against us. It has been the policy of the department to absorb chemical warfare into the engineering and scientific department, and to continue its development with all vigor."

Army Keen for Aviation.

General March began his testimony earlier by outlining the War Department's scheme for an aviation service on a peace-time basis. He declared that the department intended to develop its air service so as to make it one of the "greatest arms of the military establishment."

Senators Chamberlain and Thomas told the General they had seen evidence that the army had lost interest in the "aviation arm." General March replied that this was a mistaken impression.

Senator Chamberlain interrogated General March as to the program for consolidating the chemical and gas warfare with the engineering division, asking him if he approved of it. General March replied that reports from Paris indicated that in the treaty with Germany there had been inserted propositions against importing materials into Germany for the manufacture of poison gas.

"If that means anything," commented General March, "it means that they are getting ready to abolish the use of gas in warfare."

"Oh," retorted Senator Chamberlain, "they are also planning to abolish war over there, so we might expect to go ahead with our army."

"If you keep gas warfare under the engineering corps you will never get it properly developed."

"I don't agree with you, Senator," replied General March, who adverted to the fact that in England and France the gas warfare is under the engineering division of the armies.

Senator Frelinghuysen reverted to the air service, asking General March if any aviation squadrons had been organized in this country. The General explained that the War Department was proceeding on the theory that the country needs 223,000 men in its aviation corps.

Answering a question of Senator Wadsworth, Chairman of the committee, General March said airplanes were ready for service on the Rio Grande, on the Mexican border.

"Could you get along with an army on the basis of 300,000 men for the next year?" asked a Senator.

"I don't think the House intended that," replied General March. "I think it had in mind that, on the amount of cash intended to provide for an army of 400,000 men for the year, we could get along, the expectation being that a permanent military establishment would be provided before that time. But in my opinion we will need money for an average of 500,000 men for this year."

General March summarized the military forces now in this country, saying there are 37,656 officers and 470,884 men in the country, of whom 200,000 are on duty. During the Congressional recess, he visited all the camps and depots in an effort to speed up demobilization. At some camps he found it was taking seven to eight days to get a man out of the army, and he issued orders under which this was reduced to forty-eight hours.

100 Members of the I. W. W. Have Been Jailed in Kansas

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 16.—At least one hundred I. W. W. are now in jails in various parts of the wheat belt of Kansas and more will be put there as soon as they come out of the "jungle," according to reports to United States officials in Kansas City, Kansas, yesterday.

Peter Higgins was arrested in Wichita with a trunk of I. W. W. literature, which he said was sent to him by F. E. Smith, now in jail at Great Bend. Higgins says Smith was in charge of the publicity.

8 KILLED, 66 INJURED IN VIENNA RED RIOT

Crowd Said to Have Succeeded in Releasing Arrested Communist Leaders.

OUTBREAK IS PUT DOWN

City Is Now Reported Quiet, with Troops Aiding Police to Maintain Order.

COPENHAGEN, June 16.—In rioting in connection with a Communist demonstration in Vienna yesterday, eight persons were killed and sixty-six injured. The trouble began when 6,000 demonstrants attempted to obtain the release from prison of Communist leaders arrested Saturday.

The police fired volleys into the air and then into the crowd. The demonstrants succeeded in releasing the Communist leaders. Five policemen were wounded.

The city is reported quiet, with the police being supported in maintaining order by troops.

VIENNA, June 13, (Associated Press.)—An uprising by Communists here today apparently was put down by the police with the loss of several lives and the wounding of a number of persons.

The disturbance today was, perhaps, the most serious from a political point of view in Vienna since last November. The street fighting was primarily for the purpose of obtaining the release of a hundred or so Communist leaders who were arrested Saturday night.

Today was the first time that the local Communists had risen against the Government. Their leader is said to be Herr Tolmann.

POLES CAPTURE BIG BOOTY.

Take 135 Guns, Rolling Stock, and Vast Supplies from Ukrainians.

WARSAW, June 16, (via Paris, French Wireless Service.)—The repulse by the Poles in Eastern Galicia of strong Bolshevist attacks is reported by the Polish staff. In addition, the capture of considerable booty in the way of railway equipment on the road between Tarnapol and Kraage is announced.

This equipment, abandoned by the Ukrainians, is given as comprising 200 locomotives and 1,610 cars loaded with raw materials, ammunition, grain, leather, uniforms, and petrol, together with 100 cars of sugar and one train conveying thirty-five heavy guns. About one hundred additional guns of different calibres also have been taken by the Poles, they report, as well as a few machine guns, some anti-aircraft guns, and a large quantity of ammunition and war material.

General Rodriguez has been appointed to negotiate with the Ukrainians on behalf of the Polish High Command.

Telegrams protesting against the "brutal invasion of Ukrainian East Galicia and other parts of Ukraine by imperialistic Poland" and asking the Peace Conference to compel Poland to withdraw her armies from invaded territory were sent to the American Peace Delegation in Paris and the State Department yesterday by the Executive Board of the Ukrainian National Committee in the United States. Resolutions embodying similar protests were adopted yesterday by more than four hundred Ukrainian societies scattered throughout the country, according to the Rev. Peter Poniatishin, President of the National Committee.

PUTS DEFEAT ON GERMANS.

Hoetzendorf Says They Rejected Austrian Plan of Campaign.

PARIS, June 16.—It was the refusal of the German generals, especially General von Falkenbayn, to accept the Austrian plan for offensive operations that was the underlying cause of the catastrophe to the Central Empires, according to declarations made to the press by Field Marshal Conrad von Hoetzendorf, the former Austro-Hungarian Chief of Staff, says a Zurich dispatch to the Petit Parisien.

The Austrian plan consisted of pushing the war to the limit against Italy, which the German generals declined to follow.

FOR GASOLINE MONOPOLY.

Minister Presents Bill for Sole Control of Importations by France.

PARIS, June 16.—Louis Klotz, Minister of Finance, submitted today to the Cabinet a bill for a Government monopoly of the importation of gasoline. Under the bill the State would be the sole buyer abroad, and would control all importations. It is estimated this monopoly would yield an annual revenue of 35,000,000 francs.

Refining and wholesale selling would be permitted by others than the Government, but Minister Klotz announced that he was studying proposed measures whereby the Government would share in the profits of such private industry.

BIG BEEF SURPLUS NOW.

Packers Have 100,000,000 Pounds More a Month Than Public Buys.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, June 16.—Wartime economy of meat has become a habit, with the result that the packers have some 100,000,000 more pounds of beef to sell every month than the public desires to eat. This means, it is claimed, that until the domestic demand can be increased there will be a surplus of beef on the markets of the United States.

Here is the packers' point of view as expressed by Swift & Co.:

"Voluntary conservation of meat and other food products, which became a patriotic duty during the war, has to a certain extent become a habit, especially among the trade accustomed to choice beef. We think that the people of this country are still conserving beef for three reasons:

"First, because of the wartime propaganda.

"Second, because wartime prices made it necessary for many families to economize.

"Third, because many people believe that by abstaining from beef now a supply will be made available which is sorely needed by European countries.

"The last, we think, is a wrong conception, because few refrigerator boats are available to transport beef to Europe. Owing to the ending of the war, practically all dressed beef from this year's killing has been sold on the domestic market, resulting, so far as Swift & Co. are concerned, in approximately 20,000,000 pounds more beef to be sold through domestic channels during May this year than last.

"Taking all packers into consideration, this would probably amount to 60,000,000 to 100,000,000 pounds increase in the supply for May this year for domestic consumption."

Here to Get the Danube Bridged Quickly; Has $50,000,000 of Steel Orders to Place

Reginald Ford, an Englishman, 39 years old, one of the largest steel manufacturers in France, who is said to have controlled 30 per cent. of the Spanish steel output during the war, arrived at the Ritz-Carlton yesterday to place orders for $50,000,000 worth of steel, most of it for the Rumanian Government. One of the first requirements of Rumania, said Mr. Ford, is a bridge across the Danube to facilitate the shipment of the wheat crop, counted upon to restore Rumanian credit. The bridge must be completed by February.

The old bridge was blown up early in the war, and is now in Germany, reconstructed and offered to the Rumanians for a high price. Mr. Ford said the Rumanians had declined to treat with the Germans, and that he had gone to England, where he found the delay in construction would be too great, and then here.

"If I think American engineers," he said, "can have plans ready in a month."

The new bridge, he said, would be an enormous one, using 12,000 tons of steel in its construction.

Mr. Ford said that if the steel men thought they could do the work on time, and would extend the needed credit, the orders would be placed here; otherwise, he added, the business would go to Canada, which, recently granted the Rumanian Government a credit. Should both fail, he said, Rumania would be compelled to turn to Germany.

Mr. Ford said, incidentally, that Rumania's wheat crop promised exceedingly well. He said that English steel makers and engineers had said the Danube structure could be built in two years, allowing four months for preparation of designs.

FRENCH MINERS OUT, MAY SOON RETURN

Senate Expected to Pass Today on Bill Applying 8-Hour Day to Mines.

CAR MEN BACK AT WORK

Striking Metal Workers and Their Employers Will Again Try to Adjust Differences.

PARIS, June 16.—The strike called by the Federation of Miners went into effect this morning. Dispatches from the mining region indicated that it was general in scope.

The Federation of Miners yesterday took all measures to make a stoppage of work general. It is expected that under the best circumstances the strike will result in a total suspension of coal production in the country for at least five or six days.

The Senate, however, is expected to pass on a bill applying the eight-hour day to the mines tomorrow. It is hoped that if Parliament acts quickly the strike will soon be settled.

The transportation workers of Paris, who have been on strike for more than a week, returned to their places today, and service on the subways, tramways, and buses was normal.

The newspapers expect a settlement of the strike of the metal workers. Negotiations between the workers and their employers will be resumed, the papers say, with a chance of solution. They declare that the only black spot on the labor situation is the strike of the mine workers, but express the hope that new negotiations will bring an end to that strike also.

The Executive Committee of the French Socialist Party and a delegation of Italian Socialist and Labor leaders met today to discuss the organization of a simultaneous general strike by labor organizations and Socialists in Great Britain, France, Italy, and Belgium. The Italian delegation is composed of Signor Serrati, Director of Avanti; Signor Daroyana, Secretary of the Italian General Labor Federation; Signor Lazzari, Secretary of the Socialists, and Signor Beltrami, representing the Italian Parliamentary group.

Labor Federations More Cautious.

By WALTER DURANTY.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, June 15.—A more cautious spirit is being shown by the rank and file of the Labor Federations, plus a tendency to disavow the counsels of the extremists. The Railroad Federation issues a statement appealing for discipline among its members, and bidding them repulse "all philosophical—that is, Bolshevist—or political interference, whose object is to substitute itself for the action of the General Labor Confederation." The statement also scores the conduct of members of the Paris Railroad Union toward their leaders at last week's meeting, and declares that the Executive Committee is in full solidarity with the latter.

The fact is the wind of public opinion has been blowing rather coldly on labor during the last few days, and the workers' defiant ardor has been somewhat cooled in consequence. Yesterday the National Union of Combatants dropped from airplanes upon Paris 80,000 leaflets headed "Appeal to the Good Sense of French Workers." The wording represents accurately the sentiment of the French nation as a whole. The document begins:

"Comrade workmen, the Combatants are with you in the demand that war profiteers be made to disgorge. But the Germans is at Versailles. If he does not sign, the advantages to be gained by untimely strikes will not compensate.

"Comrades, do not follow leaders whose only thought is 'Where can we get money?' The fictious agitation that infamous newspapers have created in Paris is playing Germany's game. The Pan German press raises its voice. We shall be robbed of our victory.

"Workmen, resume work. As long as the enemy has not given us guarantees, all social conflict, all quarrels among Frenchmen, are crimes."

Although the accusation that the strikes are fomented by German or Bolshevist gold is in the main unfair, it is widely believed in France. In point of fact, as pointed out in previous dispatches, the reasons for the labor unrest can be clearly outlined and have nothing to do with foreign cash or propaganda. The worst that can be said of the very great majority of the labor leaders is that they are blinded by their own ambition to govern the country in the interests of their own class. But most of them are neither disloyal nor unpatriotic. They are just shortsighted and self-centred.

Now they have seen what the country thinks about them, they have seen the refusal of the British and Belgian labor leaders to help their scheme of international general strike for political motives, and they are trying to back water, if it can be done without too great loss of prestige. That, however, is a question, and it is quite on the cards that matters have gone too far for withdrawal and that an attempt at a general strike will be made this week.

The Government is prepared to meet it, and regrettable as even an abortive general strike would be, it is perhaps a good thing for France that the syndicalist minority should learn the lesson that its strength, its desires, and its demands do not predominate over those of the majority of its countrymen.

REDS IN KRONSTADT HOIST WHITE FLAG

Fall of Fortress, Naval Base of Petrograd, Reported to be Imminent.

FORT OPPOSITE CAPTURED

Garrison There Had Mutinied Against Bolsheviki—Capital Again Being Evacuated.

LONDON, June 16.—The fall of Kronstadt, the naval base of Petrograd, is imminent, according to reports received by naval circles in Helsingfors from Reval, the capital of Esthonia, and forwarded here. The report says that a white flag has been hoisted over the fortress several times by its Bolshevist defenders.

White Guards have captured the important fort of Krasnayagorka, across the bay from the fortress of Kronstadt, an official statement issued from Esthonian headquarters and received in Stockholm reports. It is said that the White Guards won their success after the garrison of the fort had mutinied against the Bolsheviki.

The garrison of Krasnayagorka mutinied on Saturday and opened fire on the fortress of Kronstadt, which replied to the fire. Five Bolshevist warships were sent out and they shelled the fort until evening, when fires broke out in the place. The bombardment was continued on Sunday after the White Guards had gained possession.

Active preparations are again being made for the evacuation of Petrograd, it is announced in a wireless dispatch from Moscow received here today.

CLINTON PRISONERS REVOLT

Leaders to be Punished for Refusal of 400 to Enter Cells.

Special to The New York Times.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., June 16.—It became known today that 400 of the 1,000 convicts confined in Clinton Prison revolted on Sunday morning and refused to return to their cells when the signal was given. The remainder of the prison population complied with the prison rule and returned to their cells amid the hooting of the insurgents, who demanded that they receive yard liberty for the entire day.

Prison rules forbid officers to go about their duties armed, and in order to avoid serious trouble Warden Trombly permitted the prisoners to remain in the yard until 3:30 o'clock, when they were marched into the dining hall for dinner.

For seventy-two years, and up to three years ago, the prisoners at Clinton were locked in their cells Saturday noon and kept there until Monday morning. Warden Trombly had issued the order giving them yard liberty Sunday forenoon.

The insurgents were locked in their cells all today and taken one by one before the Warden. All except the leaders will have their usual privileges tomorrow, but the leaders will be placed in the isolation cells until they express regret for their action.

1,200 IDLE AT HAVERHILL.

Lockout Follows Action of Cutters to Get 44-Hour Week.

HAVERHILL, Mass., June 16.—The effort of the cutters affiliated with the Shoe Workers' Protective Union to adopt a forty-four-hour working week in place of the forty-eight-hour schedule recently put in force resulted today in a lockout of cutters at most of the factories in this city.

In line with their determination to work only forty-four hours, the cutters did not go to the shops last Saturday, and the manufacturers, asserting that the action constituted a strike, decided not to allow any cutters to work today unless they agreed to the forty-eight-hour schedule.

The factories were operated in part with such material from the cutting rooms as remained on hand from last week. It was estimated that 1,200 cutters were idle.

TUNNEL BILL TO SENATE.

Under-Hudson Plan for Vehicles Approved by Committee.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—A bill by Senator Edge of New Jersey, proposing Federal approval of the agreement between New York and New Jersey for construction of vehicular tunnels under the Hudson River, was reported favorably today by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

RAID CLEVELAND BANK.

Five Bandits Escape in Stolen Automobile with $17,000.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, June 16.—Five armed bandits held up the West Cleveland Banking Company late today, obtained $17,000 in cash, and escaped in a stolen automobile.

Five employes and three patrons were held at bay by three of the robbers while the fourth gathered the loot.

The fifth man remained in the waiting automobile with the engine running.

FOUND BELGIUM FAST RECOVERING

New Yorker Says That She Is Raising One of Biggest Crops in Her History.

RUINS COMPARATIVELY FEW

Offers Better Trade Opportunities for Americans Than Any Other Country in Europe.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, June 16.—Americans are distressing themselves unnecessarily over the ruined state of Europe in the opinion of Merwin Hart, a lawyer of New York and Utica, who has just returned to London from an extended tour through Belgium.

Hart, who fought through the war as a Captain of the United States Infantry, declares there are only one or two places in Belgium which have suffered anything approaching the devastation inflicted upon France, and the country is already visibly recovering from the effects of the war.

"What I think most surprised me," he said, "was how few and comparatively slight are the outward signs of destruction. One can motor through the country for fifty miles at a stretch without guessing it had recently been within the zone of hostilities. I half expected to find the soil churned to powder, as in Northern France, and most of the towns more or less completely destroyed. Nothing of the kind. Ypres, Louvain, and Termonde are entirely exceptional.

"I doubt whether in all Belgium as many as 40,000 houses will have to be rebuilt. As for the soil, Belgium this year is raising one of the biggest crops in her history. Whatever may be the case with other parts of Europe, Belgium is not ruined. To my mind it is foolish to speak of the ruin of a country when five-sevenths of the people live on the soil and all have the habit of work.

"Belgium is as indestructible materially as she has proved to be spiritually. Already she is reviving. People are at work on the fields, communications are being restored, and I don't think it will be long before all the mines and most of the factories are going again. You know, I suppose that the Belgians captured some German documents drawn up with Teutonic thoroughness showing in detail precisely what machinery had been taken from each Belgian factory and where it had been sent. The business of tracing and recovering the stolen plants has thus been considerably simplified.

"You don't see any starving people in Belgium today and very few ill-fed ones. All Belgians—I talked with a good many—are confident their country will soon be as it was before the war, one of the most prosperous, hardest working and contented in the world. Their debt, almost all of which has been incurred for reproductive public utilities, is still the lowest per head in Europe. Nearly 1,200,000 of them own the land they live on, and that fact, together with the spirit of the people, is a pretty good barricade against Bolshevism.

"I found the Belgians extremely, even extravagantly, grateful for all America has done for them, but it is part of their independent temper that they do not want their future relations with us to be on a charitable basis. They are rapidly surmounting the problem of reconstruction, and will soon be able to pay for what they buy and offer as good security as any merchant could wish for.

"I was very much impressed with their eagerness to develop as big a trade as possible with America. We have a big opportunity there for selling agricultural implements, locomotives, rails, bridges, and taking contracts for public repairs. Many American firms have also seen the chance and are booking orders right and left over the heads of British and Dutch competitors.

"As far as I could judge, they won't have any reason to regret their enterprise. Indeed, if I were addressing a congress of business men at home I should say:

"'Get it out of your heads that Belgium is ruined and a pauper nation and that dealing with her is more philanthropy than business. Belgium, after today, is better opportunity for American goods than any other country in Europe. Send out your representatives to see for themselves, and they will report that the worst of Belgium's troubles are over and that the country is climbing back to its pre-war prosperity.'

ASK DUTY ON MAGNESITE.

Representatives of Industry in This Country Want It Protected.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Representatives of the magnesite industry, developed in this country since the war, presented arguments before the House Ways and Means Committee today for a duty of three-quarters of 1 per cent. on crude magnesite as a protection against the dumping of the German product on the American market. It was represented that unless such a duty was imposed the industry that grew up on the Pacific Coast, with more than $5,000,000 invested, would be wiped out by the importations from Austria-Hungary and other countries.

In the course of the argument opposition to a tariff was made by E. M. Allen, Vice President of the American Refractory Company, on the ground that it would destroy the magnesite industry his company had built up in Austria at a cost of $2,000,000. He said that he would not object to a tariff of 5 per cent. ad valorem.

Such a low rate the representatives of American industry declared was insufficient to give them any protection, and would permit the American Refractory Company and the German industry to import the product cheaper than it could be produced in this country.

Austria-Hungary, Greece, Venezuela, and Canada are the only countries which have developed the magnesite industry. Before the war this country depended chiefly upon Austria and Greece for the product. The disposition of the committee is to report a bill placing a duty high enough to permit the infant American industry to thrive.

ASKS $5,000,000 FOR COURT.

La Guardia Introduces Bill for New Federal Building Here.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—The erection of a new Federal Court House in New York City, at a cost of $5,000,000, is provided for in a bill introduced in the House today by Representative La Guardia.

Mr. La Guardia said he was very hopeful that the bill would pass, as a new building is very much needed in New York.

"The present building used by the Federal courts, the old Post Office, is inadequate, obsolete, and unsanitary," he said. "This building is an architectural abortion, a constant eyesore, and a reminder of governmental waste. It is poorly ventilated, unsanitary, and impossible to keep clean.

"Millions are spent for post office buildings and court houses in small hamlets and villages throughout the United States, and these buildings are out of all proportion to the size and business of the places where they are located. It is time that New York City gets at least what it needs."

American Forces Held Ready to Land in Costa Rica

WASHINGTON, June 16.—The revolution against the Tinoco Government in Costa Rica has entered a new phase, according to dispatches today to the State Department.

Outbreaks have occurred in San José, the capital, and the general situation was described as serious.

American forces on the gunboat Castine, now at Port Limon, are held in readiness and can be landed at a moment's notice, it was said. The commander of the ship, however, has been instructed not to act without specific instructions from Washington. Several other American warships are in the vicinity of Costa Rica.

STICK TO $15,000,000 FOR NAVAL AVIATION

House Rejects Daniels's Plea for $45,000,000 Appropriation to Develop Our Air Forces.

TO TAKE FIGHT TO SENATE

Hearings Will Begin Wednesday—Alleged Lack of Policy and Co-ordination Brings Opposition.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Without roll call the House today passed the Naval Appropriation bill with an allotment of only $15,000,000 for naval aviation, in the face of the General Board's recommendation that $45,000,000 be allowed for the naval air service and its development. The bill went to the Senate, where an effort will be made by Secretary Daniels and others to persuade the Naval Committee to increase the appropriation to the minimum of $30,000,000.

After receiving Secretary Daniels's letter urging that the House appropriation of $15,000,000 be increased, Senator Page, Chairman of the Senate Naval Committee, notified Secretary Daniels that the committee would hear the department's reports beginning Wednesday. Secretary Daniels then announced that Captain Craven, in charge of aviation matters in the department, would be heard Wednesday.

The Secretary will appear before the committee on Thursday.

If the Senate should enlarge or double the appropriations for naval aviation, it is possible that the House would accede. It was apparent, despite the action of the House today, that the transatlantic flight of Alcock and Brown had developed keen interest in aviation among members of both branches of Congress and that there was a disposition of more House members to vote large aircraft appropriations, although a majority of the House today adopted the $15,000,000 provision without increasing the amount granted.

Republican leaders who have been trying to cut down military expenditures did not hesitate to assert today, however, that they felt the country was demanding reduction in war expenditures, and that there is also considerable opposition to heavy aircraft appropriations in the House, predicated upon a belief that the Government lacks a comprehensive policy for aviation development, as a result of which there has been waste and no co-ordination as between the army, navy, postal, and other services.

Sentiment in favor of the creation of a separate aviation committee in each branch of Congress appeared to be increasing, and Senator New of Indiana is preparing a bill, which he will soon introduce, calling for the establishment of a single air service for the army, navy, and other branches of the Government.

The army bill as passed by the House limits appropriations for army aircraft next year to $15,000,000. The Senate Military Committee today quizzed Secretary Baker, General March, Maj. Gen. Menocher, director of the army air service, and Brig. Gen. Mitchell, chief of operations of the air service, as to army aviation. It was brought out that the country possessed practically no pursuit planes, that the equipment now available consists chiefly of the Havilands and training planes. This brought up the question of development.

The hearing, according to one of the committee members, strengthened the feeling that the appropriation of $15,000,000 for military aviation probably would be increased by the Senate Committee.

WILLIAMS'S NAME TO SENATE

Hapgood, Crane, Gibson, and Others Nominated by President.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Among scores of nominations received by the Senate today from President Wilson were those of John Skelton Williams, to succeed himself as Controller of the Currency, and Norman Hapgood of New York, to be Minister to Denmark. These were among hundreds which failed of confirmation in the last Senate.

Other nominations included Richard Crane, former private secretary to Secretary Lansing, to be Minister to Czechoslovakia; Hugh S. Gibson, to be Minister to Poland, and Henry M. Robinson of California, to be a member of the Shipping Board.

Others in the list were:

John J. Keegan of Indiana, to be a member of the United States Employes' Compensation Commission.

C. F. McIntosh of Indiana, to be a member of the Federal Board for Vocational Education.

Martin A. Morrison of Indiana and George R. Wales of Vermont, to be Civil Service Commissioners.

Robert G. Hand of Starkville, Miss., to be Assistant Treasurer of the United States.

QUITS SERVICE BOARD PLACE

Godfrey Goldmark to Join New Law Firm.

Godfrey Goldmark, who became chief counsel of the Public Service Commission on Jan. 1, sent his resignation yesterday to Commissioner Lewis Nixon with a request that it be accepted at once. At Mr. Nixon's request Mr. Goldmark will continue until July 1.

Mr. Goldmark's first service with the commission was as secretary to Former Chairman Oscar S. Straus. He then became assistant chief counsel, and later succeeded William L. Ransom. Mr. Goldmark is to become the junior member of a new law firm of which Colonel William Hayward and Major Holley Clark are the other members.

PLAN EQUAL FLEETS IN TWO OCEANS

Admirals Wilson and Rodman to Command in the Atlantic and Pacific.

TO COMPETE IN WAR TESTS

President Has Approved Project Worked Out for Navy by Secretary Daniels.

CLEAVES TO ASIATIC FLEET

With Rogers as Vice Admiral, He Will Handle Special Problems in the Far East.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Two fleets, as nearly equal in strength as it is possible to make them, one the Pacific Fleet and the other the Atlantic Fleet, with an Asiatic Fleet as the third main division of the United States naval forces, will be the peace-time disposition of the navy, according to an announcement made today by Secretary Daniels.

The Pacific Fleet will be under command of Admiral Hugh Rodman, the Atlantic Fleet under Admiral Henry B. Wilson, and the Asiatic Fleet under Admiral Albert C. Gleaves. The Vice Admirals of the Atlantic and Pacific Fleets will be announced next week, but Rear Admiral W. L. Rogers, now in command of the Asiatic Fleet, will be the Vice Admiral of that fleet.

President Wilson yesterday approved the selection of these officers for the rank of Admiral.

Secretary Daniels stressed the fact that one of the purposes, "possibly the paramount one," for having these two strong fleets was to encourage and stimulate to the highest degree the spirit of competition and keen rivalry between them, which will be a big factor in keeping the whole navy up to the topnotch point of efficiency.

"It is planned," he said, "that at least once a year, and oftener if possible, these two fleets of practically equal strength will simulate warfare, carrying it out on a greater scale than ever before. They will also get together periodically, first one and then the other visiting the other ocean."

Daniels for Preparedness in Peace.

In making the announcement today Secretary Daniels gave out this statement:

"The principal activities of the American Navy in the great war have been completed and it now becomes a necessity to put the ships of the navy in such effective organizations, where the training will be carried out during time of peace so as always to keep the navy as a whole ready for any military duty which may arise.

"During the war the one mission of the navy was to operate against the common enemy of America and the allied nations of Europe. In carrying out this mission the ships of the navy were so organized and distributed as best to accomplish the purpose.

"This peace time training of the navy requires an organization whereby the units are well balanced and of proper size to permit the most efficient administration. The interest of the naval personnel must be kept keen and alive, and the ships must be so distributed as to meet this condition. The units of the organization has been so disposed that when the entire navy is called to operate together, requirements of fleet tactics and manoeuvres can be properly made."

The ships of the new organization, said the statement, will be designated as follows:

1. The United States Atlantic Fleet.
2. The United States Pacific Fleet.
3. The United States Asiatic Fleet.

The battleships will be equally distributed between the Atlantic and Pacific Fleets, and practically an equal number of ships of other classes, including supply, repair, hospital, fuel, and tugs. The main divisions are:

ATLANTIC FLEET.

Four divisions of battleships.
Two divisions of cruisers.
Eighteen divisions of destroyers.
Three divisions of submarines.
Two divisions of mine-laying ships.

PACIFIC FLEET.

Four divisions of battleships.
Two divisions of cruisers.
Eighteen divisions of destroyers.
Two divisions of submarines.
Two divisions of mine-laying ships.

Plans Competition Between Fleets.

"One of the main ideas," said Mr. Daniels, "in making this equal distribution of the ships between the Pacific and Atlantic fleets is to utilize the well-known incentive existing in all human activities, which is 'competition.' It is believed that a keen spirit of competition will exist between these two great fleets of our navy which will result in a high esprit de corps in each fleet and a high state of efficiency in the navy as a whole. As is now the practice in the navy, careful records will be kept of both fleets in their results obtained in target practice, engineering competitions, material endurance of the individual ships, expertness in tactics, and manoeuvres.

"At least once a year these two fleets will carry out war problems with each other, in which the problems in major operations will be worked out and the skill and strategy of the high command officers put to a test. In other words, we will not only have daily competition by means of records that are kept between those two fleets, but we will put them to a definite test in carrying out the larger problems which a great war, involving major operations would present.

"The Asiatic Fleet will be composed of ships best suited to safeguard the American interests in that section of the world."

In assigning the officers to these high commands, Secretary Daniels said, he had given careful attention to their records of service during the war, and that they had been chosen "for the fine records of results accomplished by them in the war, as well as the previous records of long and efficient service in the navy."

MAKES GOOD START

Reports Show Many Applicants for Enlistment at Stations in Metropolitan District.

CHOOSE BRANCH OF SERVICE

Veterans of the War Show Eagerness to Get Back Into Uncle Sam's Uniform.

An intensive campaign to enlist 50,000 men in the American Army for service in France and on the Rhine was begun yesterday throughout the country by the Army Recruiting Service. In this city, three central stations have been established, and it is expected a great part of this new army will be recruited in the metropolitan district.

Although no figures on the first day of the campaign were available last night at the district headquarters in the Army Building, at 461 Eighth Avenue, officers said early reports indicated that recruits were responding to the call in large numbers. In the Manhattan west side district alone the enlistment of twenty-one men was reported early in the day. This district comprises the Eighth Avenue headquarters and five branch recruiting posts.

The branches are at 39 Whitehall Street, 110 West Street, 113 West Twenty-third Street, 1,834 Broadway, and 242 West 125th Street. In addition there is an east side district, with headquarters at 25 Third Avenue; a Brooklyn district, with headquarters at 142 Ashland Place, and a Hudson County district, with headquarters at 112 Newark Avenue, Jersey City. Each main office has from two to four officers and about eight enlisted men who have had long service in the army and are qualified to answer every question about its life.

Among the men who enlisted in the west side district, at least eleven expressed a preference for service in the infantry with the American Army on the Rhine. Their desire for a glimpse of France and Germany will come sooner than most of them expected. All the men expressed preferences for some branch of the service or for service in some foreign field and their preferences will be recognized.

Picks His Own Branch of Service.

One man said he would like to serve in the infantry in the Philippines. He was accepted, as were three who asked to be enlisted in the Motor Transport Corps so that they could study motor transportation, and three who asked for the Air Service, that they might become expert airplane mechanics while serving the Government and earning as much money as they could in civil life. One applicant at the Eighth Avenue station told the Sergeant in charge that he doubted whether his request for a specific place in the army could be granted.

"What is your preference?" asked the Sergeant. "If you want to be a General, we can't do anything for you on just one enlistment. You'll have to go to West Point or Plattsburg."

"I don't want to be a General," the applicant replied. "But my cousin in the 11th Cavalry wrote me that his regiment had the best band in the service, and he thought I could learn a lot more about music if I could enlist for assignment to that band."

"Easy!" replied the Sergeant. "Jump on these scales and let me see what you weigh. You're all right physically, I guess, and we'll pass you on to the doctor. If you get by him you'll be pounding the old kettle drums with the 11th a lot sooner than you expected."

Six of the men who enlisted were the uniforms in which they had seen service overseas. As they were accepted, they ripped off their red discharge chevrons and said they felt like being back home again. All exercised the optiton, extended to soldiers who have had previous service, of enlisting for one year. Men who have not seen service in the army sign up for three years.

"Believe me, Sarge, no more civil life for me," said one of the veterans. "I've been lonesome ever since I got out of the army at Camp Upton, more than a month ago, and I'm going back to the life where a fellow can always bank on his buddies being regular guys. I can save more money in the army and have a bigger balance to show at the end of my enlistment than I could in any job in civil life that I could find. And army chow has this civilian grub beaten a mile."

Veteran Talks of the Army.

One of the regular army Sergeants on duty at the headquarters in the Twenty-third Street branch is William E. Williams, who has been in the service continuously since he left Kansas City for the Philippines in 1898 as a member of the famous 20th Kansas Infantry, then commanded by Colonel Fred Funston, who later became a Major General, and who died suddenly in San Antonio in 1917 while in command of the Southern Department.

Sergeant Williams liked army life so well that he re-enlisted at the end of his first enlistment. He was a member of the 14th Infantry in China during the Boxer rebellion, and since then has served in virtually every foreign campaign of the army as a membe. of the 13th, 16th and 26th Regiments. He was in Mexico with Pershing as a member of the 16th, and subsequently was assigned to special duties. He is 45 years old, and his pay now in the regular army is about $45 a week, exclusive of clothing, medical attention and the other free attention given to every enlisted soldier.

"I would advise every young man who did not have money to go to college to enlist in the army," said Sergeant Williams. "In the old days, the army did not have schools for the men as it has now, but I don't believe there is any better place for a young man. The life develops him in every way. The army makes a stranger and bigger man of every recruit, and now it gives him an education as good as he can get anywhere. He earns money, eats, has good quarters, free medical and dental attention, and cheap insurance—all while he is learning something.

Made a Jack of All Trades.

"I enlisted to fight and I fought some, but I learned a lot more about the world than any tourist or traveler. I can shoe a horse, cook a meal, repair an automobile and do a lot of other things that would make me money if I wanted to become a civilian. The opportunities offered by the army are becoming more numerous every day. A lot of these fellows who come in can take examinations for commissions.

"I had an argument with a policeman up in Times Square the other day. He saw all my service ribbons and asked me what good they did me. I told him I would bet him $25 that I earned more money than he did. We matched and I earn about $300 a year more than he does, not counting in all the things I get free.

"Then he tried to tell me I was only a soldier and didn't know anything else. We matched on that, and I found out that he couldn't shoe a horse, fix a gas engine or do any of the things I'd learned. He'd never been out of this State, and I've been in France, Germany, Alaska, China, Panama, Mexico, Hawaii, the Philippines, Cuba, and all over the United States—all at the expense of Uncle Sam. Before I got through with him, the cop said he was coming to enlist, and if he doesn't come I'm going after him. He'd make a good soldier—no, not kitchen police—and he ought to learn more than just being a copper."

Most of the recruiting stations remain open until midnight, so that men who are thinking of joining the army can talk it over with men who have been in the service for years and know all about it.

Bedford Says English-Speaking Peoples Hold Future.

The future peace of the world depends on the cultivation and preservation of the friendship now existing among Great Britain, France, and the United States, in the opinion of A. C. Bedford, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, upon his return from Europe yesterday. Mr. Bedford said his visit to the other side was made in the interests of the Y. M. C. A. and the United States Chamber of Commerce, the latter of which he is Vice President.

"Generally speaking," he said, "I come home impressed more than ever by what I have seen that the peace of the world in the future lies with the great English-speaking democracies, the British Empire and the United States, joined with France, and that it is the duty of every American citizen to do all that he can to promote unity and help promote the most friendly relations among the three nations. Italy should also be included and stand with the three."

Mr. Bedford said he had been able to secure first-hand information of the activities of the Y. M. C. A. abroad. He said he had visited huts in many sections and had reached the conclusion that, while the organization had made regrettable mistakes, on the whole the work had been admirable.

Mr. Bedford said he had made arrangements for representative bodies of business men of England, France, and Belgium to visit the United States this Fall under the auspices of the United States Chamber of Commerce. He planned to give foreign business men and insight into American methods and to exchange views with business men here relative to the handling of the commerce of these countries, he said.

TAFT MAY ACT AS ARBITER.

Actors Also Promised Services of C. E. Hughes in Clash with Managers.

Former President Taft has expressed a willingness to officiate as arbiter in the present clash between the theatrical managers and the actors, and Charles E. Hughes may also be called upon.

Following a meeting of the Actors' Equity Association, held at the Hotel Astor yesterday afternoon, it was announced that both Mr. Taft and Mr. Hughes had been approached by Francis Wilson, President of the actors' association, and that both were willing to officiate.

No plan of arbitration has yet been decided upon by the two factions, as the actors have held out for general arbitration of differences, and the managers have submitted a counter offer suggesting individual arbitration of each difference as it arose.

Yesterday's meeting at the Astor was for the purpose of reminding members of their contract obligations, and was attended by about 150 actors and actresses. Telegrams indorsing the stand of the organization were received from Elsie Janis and Elsie Ferguson.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

"The Better 'Ole" was transferred last night from the Cort Theatre to the Booth, where it will be continued indefinitely.

"The Man and His Shadow," a play by Marjorie Blaine and Stanley Lewis, has been accepted for production by A. H. Woods.

Robert Emmett Keane and John Weesley will be featured jointly next season in a farce by Martin Brown, entitled "An Innocent Idea."

"The Little Whopper," a musical comedy based upon a motion picture entitled "Miss George Washington," in which Marguerite Clark appeared, is now being finished by Otto Harbach and Rudolph Friml, and will be produced in the Fall by Abraham Levy.

PROTEST MASSACRES

Adopt Resolution Urging American Government to Act in Eastern Europe.

SUPPORT WORLD LEAGUE

Call Upon All Jews to Uphold Plan for League of Nations as a Jewish Ideal.

The annual conventions of the United Synagogues of America and the Women's League, which opened on Sunday at the Jewish Theological Seminary in West 123d Street, were ended last night with a dinner in the auditorium of the seminary. Dr. Charles I. Hoffman was the toastmaster, and the speakers were Rabbi Elias L. Solomon, President of the United Synagogues; Mrs. Charles I. Hoffman, President of the Women's League; Mrs. Solomon Schechter, former President; Lyon Cohen of Montreal, Professor Alexander Marks, Dr. Louis Finkelstein, and Max D. Klein.

Following a prayer, "The Star Spangled Banner" and the "Hatikvah," the Jewish national anthem, Dr. Hoffman praised Cyrus Adler, the President of the seminary, and Louis Marshall, "who are in Paris seeing that the interests of Israel shall be preserved and the rights of the Jews shall be safeguarded throughout the world." Dr. Solomon thanked the organization for re-electing him as President for the coming year.

"All sections of Jewry," he said, "will, in time, join hands to make common war against the foes of Israel and of all Judaism. It is not far beyond the range of possibility to expect orthodoxy and reform to work hand in hand with this ideal in view. Just as they have worked during the war, so will they continue in the future. The war has also shown the orthodox Jew that the reformed, too, have a place in Judaism.

Maintaining that world peace was an ideal of the Jewish people, the United Synagogue adopted a resolution at the afternoon session indorsing the League of Nations. The resolution declared that "the United Synagogue of America greets with ardent enthusiasm the first promise of peace this long held out to us and calls upon all its constituent members to pledge their devotion and dedicate their energy to the glorious consummation of that peace of righteousness for which our President is laboring."

The organization also adopted a resolution calling upon this Government to intercede in behalf of the Jews in Poland, Rumania, and other Eastern European countries where massacres have been reported. The resolution said that "the United States Synagogue of America voices its deepest resentment at these outrages, with the ardent hope and prayer that vigorous and energetic measures will immediately be adopted by the Government of the United States of America to make the recurrence of such bloody horrors impossible."

A resolution also was passed calling upon all to distribute the working hours of the week to make possible the proper observance of the Jewish Sabbath. A forty-four hour week was favored by the delegates.

The convention of the Jewish Theological Seminary Rabbinical Assembly will be held today. In connection with the meeting there will be an exhibit of text books in Hebrew, Jewish history, and Jewish religion, under the direction of Dr. Benjamin H. Birnbaum.

FRANCE'S WAR SCARS

Grain Corporation Head Tells of Supreme Effort to Restore Land to Crops.

BELGIUM ALSO IS BUSY

Crowell Says Her People Work Briskly, Hopeful of Good Harvests in the Fall.

Frank G. Crowell, Vice President of the Food Administration Grain Corporation, who went to Europe on May 1 to study food conditions, returned home on Sunday, and yesterday he talked optimistically of the situation in all of the countries racked by the war except Russia. He said that there was in progress a welding together of all of the countries, a growing interchange of supplies, a quickening of the feeling of brotherhood, and a desire to help each other without haggling much about terms.

Mr. Crowell said of the work the French peasants were doing in the west, where the war waged so long and so bitterly, and where much of the land once fertile farms, had been rent and gashed by shells: "All over this war-torn tract, Mr. Crowell said, the French peasants were hard at work, bringing back the soil to its former state, and were hopeful of plentiful harvests in the Fall. Large areas of the land had been so rent by shells that it was useless, but plans were being laid, Mr. Crowell said, to remove these scars and to convert it into farming land again.

All Frenchmen, and all other people of the allied nations are, he said, in France with amazement because of the quick return of her people to peaceful pursuits and because of the hopeful outlook that willing industry has given them. Mr. Crowell talked with enthusiasm of this transformation of the French people from war to peace within a few months.

Belgium Works Briskly.

A similar situation, said Mr. Crowell, could be observed in some of the other countries where the war had raged, but in none of them was the change so marked, with the possible exception of Belgium. Here the people had gone briskly to work, with the hope of good harvests in the fall. The most trying time, said Mr. Crowell, had passed. The aid given to the countries who had fought against Germany and her Allies, had helped them to recover their national spirit, the people had returned to labor, and within a few months there would be food enough for all of them with the addition of products obtained from the neutral countries.

During his month abroad Mr. Crowell had many long talks with Herbert Hoover, the Director General of Relief, and he expressed the greatest admiration for the efficient organization that had been built up. Mr. Hoover's name, according to Mr. Crowell, is acclaimed everywhere, and its presence on a passport makes it easy for the holder to travel

Aid the Starving.

With this aid it had been possible to make a thorough survey of the entire situation, to locate the spots where the quickest and most generous help was needed, to distribute the food products with the least delay; in short to hasten to every needy nation enough help to keep its people from suffering and even dying for the lack of sufficient nourishment.

All, he said, had been given to the people of Rumania, Serbia, Poland, Finland, Syria, and all of the others, including 500,000 Armenians who had been driven away from their homes. Mr. Crowell said that the supplies sent into the Balkans made a classification of their distribution impossible. He told of the dreadful sufferings of the people of Vienna, until trainloads of food sent by the American Relief Association reached them.

Mr. Crowell explained that the work under the $100,000,000 appropriation made by Congress would end on July 1, and that further legislation would be needed. Mr. Hoover, he said, expected to be back in the United States by July 15. There is still needed in many of the countries, he said, further supplies of wheat, flour, rye, beans, and milk.

He stated that trains carrying upward of $35,000,000 worth of products had been sent into Poland, besides a considerable quantity of cotton; that 13,000,000 tons of necessaries had been sent from the United States since the end of November, and that when he left London sixty full cargoes, aggregating about 500,000 tons, were afloat on the ocean bearing goods to the needy folk abroad. Mr. Crowell said that Mr. Hoover had told him that the food supply in Turkey was ample, and that necessaries were cheaper there than anywhere else in Asia. Concerning the food conditions in Germany, he said that none of the Rhine lands were over-run with, and that the other districts were helped according to their needs, all of the goods sent into Germany being paid for. Mr. Crowell said there were 30,000 tons of foodstuffs awaiting entrance into Russia as soon as Petrograd fell, and that when the people learned about this the fall of Petrograd might be considerably hastened.

LIONIZES HUBERMAN.

Young Polish Violinist is Stormed After Recital.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, June 18.—Bronislaw Huberman, who started his musical career as an infant prodigy, made his reappearance in London this week and established himself securely in the first rank of mature musicians. The young Polish violinist, he is still in the early twenties, created a furor equalled only by Kubelik.

At a recital at Steinway Hall he was literally mobbed by crowds of women, and at Albert Hall, where he appeared with Melba, he divided honors equally with the Australian singer.

The London press has been boasting latterly that no city in the world can present more varied or eclectic musical programs than the British metropolis, and Huberman, who during most of the war was a civil prisoner in Germany, figures in the forefront of its attractions.

PLAYS LEAD ABROAD

Also That American Motion Pictures Are Pre-eminent in Europe.

MANAGER BRINGS NO PLAYS

Confines His Trip to Arranging for the Production of His Native Works in London.

William A. Brady, the theatrical manager, accompanied by Mrs. Brady (Grace George,) returned to New York from London and Paris on Sunday. Mr. Brady made no play purchases abroad, but confined himself to arranging for the foreign production of a number of plays which have been shown here, among them "The Man Who Came Back," "Tom Moore Cooke," and "Little Women." Miss Hermione's Manchester company, also, will produce Laurence Eyre's play, "The Things That Count." Mary Nash probably will play her original role in "The Man Who Came Back."

In London Mr. Brady made George Bernard Shaw an offer to come to this country to lecture in the Fall, with the result that the latter is said to be giving it consideration.

Mr. Brady found American plays among the principal attractions in both London and Paris, and also found American motion pictures pre-eminent. About 75 per cent. of the pictures shown abroad, he declared, are American made, but England, France, and Italy are all about to enter more thoroughly into the making of pictures, and a determined effort will be made to place these films upon a proper footing in America. Mr. Brady formed a company in London to handle only foreign films.

In Paris Mr. Brady contracted with the Film d'Art Company to make six pictures in France with American stars.

Stops "Merry Widow" in Spanish.

The failure of the Spanish Opera Company to open last night at the Cort Theatre, presenting a Spanish version of "The Merry Widow," was announced to have been caused by an injunction obtained by Henry W. Savage, who controls the operetta for this country and Canada. Mr. Savage, it is declared, will revive the piece on a large scale in the near future.

General Electric Cuts Hours.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., June 18.—Reduction of working hours from fifty to forty-eight per week in the local plant of the General Electric Company has been ordered, effective Monday. The weekly wages will remain unchanged, and hour-basis men will receive an increase of 4 per cent. Night workers, now almost exclusively firemen and plant maintenance men, will work fifty hours for the present. The readjustment gives a longer noon recess, making possible more welfare work, including dancing and athletics.

DRAMA

Apropositions Follies.

ZIEGFELD FOLLIES OF 1918, a revue in two acts and twenty-three scenes. By Irving Berlin, Gene Buck, and Rennold Wolf; music by Irving Berlin, David Stamper, and Victor Herbert. At the New Amsterdam Theatre.

PRINCIPALS: Marilynn Miller, Eddie Cantor, Johnny Dooley, Ray Dooley, Gus Van, Joe Jackson, Bert Williams, Fanie Dowling, Fairbanks Twins, Janie Jones, Mary Hay, Phil Dwyer, Walter Pierce, Jack Lynch, Willie Newman, George LeMaire, Jean Steele, Lucille Lenard.

Even the Ziegfeld Follies have not escaped the mad, theomastic impulse to make a joke out of the crushing first of July. And even the Follies have failed to pull it off. Prohibition jocularities cascade upon us like Niagara; but, like Niagara, they are powerless to quench a real July thirst, or to excite any reaction but that of tragic despair. Our favorite of the many sorry attempts was the sorry book, forever impersonated by Phil Dwyer, than whom no dog was ever doggier. He rubbed his parched, though waterlogged, sides with limp paws, while he shed a stream of pearly tears down his asbestos cheeks. But if one laughed, as one and all of us did, it was because the spectacle was so intimately pathetic. Next to Dogey Dwyer came the song:

You won't need the wine to have a beautiful time,
When they still make those beautiful girls.

That had the Ziegfeld touch in it, and it struck the note of this, the thirteenth folly, which, in all respect except humor, belies the unlucky number, setting a new mark for its superlative kind. Backnax is down and out and the appeal of the 1918 Follies is purely a physique.

Woman was never more beautiful on the musical stage; and, as regards the Follies at least, woman was never more musical. The chorus is just one glorious syncopated ensemble after another, stunningly gowned than the next. There are many songs in the best manner of Irving Berlin and a ballet of real distinction composed by Victor Herbert.

Dolly Sisters and John Steele have real voices and use them with a touch of genuine artistry. "Tulip Time," with its urban setting of a Dutch garden, dykes and windmills, was a poetic delight. Wine may have departed from the interior vitality of Martin Luther, but Woman remains, and now, for the first time in these Follies, Song is added.

Marilyn Miller does most of the dancing, and does it incomparably well. In baby, bebuckled-down grace Heads with a witchcraft variety upon the acrobatic, Eddie Cantor was uproariously claimed by the audience and failed to delight his admirers. As a soda, "At the Osteopath's," in which he was the victim of the bone manipulator, has not been equalled in physical humor since the old days at Weber & Fields. A rarer delight lay in the many brilliant scenes by Joseph Urban, and in marvelous gowns and richly colored fabrics. Color has seldom been used with a happier combination of splendor and sobriety.

Two groups arranged by Ben Ali Haggin, one of which represented the ride of Lady Godiva, set a new mark in the stage work of an original and very talented American colorist. In spite of the prevailing lack of revival humor, the Follies of 1918 may be warranted to uphold their old supremacy of the Summer season.

RESUME WORK ON THEATRE

The Times Square and 42d Street to be Completed About Dec. 1.

Work was resumed yesterday on the two theatres which will adjoin the Selwyn Theatre on the east, in West Forty-second Street. These houses will be controlled by Selwyn & Co., and will be completed by about December 1. One will be known as the Times Square Theatre and the Forty-second Street Theatre. The first will have a capacity of 1,200, and the Forty-second Street will seat 1,100. The houses will have separate entrances on Forty-second Street, where they will have a frontage of 50 feet, and will run through to Forty-first Street. A portion of each theatre will be used on the street sides to insure soundproof auditoriums.

THE POPE'S BLESSING BROUGHT TO K. OF C.

Director Larkin of War Activities Knighted by His Holiness for His Good Work.

CARDINAL MERCIER COMING

American Soldiers, Resenting Prohibition, Now Have No Thought but to Get Home.

William P. Larkin of this city, overseas director of the Knights of Columbus war activities, who was recently made a Knight of St. Gregory by the Pope in recognition of his work in behalf of the American soldiers, returned yesterday on the French liner Espagne from a two months' survey of the K. of C. work abroad. He said he had visited K. of C. huts in France, England, Scotland, Italy, Belgium, Ireland, and occupied Germany, and he spoke enthusiastically of the efforts the secretaries were making to provide amusement for the soldiers, whose primary thought, he said, was home.

"In a few months the K. of C. workers and those of other organizations will begin to start home in large groups, as the size of the overseas army is rapidly being diminished," Mr. Larkin said. "Our secretaries are working under high pressure to provide amusement for the doughboys, who want more than anything else in the world to see the United States again. At Coblenz the K. of C. is operating a bakery with a capacity of 300,000 doughnuts a week for free distribution. This gives you an idea of the size of our work abroad.

Mr. Larkin declared that the American soldiers were returning imbued with a feeling that America should be uppermost in their minds. They felt that they had made a sacrifice which should not be in vain, and they would view askance any efforts to embroil their country in European affairs or destroy its form of government.

"The American soldier's cry is to get home as soon as possible," he said. "Every boy feels that we have paid our foreign debts and should contract no more. They are glad our historic debts have been cancelled. 'America first,' and 'America for Americans,' is their mottoes."

While in Rome, Mr. Larkin said he was granted an audience with Pope Benedict which lasted thirty-two minutes. His Holiness evinced a remarkable familiarity with the war activities of the K. of C., Mr. Larkin said, and spoke enthusiastically of its record of war service. Mr. Larkin said that the Pope, who received him in the throne room of the Vatican, sent his blessing to the American people and a special blessing to the Knights of Columbus of this city.

"One of the objects of my trip abroad was to complete the details of the visit of Cardinal Mercier to this country in September," Mr. Larkin went on. "With Overseas Commissioner Hearne, I visited his Eminence at the palace at Malines. We were received just after he had talked with the President of Brazil and the latter's staff, on a visit to Belgium. The Cardinal talked at great length of his projoced visit and said that the distance to this country was almost terrifying to a man of his age. He said he regarded the American people as the saviors of Europe. He told us definitely that he would come to America in September. While here he will be the gest of Cardinal Gibbons and Archbishop Hayes. He said he expected to remain in America six weeks before returning to Belgium."

Mr. Larkin said that in a sermon at a service held in the Cathedral at Antwerp on Memorial Day under the auspices of the K. of C., Cardinal Mercier paid public tribute to the part America played in the world war. Mr. Larkin said that as he was leaving the ground's of the Cardinal's palace he met Colonel Kromer, commandant of the American military forces in Antwerp, who told of a keen desire he had to meet the churchman. Mr. Larkin said he went back to the palace and asked if the Cardinal would be willing to receive the visitors. Although the Cardinal had been receiving callers for the greater part of the day, he sent back word that he was always pleased to receive Americans.

Discussing other features of his trip abroad, Mr. Larkin said he was impressed by the resentment shown by the American troops over the prohibition amendment. Characterizing the act as damnable, Mr. Larkin said the opinion generally prevailing among the soldiers was that interests back of prohibition had taken advantage of their absence on the battlefield to curtail their liberties here.

Mr. Larkin was met at the pier by his wife and mother and a delegation of local Knights of Columbus headed by Frank W. Smith and R. J. Kennedy.

Captain Marius Poirot, a veteran skipper of the French line who commanded the Normandie more than thirty years ago and who is now acting inspector of the French fleet, arrived on the steamer. He said the French line was hastening the completion of the Paris, a great passenger boat, which would be ready for service next year. Mrs. George W. Perkins and Major H. H. Harjes of the banking firm of Harjes, Morgan & Co., and his daughter, Hope D. Harjes, were among those who came on the Espagne. Major Harjes, who served as a liaison officer on the General Staff, said he had not been here since 1913. He declines to discuss the financial situation abroad.

MAKE PLEA FOR TARIFF.

Medical and Surgical Trades Ask Protection for Industry.

The American Medical Trade Association and the Wholesale Surgical Trade Association, which met yesterday at the Hotel Commodore, occupied themselves mainly with the discussion of the danger that the manufacture of surgical instruments in this country would be injured by the admission of German goods. A committee was named to take the question before Congress. Edward J. Sovatkin, who delivered the principal address, said:

"You have got to have tariff revision for your own protection. Don't let us be caught napping, as we were in 1913, when the Underwood bill found an impotent, disorganized industry and almost put it out of existence. We don't want to exclude foreign made goods. All that we should ask is a tariff that will represent, honestly and justly, the difference between American and foreign labor costs. We should see to it that this industry is given ample protection by a comprehensive 'anti-dumping law' against foreign trade expansion movements that seek only to kill the domestic trade."

Health Commissioner Copeland said that prior to the war 80 per cent. of the surgical supplies used in this country were imported from Germany and that this country would have been in a serious predicament if the American manufacturers had not come to the rescue and built up their industry to its present proportions. A committee to obtain protective legislation was appointed, consisting of William Gibson of Washington, D. C., G. A. Gussman of Philadelphia, and Robert E. Anderson of Richmond, Va.

Melville's Crew to Give a Ball.

The crew of the U. S. S. Melville will give a ball in the grand ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria next Friday night. STOP BURNING AUTOS.

Negotiations Started by French for Buying American Machines.

By CHARLES A. SELDEN.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, June 15.—The burning of damaged American Army automobiles at Romorantin because of the refusal of the French Government to allow these cars to be sold in this country to Frenchmen has ceased after the publicity given to the matter by The Matin.

It was announced today at the Ministry for the Liquidation of Stocks that satisfactory negotiations were going on with the American Army authorities by which this property may be bought.

19 STEEL SHIPS SOLD.

128,000 Tons for Americans at $210 to $225 a Ton.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Chairman Edward N. Hurley of the Shipping Board announced today that nineteen of the steel cargo carriers, aggregating 128,472 dead-weight tons, had been sold to shipping interests of recognized financial standing at prices ranging from $210 to $225 a deadweight ton. The names of the purchasers were not made public, but it was asserted that they represent American interests and that there was no question as to their ability to carry out the contracts. It is expected, it was stated, that further sales soon would be announced at approximately the same rates.

The sale, the Shipping Board announced, was the largest shipping deal of the kind put through in the history of the shipping industry. The terms accepted by the Shipping Board were a payment down of 25 per cent. of the sale price. Of the remainder, 7½ per cent. is to be paid during the next six months and 7½ per cent. during the following six months, thus completing 40 per cent. of the total payment within the first year. The remaining 60 per cent. is to be distributed over four years thereafter.

The sale is along the lines suggested by the majority report of the Shipping Board in its recommendations to Congress that legislation looking to the development of the merchant marine under private ownership and operation, with a system of Federal charters, be enacted. The high price obtained for the nineteen ships sold, the Shipping Board officials stated, showed the tremendous demand for tonnage at present and indicated that a satisfactory figure could be obtained for the better class of ships constructed by the Emergency Fleet Corporation. Chairman Hurley said that the price obtained for all of the nineteen ships represented a profit over the net cost of production.

It is understood that the principal purchasers are New York men of the highest financial standing. It is probable that the full details will become known within a few days.

What the attitude of Congress will be toward the sale of the cargo ships while legislation for a future shipping policy is being considered is problematical. The Shipping Board, under the present laws, however, has the authority to proceed. It is predicted that there will be a lively outcry from the forces who support a Government ownership policy.

The present intention of the Shipping Board, however, is to continue with the sales if terms as favorable as those announced today are possible. Disposal of a large number of the wooden ships also is expected within a short time. In connection with the sales announced today, the Shipping Board authorized this statement:

"Within the last two days the United States Shipping Board has effected the greatest sale of steel ships ever made in the history of the shipping industry. To seven firms of ship operators it has sold nineteen of its new steel vessels at prices ranging from $210 a deadweight ton up to $225 per deadweight ton. The vessels range from 5,530 tons to 9,600 tons. The amount of tonnage disposed of in this sale is 128,472. The purchase price aggregates $27,821,120.

"Thus the United States Government, which has taken rank as the leading shipbuilder of the world, is now the leading seller of ships. Moreover, it is selling them at prices which show the keen demand for steel tonnage."

SMITH BARS WOMEN'S PLEA.

Retaliation at Polls Threatened by Local Traction Workers.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, June 16.—Before the Legislature was convened in extraordinary session tonight, a delegation representing women workers who lost their jobs with the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company after the Lockwood Act, prohibiting the employment of women as conductors on street cars during night hours, took effect, called upon Governor Smith at the Executive Chamber and demanded that he send a message to the Legislature urging the immediate repeal of that law.

Governor Smith, who some time ago turned down a similar request from a large delegation of B. R. T. workers, told the women who called upon him this afternoon that his attitude had not changed, and that he was altogether unwilling to recommend or approve any amendment to the labor law which would permit the employment of women in an industry during night hours.

The women left in a very angry frame of mind, threatening retaliation at the polls, and declaring that they had been treated with scant courtesy by the Chief Executive.

As an alternative to the repeal of the law, the women asked him to have transferred from the State Industrial Commission to the Public Service Commission the administration of the Lockwood Act, which is part of the labor law.

This, the Governor said, could not be done without amendment of the law, and he was not prepared to recommend the change at this time.

The women also found fault with the Governor for not recommending to the Legislature the enactment of a law to make possible an increase in street car fares in New York City. The women said the traction companies needed and were entitled to higher fares.

Miss Amy Wren, a suffrage worker and lawyer of Brooklyn, presented the women's request.

Mrs. Mary Murray, President of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Women's Equal Opportunity League, and Mrs. Florence Bushnell, President of the Interborough Women's League for Equal Opportunity, were with Miss Wren.

NORTHCLIFFE HAILS PAPER.

Cables Wishes for Success to American Legion Weekly.

Lord Northcliffe, the English publisher, cabled greetings yesterday to The American Legion Weekly, the official organ of the American Legion, the first number of which will appear July 4. This is the message:

On occasion of first issue of the official organ of the American Legion, I should like to send a few words of greeting to wish it a successful career.

During the last two years I have had many opportunities of meeting all ranks of the American forces, and no one realizes more fully than I do the great part they played in achieving our common victory.

Those who are endeavoring to create misunderstandings between the American and British commonwealths assert that the gigantic American effort is not fully appreciated by us. I am glad to have this opportunity of stating that the British people realize to the full the great part America has played, both in her workshops, on the sea, in the air, and on the battlefield.

The cable was received by Eric Fisher Wood, Secretary of the Legion.

PROSECUTION OPENS AT WILKINS TRIAL

Sergt. Schneider Tells of When He Reached Scene of the Murder.

NEIGHBORS ON THE STAND

Miss Frances O'Neill Describes How Doctor Asked Her to Call the Police.

MINEOLA, L. I., June 16.—In his opening address today before the jury that is trying Dr. Walter Keene Wilkins for the murder of his wife, Julia, at their home in Long Beach on Feb. 27 last, District Attorney Charles R. Weeks declared that, while the evidence in the case was largely circumstantial, he would prove that the doctor had no affection for his wife, that he had married her for money, and that he was afraid of losing that money. The District Attorney also said that the prosecution was prepared to show that Dr. Wilkins's story about the attack by burglars, who, he declared, killed his wife, was false.

Several witnesses were called today, chief among them Police Sergeant Harry C. Schneider of the Long Beach Police, who described incidents when the police arrived at the scene of the murder. The doctor, who has maintained a stoical expression of calmness throughout the selection of the jury, for the first time today evinced signs of mental stress.

During the cross-examination of Sergeant Schneider the defense made a point in support of their contention that it was a robber who felled Mrs. Wilkins with a hammer, when the policeman admitted finding a pocketbook owned by Dr. Wilkins 100 yards back of the doctor's home the morning after the crime.

Sergeant Schneider testified that he met Dr. and Mrs. Wilkins the evening of the murder when they got off the train at Long Beach and spoke to them. At 9:53 that night, he said, he was called to the Wilkins home, where he went, accompanied by Patrolman Elbert White.

When he arrived, the witness continued, he found Dr. Winkins stooping over his wife, who was lying on the pavement.

"I asked him what the trouble was," said Sergeant Schneider, "and he replied that there were burglars in the house."

The policeman testified that the doctor was wearing a battered hat and that the lapel of his coat was torn. The witness identified the lead pipe, the hammer, the derby, and a hat belonging to Mrs. Wilkins, which have been included in the evidence. He found no cigar or cigarette stubs, the witness continued. He also stated that he examined the locks and windows of the house but found none broken. He testified that he tried to get some answer from Mrs. Wilkins as to the identity of her assailant but found she was unable to speak. He repeated the story the doctor told him that night of having been attacked by three robbers.

Patrolman White, who stayed all night in the house with the doctor after the crime, testified how the defendant spent a sleepless night, refusing to go to bed. He testified that the doctor had said a love-knot pin, a watch, and $40 or $50 in cash had been taken from him by the robbers. The doctor early the next morning broke down and cried for twenty minutes, the witness said. A dog of the doctor's that was badly hurt during the crime was in the room all night with the two men, according to the policeman.

Miss Frances O'Neill, who lived in the house next to the Wilkins home, told of how the doctor had come to her that night and asked her to call for the police. The last witness of the day was a Mrs. Rudolph Duisberg, who was in the same house as Miss O'Neill that night. She described the same instances as her friend. She also testified that she had known Dr. and Mrs. Wilkins for several years.

The trial will be continued tomorrow at 10 o'clock.

HERE WITH REPTILE CARGO.

Dr. and Mrs. Ditmars Bring Collection for Zoological Gardens.

Dr. Raymond Ditmars, curator of the Bronx Zoological Gardens, his wife, and a crew of snake and animal hunters, returned yesterday with 100 snakes, turtles, lizzards, and alligators, gathered in a month's hunt through the swamps of Georgia. The collection is to replenish and form a new exhibit which will be opened to the public on Sunday. Mrs. Ditmars captured the most rare and dangerous specimen of the snake family in this country that is included among the specimens brought back. The snake-hunting crew freely praised her skill and courage in this dangerous work.

Curator Ditmars said the snake captured by his wife is the most deadly specimen ever in captivity. The only name for it that he has yet found is "the Southern snake." It weighs twenty-five pounds and is six feet in length. Mrs. Ditmars pinned the head of the snake to the ground with the hunting fork and held it until some of the crew got other forks over the body, when its capture was comparatively easy for the experts.

The party made their hunt in the Great River swamps of Georgia and brought back their live cargo by boat from Jacksonville. For four years the Zoological Gardens got no additions to its snakes from abroad and scarcely any from America. Ditmars decided that a representative collection of American snakes would be of interest to New Yorkers, and he believes he has got it in the fourteen species he has captured, including the venomous rattler and copper, as well as the harmless garter and black snakes. The Pines Land Club of Georgia entertained the curator's party after their hunt.

277 TRAFFIC COURT CASES.

Many Speeders and Others in Sunday Roundup of Police.

Police activity in arresting Sunday speeders and other violators of the traffic rules brought 277 chauffeurs and drivers of other vehicles to courts in Manhattan and Brooklyn yesterday. Chief City Magistrate William McAdoo had to go to the assistance of Magistrate Frederick B. House at 300 Mulberry Street, the Manhattan Traffic Court, where 167 offenders were arraigned, 75 more than were arrested in the Sunday raids a week ago.

Harold Kords, 17 years old, a motor cyclist, of 315 West Thirteenth Street, was one of the few who did not escape with a fine. Policeman Manwaring said Kords was driving at thirty-five miles an hour on Riverside Drive. Kords was sent to the City Prison for five days. Yesterday was the third anniversary of the establishment of the Traffic Court.

In the Gates Avenue Court in Brooklyn Magistrate Reynolds had 110 traffic cases before him. Joseph Miller of Studoff Avenue and Albert Fenarolla of 861 Third Avenue paid fines of $25 each for speeding at twenty-seven miles an hour on Bushwick Avenue, near the home of Mayor Hylan.

Helen Casdon, 14 years old, 917 St. Mark's Avenue, was accused of driving without a license and with reckless driving. She pleaded not guilty and was paroled for a hearing tomorrow. She was accused of causing her automobile to collide with a street car. The automobile was wrecked. Harry Williams, who permitted the girl to operate the car and was sitting beside her, was paroled for a hearing at the same time on a charge of reckless driving.

RECEIVERS' NOTICES.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT, Southern District of New York.—TRUMBOUR WHITEHEAD BRASS & COPPER COMPANY, INC., Complainant, against MACHINERY & METALS SALES COMPANY, INC., OF NEW YORK, Defendant. To the Creditors of Machinery & Metals Sales Company, Inc., of New York, the above named defendant:

TAKE NOTICE that I have been appointed and have qualified as Receiver of the above named defendant, pursuant to a decree made by this Court on the 28th day of March, 1919, and that said decree contains a provision as follows:

"Decreed that all such creditors of the defendant be, and they hereby are directed to file with the Receiver, at such office or place of business as said Receiver may designate, and within ninety days from the date of this order, a duly sworn statement of all or any such claims as they, such creditors, may have or assert against the defendant, and such statement shall be verified before any officer authorized to administer oaths by the laws of the State where said claim is verified, and such statement of claim shall, where the same is evidenced by any written instrument, have such written instrument attached thereto."

You are required, pursuant to the said provision of said decree, to file your claim with the undersigned Receiver at the office of Messrs. Rosenberg & Ball, his counsel, No. 74 Broadway, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, within ninety days from the date of said decree, namely, on or before June 27, 1919.

TAKE NOTICE FURTHER that said decree contains a further provision as follows: "Decreed that all such creditors as shall fail to file their claims with said Receiver as herein provided, and within the time herein fixed, shall be debarred from any share of, in, or to, the properties of said defendant, and shall not be entitled to receive any share thereof, or of the proceeds thereof."

Dated, New York, March 28th, 1919.

Confidence

Those who believe in the strength of this nation and the future of American industry cannot fail to have confidence in the bonds and notes of corporations for whose products and services there is a steady and growing demand throughout the United States. The fact that these securities now yield returns that are possible only when conditions are unusual should prompt decisive action.

you will agree, would prove a very valuable asset to a company furnishing power generated by steam.

And yet how few realize that the hydro-electric company, by the use of water instead of steam, employs a generating force that supplies its own productive power; which is replenished by nature.

There is but the slightest dependence upon material and its cost, and the labor factor is, to a large degree, eliminated because of the few men required in the operation.

Circular T-66 describes the bonds of a hydro-electric property offered at prices to yield over 6½%.

Stock Prices Decline Sharply as Money Rates Go to New High Levels.

Yesterday's stock market was one of the weakest seen in some time. It was heavy at the outset, and as the day progressed it became worse, with losses running into very substantial figures for the highly speculative issues, and not light for the more seasoned securities. A large volume of over-Sunday selling orders, probably attracted by the deficit in Saturday's bank statement and sent in for execution at the opening, accounted for the poor start, and to this pressure was added the weight of the trading element, which sold with greater freedom and courage than has been in evidence at any time since the market became hesitant several days ago.

With the exception of a few short-lived rallies, the market continued to exhibit weakness throughout the day. By the time the call money market opened stock prices were off on the average a point or two. Then, when the renewal rate was posted at 10 per cent. for mixed collateral and fractionally higher for loans secured by all industrial collateral, professional selling drove the price level still further down. In the early afternoon there was a recovery of none too vigorous character, which merely served to interrupt the decline, and after it had run its brief course it was followed by another depression, which continued, with only occasional let-up, until the close of business.

Probably the most unsettling influence of the day was the action of the money market. All through last week, when some high rates were recorded, the renewal rate remained at 6 per cent. for regular loans and slightly higher for industrial money. Even on Friday, when the rate mounted to 15 per cent. in the late afternoon, the renewal rate was 6 per cent., and it is likely that the great bulk of Stock Exchange loans were negotiated at that figure. Yesterday, however, the rate was high at the start, and in the early afternoon it went to 12 per cent. and 15 per cent., respectively, for mixed and industrial loans. And, in addition to the high rate, and as a natural concomitant, the supply was rather smaller than usual. There was not exactly a paucity of money, for inquiry failed to reveal any cases of brokers being unable to supply their requirements. But there was not the usual abundance.

It is highly probable that the money market will right itself within a day or so. The very heavy payments due on account of taxes and the installments on the Victory Loan have brought about a condition which, by every rule, should be merely temporary, but, at the same time, there is not apt to be any large volume of demand loan money until after July 1 at the earliest. The July 1 maturities and other requirements are the heaviest end-month needs, with the possible exception of the Jan. 1 requirements, of any throughout the year, and it is natural for corporations and banks to put themselves in position to meet this demand. There should be and, doubtless, will be sufficient supply to attend to the legitimate needs of the stock market, but it is reasonably evident that there will not be enough to finance any further expansion at the present time. To Wall Street, where the market must always be either expanding or contracting, this means an unfavorable situation, and because of this the action of yesterday's stock market was entirely conventional.

In foreign exchange the rather sharp movement in favor of Paris was the feature of the day. In this respect, there may be significance in the fact that leading bankers yesterday met to discuss ways and means for extending aid to European countries. Of all the countries in need, it is believed that none will receive more prompt or more substantial aid than France.

Continued at Bottom of Columns Six and Seven.

Stock Prices Crumble.

The sharpest decline that the stock market has suffered since the present forward swing started came yesterday. Recessions were large throughout the list, the range being from 2 to as high as 10 points. It was a selling movement that had its foundation in the continuation of high money rates, and the liquidation went on steadily during the last hour, at which time many stocks made their low for the day. In the early morning there was a display of resistance, but it did not stand up long under the fire of selling orders. The heaviest declines were in those stocks which have had the greatest advance, Texas Company, for instance, moving off some 10 points. In some quarters the situation was characterized as an artificial decline, but most were disposed to consider that after all the Federal Reserve Board intended that its warning against speculation should be heeded.

Short Selling in Evidence.

While yesterday's break was inherently one caused by money conditions it was nevertheless true that the decline was hurried along by short sales when the market was least able to stand up under the test. It was selling of this sort that choked off the embryo rallies which started now and then, but which were too feeble to do much against the volume of sales. There has been a large element in the Street waiting its chance to drive quotations down, this being made up in part by those chronically addicted to the short side and also by bulls who have sold out and desire to get their stocks back. When it was apparent that the market was topheavy there were concerted attacks on prices throughout the list.

Liberty Bonds and the Break.

All of the liberty bond issues were heavy while the market was receding, the closing in each instance being below Saturday's level. It has been asserted that stock market transactions, to a limited degree, have for some time been financed by the putting up of liberty bonds as collateral. The volume, however, was not great and few bonds were sold. Yesterday, however, it is reported that more bonds than ever came into the market, these being pried from strong boxes to offer food to the margin clerk, the break having placed in jeopardy many accounts that heretofore were not using Liberty bonds at all. Brokers are somewhat indignant over the discrimination against loans on Liberty bonds drawn by the Federal Reserve Board. One of them said yesterday: "They told us to mortgage the future to buy the bonds, and now the cry is going up against using the bonds as collateral." This was characterized as quite unfair. Whatever may have been the intention, the high money rates it is believed have brought into the active market more liberty bonds than were ever there before.

Bargain Hunters.

Although the selling feature of yesterday's market was outstanding, there were nevertheless some bargain hunters around ready to snap up a stock which they considered had declined more than its fair share. Whether their judgment was correct remains for today to prove. What looked like a bargain late yesterday may appear as a high-priced issue if the decline is not halted. The belief of those who were buying stocks as bargains was that the money stringency would ease before the end of this week.

Favorite Issues Lack Support.

Some of the best performers on the bull side were apparently stocks without friends when it came to a matter of support in yesterday's session. Speculative leaders went toppling at a quick pace with comparatively wide swings between quotations. This was especially the case in some of the stocks which have moved up recently. There was little evidence of supporting orders, the pools either having withdrawn from certain issues, or decided that it was futile to fight such concerted selling.

Bethlehem Steel B.

There has been much speculation recently as to the reason for the pronounced gains which have been made in the Bethlehem issues. Only a few days ago there was a scramble for Bethlehem stock in the low nineties. Yesterday it sagged decidedly and found only moderate buying on the way down. The decline, considering that the stock was ex-dividend, was not so large comparatively, but apparently the glamor of the rumor that the Bethlehem company had contracts to rebuild several large French cities had lost its magnetism in a falling market.

Marine Vote No Surprise.

The vote by stockholders of the International Mercantile Marine Company at the special meeting in Hoboken yesterday, which was overwhelmingly against the proposed sale of the company's British-registered tonnage to a British syndicate, was no surprise to Wall Street generally. More than two weeks ago there was severe criticism of the deal in conservative banking circles, when it became known that it would probably have to be followed by a liquidation of the company without regard for valuable good-will and pier leases both here and abroad. Shortly thereafter, it became known that a fair percentage of the Marine directorate did not favor any deal involving dissolution, and the formation of an opposition Proxy Committee followed. On Friday of last week this committee announced the receipt of sufficient proxies to defeat the sale, so the vote against it yesterday had been fairly well anticipated.

Traffic Decrease Large.

The latest available statistics from the Railroad Administration show that the shrinkage in traffic handled by the railroads in the first four months of 1919, compared with 1918 figures, was in the neighborhood of 10 or 12 per cent. The actual decrease in net ton miles was the heavy factor and this, coupled with the increase in expenses which the carriers have had to bear tell the story of why there was a $250,000,000 deficit at the end of April. Under date of June 12 Director General Hines estimated that the decrease in all traffic in April alone was 16 per cent.

Relief Over Wire Situation.

While the action of the Brokers' Division of the Eastern Division of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union, which failed to join the wire strike, had been discounted by the financial district, the fact that the men had decided to stick to their keys was a relief to Wall Street generally, in view of the uncertain character of the stock market and the money situation. It has been reported that the Brokers' Division of the C. T. U. would appeal to the New York Stock Exchange to intercede between the companies and the men, but it is considered doubtful that the big board will enter a situation with which it is only in touch because of the service received from the telegraph companies.

Rates and Living Expenses.

Exponents of an immediate increase in railway freight rates agree with Director General Hines that such an increase would be immediately followed by an advance in the cost of living, but they also point out that a precedent has been established. They say that in 1918 Dun's index number stood at 224.8, and by October of last year had increased to 233.2, but on May 1, 1919, stood at 222.1, or below the figures which ruled before the increased rates went into effect. This, they argue, would mean that another increase now would be followed by higher prices which would be temporary, and should follow the downward trend in prices, up to May 1 of this year.

Tobacco Stocks Bought.

Although the majority of the tobacco shares sold off more than three points in yesterday's market, this recession was pointed to by close observers as not large, in view of the recent advances which most of the issues have enjoyed. While other favorites in the industrial list were recording greater losses, the selling of the tobacco stocks met with resistance, and while some of the last prices of the day were also the lows, about half of the active issues made fractional recoveries before the session ended. Supporting buying was reported from time to time.

The Values Behind Oil Securities

The production of oil is as legitimate as any other line of business when properly conducted, but unfortunately the present prosperity of the industry has been used to float many illegitimate oil enterprises.

The determination of the worth of oil properties rests on many complex factors, such as life of old wells, rate of settled production of new wells, development possibilities of acreage, pipe-line facilities, etc.

We invite correspondence with those desiring careful examinations and appraisals of oil properties.

NAME FINANCIERS TO AID EUROPE

Leading Bankers on New Committee to Draft Plan for Reconstruction.

FORM IN OTHER CITIES

Nation-Wide Program to be Adopted for Sending Goods and Capital Abroad.

H. P. Davison, following a conference at the offices of J. P. Morgan & Co. yesterday afternoon, announced the personnel of the bankers' committee which is to represent New York financial interests in drafting a comprehensive plan for extending aid to European countries and furnishing markets for American producers. The committee consists of J. P. Morgan, Chairman; James S. Alexander, President of the National Bank of Commerce; James S. Brown of Brown Brothers & Co.; Allen Forbes of Harris, Forbes & Co.; Alvin W. Krech, President of the Equitable Trust Company; Charles H. Sabin, President of the Guaranty Trust Company; Jacob H. Schiff of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.; James Stillman, President of the National City Bank; Seward Prosser, President of the Bankers' Trust Company, and Albert H. Wiggin, Chairman of the Chase National Bank.

The conference at the Morgan offices was attended by many of the leading bankers in New York. In addition to the members of the committee, those who were present included W. E. Bull of Harris, Forbes & Co., Walter E. Frew of the Corn Exchange Bank, Otto H. Kahn of Kuhn, Loeb & Co, William Woodward of the Hanover National Bank, Ernest Stauffen of the Liberty National Bank, Jackson Reynolds of the First National Bank, E. V. R. Thayer of the Chase National Bank, Harold Stanley of the Guaranty Trust Company, Stephen Baker of the Bank of the Manhattan Company, Charles S. Sargent, Jr., of Bidder, Peabody & Co., and J. H. Fulton of the National City Bank. Invitations had been extended to several other bankers, who were unable to attend.

To Confer Again.

After the conference Mr. Davison said that the meeting was informal and that other conferences would be held in the near future. He said it was planned to have all the banking strength of the district represented. The committee is understood to supersede the Committee of Five appointed two weeks ago, the personnel of which was never made public.

Similar committees will be formed in other cities throughout the country. The Chicago Clearing House has already appointed a committee and an informal movement has been started in Boston. Mr. Davison expects to visit several cities for the purppses of explaining the situation and aiding in the organization work.

These committees in the several sections, it was learned elsewhere, will probably send delegations to a conference with the Advisory Committee of the Federal Reserve Board, to be held in the near future.

Mr. Davison yesterday reiterated his statement of two weeks ago that steps will be taken to organize the industrial and agricultural interests of the country along corresponding lines. He said that at yesterday's meeting there was a unanimity of opinion that co-ordination of the highest order would be necessary if the work of rehabilitation is to be handled successfully.

To Send Capital Abroad.

It will be essential, he explained, to export considerable quantities of goods abroad, and it will also be necessary and highly desirable to export a certain amount of capital. In the latter case, he went on to say, there would be countries abroad which would have to have money, as well as merchandise, but finance themselves at home and to finance their purchases in countries other than the United States, and he thought the United States would be doing a very beneficial work for Europe and also helping its own position in international finance by meeting this demand.

Speaking of the possible ways in which material aid could be extended, Mr. Davison said he thought it entirely probable that a great corporation would be formed. This corporation, he pointed out, could extend credits to European countries and would finance itself at home by issuing its own debentures to the American investing public.

These debentures would be secured by the collateral deposited with the corporation by the nations seeking credits and he expressed the belief that they could be made very attractive investment media. However, he laid stress on the fact that while such a program had been under discussion, it does not necessarily follow that it will be followed. The whole plan is merely in the formative state and is entirely tentative and subject to change as the program develops. The committee, Mr. Davison said, is not bound to any one plan and is open to suggestions and hopes to receive many from all over the country.

There will be no attempt at restricting Europe's demands, although it is hoped that European countries will organize committees to co-ordinate their needs so as to systematize the work of assistance which the United States is willing to undertake. Mr. Davison said he believed that this would be done at a very early date. In fact, he said he had already heard of the organization of some European committees but was not familiar with their powers or scope.

COTTON TAKES DROP, BUT MOUNTS AGAIN

Prices Fall from 60 to 80 Points from Saturday's Closing Level.

JANUARY DOWN TO 29.70

Final Hour Sees Market Two-Sided and Irregular — Export Clearances Fair.

The weakness in the stock market and the situation in money, added to disappointing cables from Liverpool, sent the cotton market down sharply at the start and held it there for a time. At the extreme low for the morning, which was also the low for the day, prices were down 60 to 80 points from Saturady's closing and at one time in the forenoon the market was pretty well demoralized. On this break July sold down to 30.60 while January, the greatest sufferer of all, broke to 29.70, against a closing of 30.50 on Saturday.

At the bottom the market turned strong, almost as strongly as on some of the big days, and within a short time virtually all of the early losses had been recovered and in some options slight gains on the day were recorded. The turn was due to advices from the South which indicated heavy rains over Sunday in many parts of Texas and elsewhere in the belt, and to some favorable reports from the dry goods centres. This latter received even more weight from the bulls than the crop news, which was not all bullish as fair weather was indicated by the Government forecast, despite a storm warning for the Carolinas.

In the final hour the market became two-sided and more or less irregular, with prices easing off from the high figures of the recovery. At the close the market was down 12 points for July and 25 to 32 points for the new crop months.

Export clearances again made a fair showing. The over-Sunday figures showed 31,943 bales to have gone forward, which is considerably less than moved over the previous week end, but is on a good average for last week's substantial movement.

Yesterday's quotations follow:

Denominations: $1,000 and $500 bonds in all maturities; $100 bonds in 1931 maturity only.

We briefly summarize this loan from a letter of Mr. A. C. McCord, President, on file in our office:

Borrowing Corporation: The McCord Manufacturing Co., founded eleven years ago, is one of the largest exclusive manufacturers of automobile radiators, together with gaskets and lubricators for steam and gas engines. Among the automobiles and trucks using the McCord radiator are the Marmon, Cole, Premier, Chalmers, Dodge, Mercer, Studebaker, Hupp, Dort and Maxwell cars, and the General Motors, White, National, International Harvester, Kissel, Federal and Nash Trucks. The company has enjoyed a steady and rapid growth and is a prosperous going concern, in excellent standing in the trade, and enjoying the highest credit rating, AAA1. Its plants, located at Detroit and Wyandotte, Mich., are the largest of their kind in the United States. The purpose of the issue is to retire current indebtedness and provide additional working capital. The ownership and management of the company remain in the hands of the experienced, progressive and able men who have built up this business from its inception.

Assets and Working Capital: After applying the proceeds of this issue, the company will show total assets of $3,865,154.75, with a net working capital of $1,630,950.10.

Earnings: The average net earnings of the company during the last five years, after deducting Federal Taxes, averaged $430,468.55, nearly five times the greatest annual interest charge of these bonds.

Quick Assets: The trust mortgage requires the company to maintain quick assets of twice the amount of current liabilities, exclusive of these bonds, the excess in no case to be less than $1,000,000.

Income Tax: The borrowing corporation covenants to pay 4% Federal Income Taxes.

Denominations: $1,000 and $500 bonds in all maturities; $100 bonds in 1929 maturity only.

We briefly summarize this loan from a letter of Mr. A. C. McCord, President, on file in our office:

Borrowing Corporation: McCord & Company, established twenty-two years ago, is engaged in the manufacture of journal boxes for the equipment of railroad cars, and cast steel, pressed steel and forged steel parts for automobile trucks and tractors. Its plant is located at West Pullman, Ill., one of the principal industrial suburbs of Chicago, with the best of shipping facilities. The land, buildings and equipment of the company mortgaged to secure these bonds are valued at $945,935.59. The purpose of the issue is to retire current indebtedness and provide additional working capital.

Quick Assets: After applying the proceeds of these bonds, the company will show quick assets of $720,799.23. The trust mortgage requires the company to maintain at all times quick assets equal to double the amount of the current liabilities, exclusive of these bonds, the excess in no case to be less than $300,000.

Guarantors: The bonds are unconditionally guaranteed by endorsement both as to principal and interest by Messrs. A. C. McCord, President, and D. W. McCord, a director, both of this company and of the McCord Manufacturing Co. of Detroit.

Earnings: Earnings of the company for the year ending March 31, 1919, after deducting Federal Taxes, were more than twelve times the greatest annual interest charge of these bonds.

Income Tax: The borrowing corporation covenants to pay 4% Federal Income Taxes.

MONTHLY DEPOSITS:* In accordance with the usual provisions of the Straus Plan, in both of the above bond issues monthly deposits of principal and interest are required so as to provide systematically for the payment of both principal and interest in cash on the days when due and to make certain that the profits as received each month are applied to the payment of the bonds. Each monthly deposit is one-sixth of the total amount of principal and interest coming due during the year.

We have purchased the above issues with our own funds after careful investigation and recommend them as thoroughly safeguarded investments.

CALL MONEY REACHES HIGHEST IN 7 YEARS

Victory Loan and Income Tax Payments Boost Rates to Unusual Figures.

HOPE FOR RELIEF SOON

Rise Is Accompanied by Heavy Drop on Stock Market — Many Small Investors Hit.

Call money yesterday went to new high figures for the present movement, and to the highest seen in more than seven years.

Last week, when the money market was advancing into new high records, the advances were always scored in the late afternoon, after the bulk of brokers' requirements had been attended to. Throughout last week, as for several years past, the renewal rate did not go above 6 per cent. Yesterday call money for mixed collateral opened and renewed at 10 per cent., the highest renewal rate since 1912, while loans on all industrial collateral renewed at 10½ per cent. In the afternoon these rates advanced to 12 per cent. and 15 per cent., respectively.

That the high rates are temporary and will be eliminated within a day or so was generally agreed among bankers. The big Victory Loan payments of last week, added to the income and other internal revenue paments due yesterday, supplied the cause for the advance. By today or tomorrow, it is believed, much of this money will have returned to the banks, and the situation will have been relieved. Nevertheless, bankers pointed out that the corporation needs for the end of the month will be so heavy as to tend to force bankers to curtail any further expansion in loans until after July 1.

One source of aid to local banks is expected to eventuate by the redemption of three series of Treasury certificates. One issue of tax certificates, totaling $337,516,000, of which $179,803,000 were disposed of in the New York Federal Reserve district, fell due yesterday. Another issue of $392,2981,000, of which $165,622,000 was taken by New York, matures today, as does an issue of regular Treasury certificates of indebtedness amounting to $600,101,500, of which $203,809,000 was sold in New York. This money, or a good part of it, will stay with the banks and should increase available funds.

The switch of funds from private hands to the Government also may help the situation. The Government, after securing the payments, can do one of two things. It can deposit the money to its own account, in which case the banks will be greatly helped, as they are not requred to carry reserve against Government deposits, which are secured in other ways; or it may pay it out to individuals and firms having claims against the Government, in which case the money will be redeposited in the banks.

Bankers admit that a certain amount of shifting of funds from one section of the country to another may result. Against this there are the facilities now available for the speedy transfer of funds from one Federal Reserve district to another, which, it is expected, will be used, especially if rates here show signs of remaining firm.

Rumors were current in some quarters that member banks had rediscounted heavily at the Reserve Bank, following the realization of the deficit in the Clearing House Banks, Saturday. Nothing definite on this subject could be ascertained, but some well informed bankers said they believed rediscounting had not been unusually large.

An accumulation of out-of-town selling orders, coupled with uneasiness, which developed over the week end, as the result of the forward movement in the money market, rsulted in a sharp break at yesterday's opening of the stock market. Prices eased off rapidly, steadied somewhat about midday, and in the closing hours of the session resumed their downward swing, with many last prices the lowest.

As the result of a sequence of three weak markets, margin calls were numerous, and many small investors who were not firmly intrenched were wiped out. Losses ranged from 1 to more than 10 points, with only a few issues moving to higher ground.

As was the case Friday and Saturday, the recent market favorites bore the brunt of the selling wave and suffered the heaviest losses, but the decline was more general than any experienced so far this year, and the average loss was greater. Some of the issues gave evidence of being supported, but these were small in number, and while there was a fair amount of buying for investment, it was not sufficient to be more than a temporary check.

The following table gives the high, low, and last prices of some active issues in yesterday's market, along with the net change from the Saturday closing quotations:

*Selling ex dividend.

Professional selling served further to depress the general list, and as the downward movement carried some stocks to lower levels, "stop orders" in large volume gave fresh impetus to the movement. While the high money rates were blamed for the decline, it was admitted that stop orders and short selling aided.

To Insure Its Employes.

The American Woolen Company yesterday inaugurated a system of group life insurance to include every employe in the manufacturing and selling departments. The policy in each case will be free to the employe, the company paying all of the expenses and premiums. Those in the employ of the company for less than a year will receive a $750 policy. The largest policy is for $1,500, this applying to those who have been employed four years and a half or more.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The firm of Jelke, Hood & Bolles has been formed by Charles C. Hood, Frederick D. Bolles, and Ferdinand F. Jelke, which succeeds the firm of Hood & Bolles, of which Mr. Jelke was a special partner and Mr. Hood and Mr. Bolles were general partners.

The Irving National Bank is issuing a booklet entitled "Foreign Trade Thought of 1918." The book is made up of excerpts from addresses delivered at the national foreign trade convention recently held at Chicago.

The dividend of 5 per cent. which the Directors of the State Bank recently voted was semi-annual, and not quarterly, as was erroneously stated by a member of the State Bank's staff.

Harris, Forbes & Co. has prepared a table giving a brief outline of the ten outstanding forms of Liberty Loan issues and their tax exemptions, with a comparison of the interest return from tax exempt and taxable sources.

Ambrie & Co. has just issued an analysis of the wealth, debt, revenue, and commerce of Argentina.

Benjamin K. Sharretts and Joseph B. Ford have formed a partnership under the firm name of Sharretts & Ford, to carry on a general investment business.

PROPERTIES

Invincible Oil Corporation through its subsidiaries will be interested in approximately 83,643 acres of fee and leasehold oil lands in Ranger, Humble, Blue Ridge and other fields in Texas and Louisiana, and in the Walters and Cement and other fields in Oklahoma; in one refinery now in operation having a capacity of 3,000 barrels daily with 70 miles of gathering pipe lines, 200,000 barrels steel storage capacity, 160 tank cars and retail distributing facilities in a tidewater export station at New Orleans with steel storage capacity of 100,000 barrels, and in another refinery with 3,000 barrels capacity nearing completion at Fort Worth, Texas.

PRODUCTION

At present approximately 3,500 barrels of oil per day with 16 additional wells drilling, of which 12 wells are on proven Ranger acreage and 18 more wells are to be drilled during the next 12 months.

WORKING CAPITAL

The Corporation will start with at least $2,000,000 cash working capital, in addition to net quick assets of the subsidiary companies, to be used for the drilling of wells and other corporate needs.

The above data is summarized from and subject to a letter from E. R. Ratcliff, who will be the President of the Invincible Oil Corporation.

Under the terms by which the stock of the Invincible Oil Company and the 400,000 shares of stock of Gladstone Oil & Refining Company will be acquired and transferred to the Invincible Oil Corporation, the undersigned and their associates will receive certain shares of stock of Invincible Oil Corporation, in addition to the shares now being offered which they will be entitled to retain.

All legal matters in connection with the incorporation of Invincible Oil Corporation and the issue of its stock are subject to the approval of Messrs. Strasbourger & Schallek, of New York, and Messrs. Loring, Coolidge & Noble, of Boston.

The titles to the principal properties of the Invincible Oil Company and the Gladstone Oil & Refining Company have been examined by Messrs. Baker, Botts, Parker & Garwood, of Houston, Texas, and by Messrs. Ledbetter, Stuart & Bell, of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

All of the stock having been applied for in advance, this notice appears as a matter of record only.

$200,000,000 PAID IN INCOME TAXES

Money Flows in a Golden Flood Into Office of Internal Revenue Collector.

CHECKS IN HUGE HEAPS

Second Quarterly Instalments Make Heaviest Day in History of Custom House.

When the payment of the second quarterly instalment of the Federal income tax was ended at midnight, Collector William H. Edwards, in charge of the Second District, the financial quarter, said it had been the heaviest day the Custom House ever had seen. He predicted another today, since great pouches of mail were reported awaiting delivery at the post office.

"According to an official of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, about $200,000,000 in income taxes was paid yesterday by New Yorkers. Mr. Edwards refused to deny or confirm this figure. Many of the largest individual and corporate taxpayers delayed payments to the last minute. Throughout the day the corridors of the Custom House were thronged with crowds of small payees.

"Any check or money order that gets into the mail by midnight," said Mr. Edwards, "will be considered within the time allotted for the payment. Most large corporations waited until the last minute, to take advantage of accruing interest."

The Collector said his records disclosed that most men whose taxes for the year were not more than $25 paid in full before March 15. He called attention to the fact that the tax law does not allow the ten days' period of grace for payments that obtained in 1918. He said that when the records are checked up all who have not paid will be proceeded against.

Indications last night were that in Brooklyn more money would be paid in than during the entire previous year. All day a big force of cashiers and experts under Collector Bertram Gardner were kept busy. It was estimated that the day's payments were in excess of $25,000,000, bringing the sum paid by residents of Brooklyn, Long Island, and Staten Island up to about $60,000,000. Mr. Gardner thought his district included 200,000 taxpayers, most of whom paid before noon.

At one time during the evening checks and money orders flowed in so fast that Deputy Collector Berker had them piled on the floors in heaps. Some of the small piles reached higher than the desk tops, and represented millions of dollars.

LOCUSTS RUIN FRUIT TREES.

Nassau County Farmers Alarmed Over Ravages of Pest.

MINEOLA, N. Y., June 16.—Farmers in the vicinity of Farmingdale, Bethpage, and Massapequa, Nassau County, are growing more apprehensive daily because of the ravages of the seventeen-year locusts, which after defoliating the hard wood trees of the neighborhood, have turned their attention to the fruit trees, which they have attacked.

Samples of the eggs taken from pear trees, apple trees, peach trees, and grape vines show that the eggs of the locusts are laid by the thousands in careful rows.

Henry Lange, a farmer of Farmingdale, reported today that the locusts had swarmed upon his farm and were feeding on his fruit trees, shade trees, and grape vines. Another farmer, Samuel Garrett of Bethpage, several miles away, reports that the locusts are destroying the leaves of the trees on his premises.

Old residents of this section of Long Island declare that seventeen years ago when the locusts made their appearance they were not nearly so numerous. While they recalled the pest then, they stated that the visitation did not result in so much damage.

Royal Dutch Oil Dividend.

Cables from London yesterday announced that the Royal Dutch Petroleum Company had declared a dividend of 25 per cent., making a total of 40 per cent. for the year. The present dividend, payable June 30, it was stated, was the final one for the year. Based on the present rate of exchange the dividend which shareholders in this country will receive will be about $3.25 a share. In the proposed capital increase from 230,000,000 to 400,000,000 guilders it is planned to give stockholders the right to subscribe to one new share at par—$13.50—for every four shares of old stock held.

Liberty Bond Service

It has been our experience in talking with many large holders of Liberty Bonds that the substantial majority of them are not securing the greatest possible tax exemption and net interest return on their bonds.

The present heavy Federal Income Taxes make it important for all large holders of Liberty Bonds to be sure that the distribution of their holdings among the various issues is such as to give them the maximum tax exemption permitted under the law, with the resulting best net interest return.

We shall be glad to suggest, without charge, any changes which may be advisable in the holdings of those who care to submit their cases to us by letter or personal call.

Our table giving a brief outline of the ten outstanding forms of Liberty Loan issues and their tax exemptions, with a comparison of the interest return from tax exempt and taxable sources, will be supplied on request. Ask for Circular A-866.

MERCANTILE MARINE VOTES TO KEEP SHIPS

Company Stockholders Reject British Offer of £27,000,000 by 530,072 to 78,521.

ENDS LONG NEGOTIATIONS

Franklin Sees Bright Future for American Shipping If Necessary Laws Are Passed.

By an overwhelming vote the stockholders of the International Mercantile Marine Company yesterday turned down the offer of £27,000,000 made by a British syndicate for the fleet and assets of the company's British subsidiaries. Later in the day President P. A. S. Franklin announced that the company would continue to do a regular shipping business, and that the future development of its American flag fleet would depend upon the shipping policy adopted by the United States Government. The vote on the sale stood 78,521 preferred and common shares for, and 530,072 preferred and common shares against.

The meeting itself, which was held in Hoboken, was a more or less formal affair, the offer by the British syndicate being presented in the form of a motion by John Parry, counsel for the company, and a member of the Board of Directors. It was seconded, and a stockholder asked Mr. Franklin, who had the chair, if Ashurst, Morris, Crisp & Co., representing the syndicate, were brokers.

"No; lawyers," was the answer.

"Are they getting any commission out of this sale?" was the question.

"Not from us," replied the Chairman.

"From any one?" was the query.

"Not that we know of," was the reply.

No further questions were asked, and the motion was voted upon. John W. Platten of the Platten-Scott Proxy Committee voting a majority of the stock against the sale. When the vote was read there was some applause, and Mr. Platten made the following statement:

Directors in Full Accord.

"An impression has been created that there is a controversy between the Directors in connection with this matter. However, it is simply a question of an honest difference of opinion as to whether the company should sell its British properties, and does not in any way involve the management of the company. In fact, it can be said without reservation that we are in full accord with the business policy of the company and have great confidence in the future under the present management."

Before the meeting there was a hearing before Federal Judge Hand on the application of John O'Connor, a stockholder, for an injunction to restrain the company from submitting the proposed sale to a vote of stockholders. This was denied when it was brought out that the Platten-Scott committee held enough proxies to defeat the sale.

In the late afternoon P. A. S. Franklin said that, inasmuch as the stockholders had settled the matter of the sale, the present management would continue in the business of shipping. He said:

"We are a steamship concern. If Congress, as has been reported, passes the laws necessary for shipping, there is a great future ahead for the American shipping industry."

In reply to a question, he said that the future development of the International Mercantile Marine Fleet under the American flag would depend entirely upon what action the Government took on the adoption of a shipping policy.

Ends Long Negotiations.

The killing of the motion to accept the offer of the British syndicate ends a long period of uncertainty regarding the future of this concern. In November, 1918, the first reports were received that an offer had been made for the company's boats by foreign interests, and the Marine shares responded immediately with sharp advances on the New York Stock Exchange.

The negotiations surrounding the sale continued, and toward the close of the year were about to develop into an actual deal, when the United States Shipping Board stepped in and asked that the matter be held up. Later the Shipping Board announced that it would take over the tonnage at the same price offered by the British syndicate.

Then, for a period of more than three months, both the common and preferred stocks were subject to a great deal of speculation, and moved over a wide range on a series of unconfirmed Wall Street rumors.

When the Shipping Board notified the company that it was not able to take over the deal, the British syndicate renewed its offer and the Directors decided to let the stockholders settle the matter once and for all.

Just how much the preferred and common stocks were affected by these conflicting developments is shown in their high and low prices for the current year. The common sold as high as 58 3-8 on May 19, and the high price for the preferred was 128½ on May 28. On Jan. 31 the common touched its low for the year at 21¼, and the preferred made its low on Feb. 10 at 92¾.

South American Stock Taken.

The offering of 300,000 shares of common stock of the South American Gold and Platinum Company, it was announced yesterday by Lewisohn Brothers, had been greatly oversubscribed. Trading in the stock will begin on the Curb tomorrow, according to present plans. Later, application will be made to list the stock on the New York Stock Exchange.

No Man's Land of Business is the hazardous ground between the normal credit losses and the excessive, incredible losses that may occur in the most unexpected places. American Credit Insurance makes this danger zone safe for trading. Because our Unlimited Bond guarantees, on the first day of any fiscal year, against abnormal, unforeseen credit losses for the ensuing year. What's more, it often reduces your normal losses as well.

The Electric Service Supplies Co., Philadelphia, Pa., write: "We acknowledge receipt of your draft for $12,699.33, in a very satisfactory payment of the excess losses we sustained under your policy which has just expired, and which we have renewed with you. We commend, most heartily, your treatment of the entire transaction, and thank you for your promptness. Although we have carried your Bond for a number of years, this is the first time we have sustained any losses of a material amount."

At the above prices, these bonds will yield from 6¼ to over 6½ per cent, depending upon maturity.

The bonds are secured by first mortgage upon the properties of the Abitibi Power & Paper Company, Ltd., including its timber leases and water power rights on the Abitibi River in Ontario, together with pulp and paper mills having a present annual capacity in newsprint, sulphite pulp and groundwood pulp of 120,000 tons.

The net assets of the Company behind these bonds are conservatively valued at nearly $14,000,000, or over three times the total amount of first mortgage bonds outstanding.

NET EARNINGS

The net earnings from the commencement of operations up to December 31, 1918, available for interest, depreciation, etc., have been as follows:

1915	$ 226,545.40
1916	939,872.63
1917	1,323,001.32
1918	1,643,653.68

Maximum interest charge on all first mortgage bonds outstanding, $263,970.00.

This property is well situated for economical operations and its product is being used by some of the largest newspapers in the United States. The management is in conservative hands and the financial condition of the Company is excellent.

Our recommendation of this investment is based upon an intimate knowledge of the Company's property and operations during its entire history.

Proceeds of these bonds are to be used in refunding an equal amount of 6% notes maturing August 1, 1919, so that the Company's interest charges will not be increased. The holders of these notes may turn them in now at par and interest in exchange for bonds at the above prices.

Having already sold a large part of this issue, we offer the balance in a fair range of maturities to net from 6¼ to over 6½ per cent.

(Successor to Boston Mexican Petroleum Co.)

owns a 60% interest in the Harmon Well, which has a capacity of 50,000 barrels of oil a day. A large part of its output has been sold at fifteen cents a barrel, which should show a net profit of seven cents a barrel. If the total output be sold at the same figure earnings of between two and three hundred per cent. should be shown.

There will be outstanding when the absorption of the Boston Mexican Petroleum Co., Boston Mexican Holding Co., and Boston Mexican Leasing Co. is completed approximately 500,000 ordinary and 550,000 8% first lien convertible shares of one dollar each par value.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Tight money adversely dominated the market during the entire session on the Consolidated Stock Exchange yesterday. The rate for all industrials, which early was at 10 per cent, and was advanced to 15 per cent. late in the afternoon, added considerably to the volume of liquidation which characterized the trading throughout the day. Reports that American troops had crossed the Rio Grande and attacked a Villista force at Juarez added to the bearish activities. The specialties suffered most, the declines in them running all the way from 1 to close to 10 points.

BUSINESS WORLD

Advanced Ideas in Millinery.

Duvetyn is one of the biggest factors in the advance Fall models that are now being shown in local millinery circles. Manufacturers are unanimous in the belief that it is going to exceed the popularity it enjoyed last year. Beaver strip is also well thought of in some parts of the trade, as there is no material for hats that is more flattering to a woman than beaver. Embroidered effects are being shown for the new season in a large way. Heavy wool, silk floss, chenille, and gold thread embroideries are used extensively. Hackle is a big factor, especially the domestic pasted variety of this plumage. Pasted feather breasts are being used in combination with heavy fabrics to good advantage. Flower trims are seen in heavily padded wool and chenille effects. Chenille grapes also are used as trimmings.

White Silk Hose Very Scarce.

One of the outstanding features in present business in high-grade silk hose, both for men and women, is the marked scarcity of white socks and stockings. The demand for these goods has developed remarkably in the last couple of weeks, and appears to be increasing steadily. Deliveries are from three to four weeks behind, and buyers who put down orders some time ago are now complaining because they did not specify larger quantities. Those who did not see the writing on the wall, however, are in an even worse fix. A second feature is the continued call for African brown hose, both for immediate and Fall delivery, in spite of predictions that this shade would fall by the wayside because of its enforced vogue during the conservation days of the war. Its continued popularity is said to be due to the fact that it harmonizes with practically any shade of brown in a shoe.

Public Demand for Fine Stuff.

While the demands of the shopping public are generally for better grades of merchandise than were formerly called for, it was said yesterday by an executive of a well-known local store that there are four classes of goods that can't come too fine to suit the consumer. These, he said, were shoes, hosiery, furniture and rugs. In all of these lines, he asserted, his store was showing a steady drop in sales of the cheaper merchandise and a corresponding increase in the call for the better things. Cheap furniture, so far as that store is concerned, is entirely out of the running. The same is largely true of rugs. As a sample of what the public is buying he displayed an Oriental mat about the size of a man's handkerchief which, he said, was selling freely at $15. Before the war the store in question did not sell as many of them as at present, despite the fact that they were then retailed around $2.50.

London Wool Auctions Resumed.

LONDON, June 16.—The wool auction sales were resumed today with offerings amounting to 9,300 bales. The demand was strong. Special combings were occasionally dearer, but prices generally were unchanged.

DENIES THE MAYOR PROTECTED HANLON

Commissioner Whalen Says Ferries Superintendent Will Be Tried on Hirschfield Charges.

NOT IGNORED BY DELANEY

Day Challenges Truth of Statements Made by Commissioner of Accounts.

Charges that Mayor Hylan ignored recommendations made by David Hirschfield, Commissioner of Accounts, against Lawrence Hanlon, Superintendent of Ferries in the Department of Piand and Structures, were answered yesterday by Grover Whalen, the Commissioner of Plant and Structures, to the effect that the Superintendent would be placed on trial as a person unfit to hold office. The Mayor refused comment, except to say he had turned Mr. Hirschfield's report, when he received it last Winter, to John H. Delaney, then Commissioner of Plant and Structures.

In the same report, Mr. Hirschfield made inferential statements against Commissioner of Public Markets Jonathan C. Day, which Mr. Day in a letter to the Mayor, yesterday, said were untrue.

Commissioner Whalen, discussing the Hanlon situation, said his predecessor in office had had prepared the charges to be filed against the Superintendent of Ferries.

"When I was appointed," he said, "the Mayor particularly called my attention to the matter. I took it up with Mr. Delaney, who advised me that after careful investigation he had reached the conclusion that the report of the Commissioner of Accounts warranted placing the Superintendent of Ferries on charges. Upon taking office I found in Mr. Delaney's files charges already preferred against Hanlon. These he no doubt would have pushed, but for his appointment as Commissioner of Rapid Transit Construction."

The matter concerning Commissioner Day brought to the attention of Mayor Hylan in a letter, Saturday, from the Citizens' Union, asking why the recommendations of Mr. Hirschfield with regard to Mr. Day had not been followed. The Citizens' Union suggested that if Mr. Hirschfield's charges in connection with the Plaza Community Club and the Mutual Finance and Exchange Market, Inc., male presumably against Mr. Day, were true, he should be dismissed, and, if unfounded, the Commissioner of Accounts has demonstrated his unfitness to hold office.

Mr. Hirschfield characterized the Plaza Community Club and the Mutual Finance and Exchange Market, Inc., as "attractively phrased corporations" designed solely to "make personal profits for the incorporators." The records show, the Citizens' Union pointed out, that Commissioner Day was an incorporator and a director in both organizations. In his letter to the Mayor, Day said:

Text of Day's Letter.

My Dear Mr. Hylan: In the press of this morning there is a partial report of the contents of a letter supposed to have been addressed to your Honor by the Citizens' Union, in which reference is made to the Commissioner of Public Markets. Since reading the report in the press, in which quotations were made, supposedly from a published report of the Commissioner of Accounts, I have been able to procure a copy of that report in which reference is made to the Plaza Community Club, Inc.

There are such glaring inconsistencies in the printed report of the Commissioner of Accounts that I have been constrained to write you to ask that a full and complete investigation be made by your Honor of the activities of the Plaza Community Club, Inc., and the Mutual Finance and Exchange Market Inc., and the relation of these two organizations to the Department of Public Markets. The Commissioner of Accounts for some reason never availed himself of my offer to testify, but he did proceed and take testimony from various persons.

Since he did not seem to care to have any testimony from the Commissioner of Public Markets, I addressed to him a communication, a copy of which I am herewith submitting. At that time I enclosed an affidavit to your Honor, setting forth the facts in the case, and I am glad to know that you have first hand knowledge that was material in the investigation. I attach hereto copy of that affidavit.

In absolute frankness I must say that some things in the Commissioner of Accounts' report are to me beyond understanding. For instance he says:

"The Plaza Community Club, Inc., and the Mutual Finance and Exchange Market, Inc., were formed ostensibly to encourage city government for the purpose of reducing the cost of food supplies to the consumers in the City of New York."

There is not one thing in any of the printed literature or in the minutes, or any other way connected with the Plaza Community Club, Inc., or the Mutual Finance and Exchange Market, Inc., that would lead to that. They in any way proposed co-operation with the City of New York. I made full examination of all these papers, and

To quote further:

"The head of the particular department was prevented from violating a law by the Commissioner of Accounts."

There is no vestige of truth in this statement. The Commissioner of Accounts, of course, I assume that the Commissioner of Accounts is anxious to show how his good offices have kept all the rest of the Mayor's Commissioners out of trouble, but it is quite beyond me how the Commissioner of Accounts could decide that the Commissioner of Markets had intended to violate the law, never having heard the Commissioner of Markets testify concerning the case at all.

With assurances, Sir, of every co-operation from myself in helping you to ascertain the facts in the matter above referred to, I am

Yours very truly,
(Signed) JONATHAN C. DAY.

The Mayor refused to comment on the situation with regard to Commissioner Day.

B. R. T. Orders 250 New Steel Cars.

According to papers submitted yesterday to Supreme Court Justice Benedict in Brooklyn by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, that corporation has at last complied with the long-standing order of the Public Service Commission to put into operation on its surface lines 250 new steel cars. The documents filed yesterday represented a return on a peremptory writ of mandamus sued out by the commission on Dec. 20, 1918. It was required by the commission that the new cars be ready for service by Nov. 11 1918, and the court ordered that the return of the writ be presented by June 30. Filing the return ahead of the time fixed, the company stated that orders for the required number of cars had been given to the builders, and that it was expected that the delivery of the new vehicles to the company would be completed by Oct. 15.

BUSINESS WORLD

Advanced Ideas in Millinery.

Duvetyn is one of the biggest factors in the advance Fall models that are now being shown in local millinery circles. Manufacturers are unanimous in the belief that it is going to exceed the popularity it enjoyed last year. Beaver strip is also well thought of in some parts of the trade, as there is no material for hats that is more flattering to a woman than beaver. Embroidered effects are being shown for the new season in a large way. Heavy wool, silk floss, chenille, and gold thread embroideries are used extensively. Hackle is a big factor, especially the domestic pasted variety of this plumage. Pasted feather breasts are being used in combination with heavy fabrics to good advantage. Flower trims are seen in heavily padded wool and chenille effects. Chenille grapes also are used as trimmings.

White Silk Hose Very Scarce.

One of the outstanding features in present business in high-grade silk hose, both for men and women, is the marked scarcity of white socks and stockings. The demand for these goods has developed remarkably in the last couple of weeks, and appears to be increasing steadily. Deliveries are from three to four weeks behind, and buyers who put down orders some time ago are now complaining because they did not specify larger quantities. Those who did not see the writing on the wall, however, are in an even worse fix. A second feature is the continued call for African brown hose, both for immediate and Fall delivery, in spite of predictions that this shade would fall by the wayside because of its enforced vogue during the conservation days of the war. Its continued popularity is said to be due to the fact that it harmonizes with practically any shade of brown in a shoe.

Public Demand for Fine Stuff.

While the demands of the shopping public are generally for better grades of merchandise than were formerly called for, it was said yesterday by an executive of a well-known local store that there are four classes of goods that can't come too fine to suit the consumer. These, he said, were shoes, hosiery, furniture and rugs. In all of these lines, he asserted, his store was showing a steady drop in sales of the cheaper merchandise and a corresponding increase in the call for the better things. Cheap furniture, so far as that store is concerned, is entirely out of the running. The same is largely true of rugs. As a sample of what the public is buying he displayed an Oriental mat about the size of a man's handkerchief which, he said, was selling freely at $15. Before the war the store in question did not sell as many of them as at present, despite the fact that they were then retailed around $2.50.

London Wool Auctions Resumed.

LONDON, June 16.—The wool auction sales were resumed today with offerings amounting to 9,300 bales. The demand was strong. Special combings were occasionally dearer, but prices generally were unchanged.

DENIES THE MAYOR PROTECTED HANLON

Commissioner Whalen Says Ferries Superintendent Will Be Tried on Hirschfield Charges.

NOT IGNORED BY DELANEY

Day Challenges Truth of Statements Made by Commissioner of Accounts.

Charges that Mayor Hylan ignored recommendations made by David Hirschfield, Commissioner of Accounts, against Lawrence Hanlon, Superintendent of Ferries in the Department of Plant and Structures, were answered yesterday by Grover Whalen, the Commissioner of Plant and Structures, to the effect that the Superintendent would be placed on trial as a person unfit to hold office. The Mayor refused comment, except to say he had turned Mr. Hirschfield's report, when he received it last Winter, to John H. Delaney, then Commissioner of Plant and Structures.

In the same report Mr. Hirschfield made inferential statements against Commissioner of Public Markets Jonathan C. Day, which Mr. Day in a letter to the Mayor, yesterday, said were untrue.

Commissioner Whalen, discussing the Hanlon situation, said his predecessor in office had had prepared the charges to be filed against the Superintendent of Ferries.

"When I was appointed," he said, "the Mayor particularly called my attention to the matter. I took it up with Mr. Delaney who advised me that after careful investigation he had reached the conclusion that the report of the Commissioner of Accounts warranted placing the Superintendent of Ferries on charges. Upon taking office I found in Mr. Delaney's files charges already preferred against Hanlon. These he no doubt would have pushed, but for his appointment as Commissioner of Rapid Transit Construction."

The matter concerning Commissioner Day brought to the attention of Mayor Hylan in a letter, Saturday, from the Citizens' Union, asking why the recommendations of Mr. Hirschfield with regard to Mr. Day had not been followed. The Citizens' Union suggested that if Mr. Hirschfield's charges in connection with the Plaza Community Club and the Mutual Finance and Exchange Market, Inc., made presumably against Mr. Day, were true, he should be dismissed, and, if unfounded, "the Commissioner of Accounts has demonstrated his unfitness to hold office."

Mr. Hirschfield characterized the Plaza Community Club and the Mutual Finance and Exchange Market, Inc., as "attractively phrased corporations" designed solely to "make personal profits for the incorporators." The records show, the Citizens' Union pointed out, that Commissioner Day was an incorporator and a director in both organizations. In his letter to the Mayor, Day said:

Text of Day's Letter.

My Dear Mr. Hylan: In the press of this morning there is a partial report of the contents of a letter supposed to have been addressed to your Honor by the Citizen's Union, in which reference is made to the Commissioner of Public Markets. Since reading the report in the press, in which quotations were made, supposedly from a published report of the Commissioner of Accounts, I have been able to procure a copy of that report in which reference is made to the Plaza Community Club, Inc.

There are such glaring inconsistencies in the printed report of the Commissioner of Accounts that I have been constrained to write you to ask that a full and complete investigation be made by your Honor of my relation to the Plaza Community Club, Inc., and the Mutual Finance and Exchange Market, Inc., and the relation of these two organizations to the Department of Public Markets. I will call your attention to a letter addressed by your Honor to me as Commissioner of Markets on Sept. 5, 1918, a copy of which I herewith enclose.

At the time that letter of Sept. 5 arrived I was out of the office, but on Sept. 9 I answered your communication. Am also enclosing copy of that letter. Immediately thereafter I called up the Commissioner of Accounts on the telephone and offered him any information I had regarding the Plaza Community Club, Inc., and the Mutual Finance and Exchange Market, Inc., and the relation of these two organizations to the Department of Public Markets. The Commissioner of Accounts for some reason never availed himself of my offer, nor, so far as I know, did he did proceed and take testimony from various persons.

Since you did not seem to care to have any statement from the Commissioner of Public Markets in Sept. 20 I addressed a letter to you myself, a copy of which I am herewith submitting. At that time I enclosed an affidavit to your Honor setting forth the facts in the case, because I was anxious that you have first hand knowledge that was material in the matter. I attach hereto copy of that affidavit.

To my utter frankness I must say that the statement in the Commissioner of Accounts' report are to me beyond understanding. For instance, he says:

"The Plaza Community Club, Inc., and the Mutual Finance and Exchange Market, Inc., were formed ostensibly to co-operate with the city government for the purpose of reducing the cost of food and other necessities to the consumers in the City of New York."

Of course, nothing in any of the printed literature, or in the minutes, or anywhere else connected with the Plaza Community Club, Inc., or the Mutual Finance and Exchange Market, Inc., that would warrant the statement that they in any way proposed to co-operate with the City of New York. A full examination of all these papers

The [illegible] of the particular department was to [illegible] violating a law by the use of [illegible] property for private purposes."

There is not a vestige of truth in this statement of the Commissioner of Accounts. I assume that the Commissioner of Accounts is anxious to show how his good offices have kept all the rest of the Mayor's Commissioners out of trouble, but it is quite beyond me how the Commissioner of Accounts could decide that the Commissioner of Markets had intended to violate the law, never having heard the Commissioner of Markets [illegible] concerning the case at all.

With assurances, Sir, of every co-operation from myself in helping you to ascertain the facts in the matter above referred to, I am,

Yours very truly,
(Signed) JONATHAN C. DAY.

The Mayor refused to comment on the situation with regard to Commissioner Day.

B. R. T. Orders 250 New Steel Cars.

According to papers submitted yesterday to Supreme Court Justice Benedict in Brooklyn by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, that corporation has at last complied with the long-standing order of the Public Service Commission to put into operation on its surface lines 250 new steel cars. The documents filed yesterday represented a return on a peremptory writ of mandamus sued out by the commission on Dec. 20, 1918. It was required by the commission that the new cars be ready for service by Nov. 11, 1919, and the court ordered that the return of the writ be presented by June 30. Filing the return ahead of the time fixed, the company stated that orders for the required number of cars had been given to the builders, and that it was expected that the delivery of the new vehicles to the company would be completed by Oct. 15.

BOY SCOUT DRIVE GETS NEW IMPETUS

Liberal Response Greets Efforts to Fill City's Quota of 325,000 Members.

ENTHUSIASM AT RALLIES

McAdoo Confident Extension of Campaign Will See Goal Attained Easily.

Campaign committees yesterday started with renewed vigor the second part of the campaign in this city to enlist 325,000 adult associate members and to raise $1,000,000 for the Boy Scouts of America. William G. McAdoo, Chairman of the General Citizens' Committee for the entire country, and William H. Edwards, Chairman for this city, declared that reports from the borough Chairmen last night convinced them that the goal will have been reached on Wednesday night, when the drive ends.

Mr. McAdoo said that preliminary reports from all parts of the country were that every community had exceeded its quota of new members and subscriptions, and that this city was the only community that had to extend the campaign for four days to fill up its quotas. Some other communities in this State continued their campaigns to obtain additional results, but it was not necessary to make their quotas.

Both Mr. McAdoo and Mr. Edwards said that there were many reasons why this city had not made up its quota in the first week's drive. The size of the city has made it impossible for canvassers to solicit everybody in a week, and many of the workers have been so swamped that they have not been able to send in their reports. Thousands of persons who would aid the campaign had left the city when workers reached their homes or offices, Mr. McAdoo said, and their absence has affected the total of subscriptions and doubled the task of the campaign committees. All the borough Chairmen were confident yesterday that these difficulties would be overcome in the four days' extension of the campaign.

Mr. Edwards announced that he had received a letter of support from Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, inclosing a check and an offer to the campaign committees to use the political organization in the drive in any way. It is expected that many of the district organizations may aid in the work in the next two days of the campaign.

A second message in support of the campaign was received by Chairman Edwards yesterday from Governor Smith, who had previously expressed the hope that the city would not allow the campaign to fail here. He expressed confidence in the success of the campaign and of the training program of the Boy Scouts organization.

Renewed interest was shown by the public yesterday in the noon meetings on the steps of the Sub-Treasury, and Martin Vogel, the Assistant Treasurer of the United States, and other citizens who are assisting in the meetings there expressed satisfaction with the response to the appeals of the speakers. One of the speakers yesterday was Senator E. J. Dowling.

"If you would reduce crime, if you would reduce and, in fact, do away with the need for reform schools and juvenile courts, saving the city many millions of dollars, get behind the Boy Scouts' organization and give it the impetus it so justly merits," said Senator Dowling. "It seems hard to believe that when a great duty like this presents itself the citizens of this city would fail to respond to it. What are you doing for the welfare of your boys aside from sending them to school? Do you think for one moment that your duty ends there? Do you consider their future welfare? Do you know that the future welfare of the nation rests squarely upon the coming generations now on the threshold of manhood?

"And knowing all these things can you remain deaf to the Boy Scout appeal? Having the interests of our boyhood at heart is not only a patriotic and a public duty but your welfare is also concerned in that your success in life depends largely upon the proper upbringing of the nation's youth. The boy question is one of the biggest problems of the nation, but it cannot subsist and grow upon that alone. It takes money to do things for the boys. The Boy Scouts are doing all they can, but it is not enough. It cannot do more because of the lack of funds."

Chairman Edwards announced last night that most of the theatres had agreed to admit the Boy Scouts solicitors for the remainder of the campaign and it is expected that this branch of the drive will aid greatly. More than $50,000 in cash was received yesterday in letters by the campaign committee, and about $20,000 was subscribed at a luncheon at the Bankers' Club. Some of the subscriptions were: August Belmont, $500; John D. Ryan, $500; Judge Martin D. Manton, $200; Mrs. W. Butterworth, $100; D. A. Schulte, $100; Mrs. Phelps, $100; Anonymous, $100; Mrs. H. G. Cornell, $100; Fox Brothers & Co., $100; Frederic J. Middlebrook, $50; United States Industrial Alcohol Company, $50; L. F. Dommerich & Co., $500, and M. Friedsam, $500.

DAVID LAMAR TO APPEAL.

With H. B. Martin, He Was Convicted of Conspiring with Germans.

The United States Circuit Court, which had affirmed the conviction of David Lamar, sometimes known as "The Wolf of Wall Street," and Henry B. Martin of Labor's Peace Council, on an indictment charging them with conspiring with German agents to obstruct the shipments of munitions to Europe, yesterday gave the convicted men permission to appeal to the United States Supreme Court. The application was made by Elijah N. Zoline, and the order was signed by Judge Rogers.

It was shown at the trial that the defendants sought to discourage the manufacture of munitions by causing strikes in the various munitions plants. The men were each sentenced to serve one year in prison. Mr. Zoline, in his application for permission to carry the appeal to the United States Supreme Court, argued that the laws which the defendants had been accused of violating did not apply to foreign commerce at the time and do not apply to it now. Lamar's bail was fixed at $25,000, pending the appeal, and Martin's at $5,000.

CAR HITS WAGON; 2 KILLED.

Shipyard Workers in Panic Following Collision on Brooklyn Street.

Two men were killed and three others injured yesterday morning as the result of a collision between a loaded ice wagon and a crowded trolley car at Third Avenue and Baltic Street, Brooklyn. The accident happened during the rush hour of traffic, and most of the passengers on the car were men bound for work in the South Brooklyn shipyards.

The car, one of the Third Avenue line, had stopped at Baltic Street and started up again when the ice wagon, driven by Charles Benson of 298 Butler Street, attempted to cross its path. Benson, seeing that a collision was threatened, tried to turn to one side. A number of the men who were riding on the running board of the open car were swept off by contact with the wagon. One man was thrown under the wheels of the truck and another under those of the car. Both were killed. The excitement caused eight women passengers on the car to faint, and two ambulance surgeons who were called were kept busy for a time.

From papers and other means of identification found upon them the dead men were found to have been Theodore McDermott of 40 Granite Street, Brooklyn, a shipyard worker, and Salvatore Anastasio of 1,670 Dean Street, Brooklyn.
